ilure today of the first attempted y-load airplane flight from New ork to Paris.
The monoplane "Trade Wind," rced to turn back and landed toight at the Hampton Roads naval onday morning over the same ute as originally planned.

Telescope Lens Broken.

The mishap that resulted in the ilure of the flight occurred before
e monoplane had left the water
New York at 5:50 a. m. Because the heavy load, Lieut. MacLaren id, it was necessary to rock the ane before it would rise. In so ing the sextant, which was on e plane, and the lens in the teleope was broken.

He did not discover the mishap

500 FARMERS IMPOVERISHED BY DROUTH STORM ARKANSAS TOWN, DEMANDING FOOD

Red Cross Authorizes $2.75 for Each Family and Citizen's Committee Distributes Supplies in England, Ark.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ENGLAND, Ark., Jan. 3.—Last summer's drouth had an aftermath that threatened violence here late today when approximately 500 farmers, many of them armed, marched on the business section of this little town of 2000 inhabitants in the home county of United States Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

Crying for food for themselves and their families, the men announced their intention to take it from the stores by force unless it were provided from some source without cost.

Residents of England sought to quiet the mob, and Attorney George E. Morris undertook to address the farmers when they swarmed into the main streets. He cautioned them against committing depredations which they would later regret, and assured them that none would starve.

His speech was frequently interrupted by those in the crowd with shouts of "We want food" or "Give us food for our starving families."

"We are not beggars," another pushed forward to explain. "We are willing to work for 50 cents a day, but we're not going to starve and we're not going to let our families starve.

"Give us work and we'll not come back."

Red Cross Gives Aid.

Persons living at England recognized many of those in the mob as one-time prosperous farmers, whose crops were ruined by the drouth. While Morris talked to the invaders, merchants of the town conferred and decided to notify Red Cross authorities. The Red Cross offices in St. Louis suggested issuance of $2.75 worth of food for each family, and C. E. Hankins, local Red Cross chairman, immediately began carrying out the instructions.

Approximately 350 had been furnished with food early tonight by the merchants here. By 9 p. m. all the farmers had been supplied with food and merchants reported the situation quiet.

Members of the relief committee in charge of the food distribution said that the Red Cross had arranged previously to care for only the local sufferers, assigning to the Lonoke committee the job of looking after farm families. Lonoke is the county seat of Lonoke County in which England is situated. Several hundred farmers are being fed daily at Lonoke.

Fears Another Outbreak.

Morris said he considered the situation "very serious," adding that the men would storm the town again as soon as their present food supplies were exhausted. He said virtually all the merchants here were broke, as a result of the drouth situation in the countryside.

Financial difficulties were further increased a short time ago by the closing of the Citizens' Bank & Trust Co.

Morris criticised the authorities for turning away several in today's crowd because they were warmly clothed.

"These men may have been as hungry as the rest," he said. "I know many men who until last year were fairly prosperous farmers, but they have been reduced to poverty in these last few months.

"Albert Walls (Lonoke County Red Cross Chairman) told me he recognized some of them as imposters and I don't doubt some were."

Merchants Hard Pressed, Also.

Merchants of England are not in condition to assist the distressed families to a great extent, as most of the stores operate on a credit business, providing food and clothing to hundreds of farmers in anticipation of payment after crops are harvested. There were no crops of any consequence last fall however, and the farmers' accounts are still unpaid. A bank failure here recently has added to the troubles of local business men.

Red Cross Reports Aiding 100,000 Arkansans Within Month.

The Red Cross has given assistance to 100,000 persons in Arkansas in recent weeks and expects to be required to help 250,000 within a month, William M. Baxter Jr., Midwest Director, said last night, adding that the organization had been called upon to aid in relieving unprecedented destitution in Southeast Missouri

Eighty Red Cross chapters in Arkansas have spent $43,000 of their own funds and provided $37,000 worth of clothing while $115,000 of the funds of the national organization have been spent by the local chapters assisted by 18 field workers. Four Missouri chapters have required small sums to supplement their resources.

NEW YORK ORDER AGAINST BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Secretary of State Says "Cease Operations, Get Detective License or Face Prosecution."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Secretary of State today ordered the Better Business Bureau, Inc., to cease operations, take out a detective's license or face criminal prosecution. The order, sent to J. C. Auchinloss, president of the Bureau, was based on an opinion written by Hamilton Ward, former Attorney-General, as one of the final acts of his administration. The Bureau, an organization of financial and commercial tradesmen, had been operating 19 years, ostensibly to prevent stock frauds and deceptive advertising.

Harry W. Riehl, general manager of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, said last night that the various Better Business Bureaus of the country were connected only as members of the Affiliated Better Business Bureaus of the United States and Canada. Each bureau is organized under the laws of the state in which it operates.

NEW METROPOLITAN SINGER TAKES 16 CURTAIN CALLS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The greatest ovationo accorded to any new singer at the Metropolitan Opera House since the first appearance there of Marion Talley several years ago was given this afternoon to Mme. Lily Pons, making her debut in the name part of "Lucia di Lammermoor."

The young French coloratura soprano, who is 26 years old, created a mild sensation when she took the final note in the mad scene at high "F," a full tone higher than even experienced sopranos usually sing it.

She was brought to the United States by Maria Guy, formerly a famous star with the Hammerstein Opera Company, who found her singing with a small opera company in the south of France. She took 16 curtain calls after the famous mad scene.

NATIONAL FUNERAL IN FRANCE FOR MARSHAL JOFFRE

Burial of Hero of Marne Likely to Be in Modest Chapel on Grounds of His Country Home.

BODY TO LIE IN STATE TWO DAYS

Church and State to Unite in Services Wednesday at the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The world, no less than France, tonight mourns the passing of Marshal Joseph Jacques Joffre, savior of Paris in 1914, who died at 8:23 a. m. after a long fight with arteritis.

His country is preparing a great national funeral in memory of one of the most illustrious soldiers of her history.

Marshal Joffre — the "Papa" Joffre of the French poilu and of all his countrymen, passed away peacefully the day before his seventy-ninth birthday. He had been seriously ill for more than a fortnight and on Dec. 19 suffered the amputation of his left leg, which had become infected with gangrene.

Given up by his physicians as lost, he fought with amazing vitality, and, although he had been unconscious most of the time for nearly a week before his death, he was able to arouse himself at times to smile at a friend or murmur a few words to Mme. Joffre, who throughout his illness, remained almost constantly at his bedside.

Burial at Country Home Likely.

Definite plans for the funeral have not yet been made known, but if Joffre's wishes are respected he will lie, not like his illustrious comrade, Ferdinand Foch, under the great dome of the Hotel des Invalides, but in a modest chapel in the grounds of his country home at Louveciennes, high on a plateau overlooking the winding valley of the Seine.

Joffre's visit to the tomb of Washington in 1917, friends disclosed tonight, inspired him with the desire for a simple burial on his own homestead, "La Chataignerie," Chestnut Grove, which he and Mme. Joffre had built and laid out.

Col. Jean Fabry, the Marshal's aid during the World War and his closest friend, said that the old soldier had often expressed the wish that Chestnut Grove would become another Mount Vernon, and that there his collections of military relics, gathered in more than 40 years of military life, might be preserved.

Body to Lie in State.

Tonight his body lay in the bare, white-plastered room in which he died at the Hospital of St. Jean-de-Dieu, clad in a white dolman and the golden-buttoned uniform of the French colonial armies. Tomorrow it will be transported to the chapel of the Ecole Militaire—old French army school—where on Monday and Tuesday it will lie in state so that poilu and General, the average man of France and her statesmen may file past it and give a final salute to the kindly leader that all loved.

The chapel in which the body will lie in state was built at the end of the reign of Louis XV. At the entrance to the altar the Marshal's body, clothed in the uniform of a Marshal of France, will be placed on a camp bed. The tri-color will be draped over the coffin, leaving the face visible. At the foot of the bed will be placed Joffre's baton as a Marshal, the insignia of the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor, a warrior's breastplate and other emblems.

Great torches of the empire will be placed at the four corners of the couch, and there four Generals of the French army will stand guard day and night until the funeral. Here and there will hang flags of regiments which served in the great war.

Late tonight streams of people filed past the hospital in the Rue Oudinot to show their respect to the dead hero. Many were there even after the building was closed for the night.

The funeral will be Wednesday. As they did for Foch, church and state will unite in ceremony and pageantry to publicly express the nation's grief. The service will be held in the Cathedral of Notre Dame and then through streets lined by men who fought under him the body of Joffre will be taken to the Invalides, where it will be temporarily placed in the chapel that shelters Napoleon, Foch and a

OIL PRODUCERS' RELIEF PROPOSAL REACHES IMPASSE

Small Independent Owners in Oklahoma and Kansas Face Prospect of Forced Shutdown.

ABOUT 20,000 WELLS TO BE AFFECTED

Refusal of Prairie Oil & Gas Co. to Join Plan for Aid Given as Cause of Dilemma.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Jan. 3.—Attempts to organize relief for small independent oil producers of Northeastern Oklahoma and Southeastern Kansas appeared to have reached an impasse tonight. Operators of little wells in old settled areas of the two states were confronted with the prospect of being forced to shut down as a result of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co.'s refusal to join in a plan of relief proposed by a committee representing the major purchasers of mid-continent crude oil.

In several areas the shutdown already has begun. Lease workers have been thrown out of employment due to the stopping of pumps. Shutdown of small wells, few of which were producing more than one barrel daily, means destruction of the property, operators said. Stopping of the pumps, they said, would cause salt water to drown out the oil.

The situation was created by the Prairie company's withdrawal as a general purchaser of crude oil. The committee which sought to provide relief had proposed that the Prairie continue to run production from the wells cut off from market, and that other companies purchase an equal amoun of oil from the Prairie's own wells.

Committee Holds Meeting.

After a meeting of the committee here today, at which the Prairie's rejection of the proposa was considered, E. B. Reeser, president of the American Petroleum Institute, who appointed the committee at the request of Secretary Wilbur, head of the Federal Oil Conservation Board, said:

"The committee of purchasers considered the answer of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co. and unanimously decided that it does not meet the issue, and that the committee's proposal as outlined in its letter to relieve the entire situation still stands open.

"The situation will receive further consideration at the meeting of the American Petroleum Institute's directors to be held in New York next Thursday."

The production actually remaining in "distress" has been estimated by the committee at 14,500 barrels daily. Nearly 40,000 barrels daily, from 15,000 wells in Oklahoma and 12,000 wells in Kansas, were affected by the Prairie's withdrawal, R. M. Young, chairman of the committee, said, but outlets have since been arranged for approximately two-thirds of this production.

Producers' Meeting Proposed.

E. B. Lawson, chairman of a committee representing Oklahoma producers, announced his committee would meet here Monday to consider the situation and probably call a mass meeting of the producers.

Lawson estimated 20,000 wells would be shut down, if relief is not provided. He said 10,000 of the wells were old "stripper" producers in Washington, Nowata and Rogers Counties, Oklahoma, and an equal number in Kansas areas.

In giving notification of the Prairie's refusal to enter into the plan, W. S. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the company's board of directors, said that agreement of his company to the proposition would "inevitably entail a loss to us or our customers and inure to the benefit of our competitors or theirs."

Prairie Co. Announces It Can't Buy "Distress Oil."

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Jan. 3.—The Prairie Oil and Gas Co. today announced its inability to purchase "distress oil" from small independent producers of Oklahoma and Kansas.

W. S. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the board of the Prairie company, explained the company's position in a letter to E. B. Reeser, president of the American Petroleum Institute.

Fitzpatrick said the companies represented on the relief committee included the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the Gulf Co., the Texas Co., the Dutch Shell, the Tidal Co., the Pure Oil Co. and the Empire Co.

At the present time Fitzpatrick

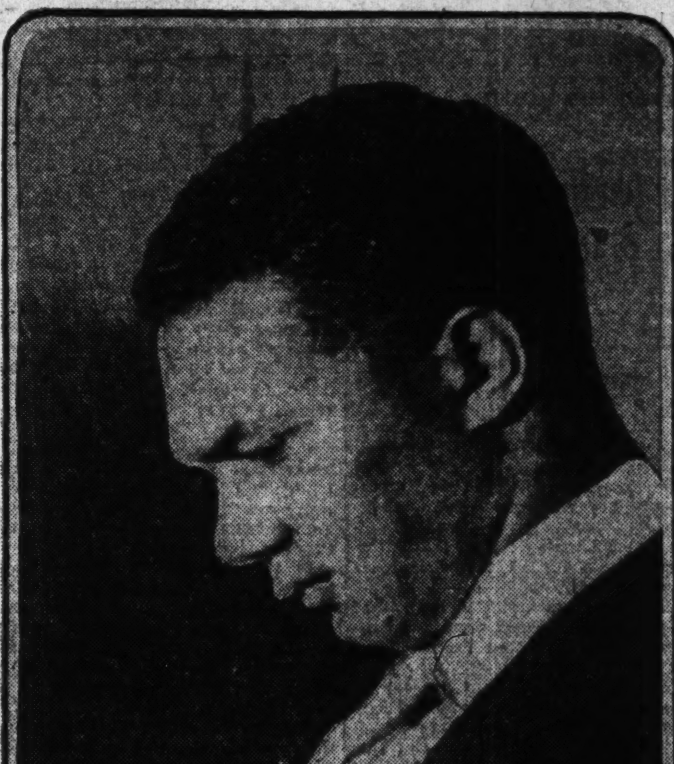
FAMILY OF ORTHWEIN BOY TO ASSIST IN PROSECUTION OF KIDNAPER, CASTLEN SAYS

Wanted for Kidnaping Orthwein Boy



CHARLES Y. ABERNATHY.

WHO was described by his father to Sheriff Lill as follows: Height, 5 feet, 10 inches; weight 250 pounds; color, light brown; age 29; three inch scar on face; attire, generally well dressed.

INTENSIVE HUNT FOR ABDUCTOR; WARRANTS ISSUED

LATTER IN CLAYTON JAIL, BOND $50,000

Long Conference Between Officials and Orthweins —Paying of Reward Again Is Denied by Attorney.

The family of 13-year-old Adolphus Busch Orthwein, kidnaped New Years' eve near the Huntleigh Village country place of his father, Percy J. Orthwein, and restored to his parents 20 hours later, will assist the State in prosecution of the abductor, Prosecuting Attorney Castlen of St. Louis County indicated last night.

Percy Orthwein, with his attorney, Harry Troll, and his brother, William R. Orthwein, also a lawyer, met Castlen and Sheriff Lill in a conference of two hours and a half yesterday afternoon at Clayton.

At its conclusion Castlen would make no statement except to say that he "imagined," the family would support him in prosecution of the abductor and his accomplices, if any. Troll and the Orthweins refused to make a statement.

Intensive Search On.

Meanwhile an intensive search was being made for Charles Y. Abernathy, one of three persons charged in warrants issued yesterday with the kidnaping of the Orthwein boy.

Named by his father, Pearl Abernathy, real estate dealer, as the man who held up the Orthwein chauffeur and kidnaped the boy, Charles Abernathy has been missing since Thursday morning when he left his home at 715 Bismark avenue, Webster Groves, after holding the Orthwein boy there through the preceding night.

Pearl Abernathy, one of the three named in the kidnaping warrants issued yesterday, is held in Clayton jail in default of $50,000 bond. The other defendants named in warrants are his son, and his niece, Frieda Robb.

The conference with the Orthwein brothers and Attorney Troll at Clayton yesterday is understood to have been called with a view to determining whether the family would assist prosecuting authorities in bringing the kidnaper to justice.

In appealing for help in finding young Orthwein Wednesday night after the kidnaper had taken him, his father announced a generous reward would be paid for information leading to his safe recovery and no questions would be asked.

When the boy was recovered Troll stated the family felt bound in honor to keep its pledge and not to ask questions and not to disclose the identity of the kidnaper. Neither Troll nor the Orthwein family have been active in helping police agencies to run down the kidnaper and Castlen's invitation to conference is understood to have been issued to determine what help they would give from now on.

She Disappears, Too.

According to her own assertion, as well as the statement of Pearl Abernathy, Frieda Robb accompanied the Negro real estate dealer to Clayton last Thursday afternoon and there arranged for the return of the Orthwein boy. Both Pearl Abernathy and members of the Orthwein and Busch families declare nor ansom or reward was paid.

Frieda Robb left the elder Abernathy's home at 4323 Enright avenue Friday evening, a short time before detectives went to the house to take her to Police Headquarters for questioning. Pearl Abernathy is firm in his declaration that he does not know where

U. S. SURPLUS DWINDLING, TAX COLLECTIONS FALL OFF

General and Ordinary Expenses of Government Increase in Last Six Months.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3. — Collecting approximately $70,000,000 less in income taxes in 1930 than in 1929 the Government entered 1931 with a dwindling surplus and faced with reduced income taxes.

The Treasury's statement issued for the close of business on Dec. 31 showed that in the 1930 calendar year it had collected $2,333,307,000 in taxes on income despite the 1 per cent reduction granted in the tax on 1929 incomes. In the previous calendar year the collections amounted to $2,403,317,000.

Starting the fiscal year of 1931 on last July 1 with a surplus of $184,000,000 the Treasury completed the first six months of the year on Dec. 31 with a surplus of $53,124,895 which may be wiped out before March 15. At the close of business on the last day of the year the Government had collected from all sources $1,854,207,812 and had spent $1,801,082,916 in the first half of the 1931 fiscal year.

During the period customs receipts showed a decrease of approximately $100,000,000 as compared with the same period of the previous year, collections totaling $201,385,239. Income tax totaled $1,107,307,012, as compared with $1,185,317,860 and miscellaneous internal revenue dropped off from $318,493,628 to $295,317,352.

General and ordinary expenditures of the Government showed increases in the six-month period.

THROAT CUT WHEN MAN RESISTS NEGRO ROBBER

Charles E. Riley Gravely Wounded in Encounter Near Place of Business.

Charles E. Riley, proprietor of the St. Louis Disinfecting Co., 2921 Market street, was seriously wounded last night when a Negro robber slashed his throat in attempting a holdup near Riley's home and place of business.

Riley staggered into a drug store across the street shortly after 7 o'clock and waited there while an ambulance was summoned.

At the City Hospital, he said he was walking west on Market street when a Negro stepped suddenly from the mouth of an alley, brandished an open razor in his face and demanded money. Riley grappled with the Negro and was cut during a brief struggle. The Negro fled without loot.

EFFORT TO LINK POLICEMAN WITH MURDER OF GIRL

Patrolman on Beat Where Washington Victim Lived Had Tried to Make Dates With Her.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A cartridge shell Patrolman Robert F. Langdon voluntarily turned over to superiors and his statement that he peeped into a sleeping room on his beat gave detectives the evidence on which they sought tonight to link him with the murder of 19-year-old Beulah Limerick.

Inspector Shelby disclosed the "extremely unusual circumstances" which brought the 38-year-old policeman under investigation in the mysterious death of the former theater usher last Wednesday. Shelby said, however, a formal arrest must await future developments, particularly a report by the Bureau of Standarda ballistics experts on two pistols belonging to Landon.

The patrolman, who, Shelby said, had tried to make appointments with the girl within the past two months, has been held incommunicado since yesterday morning, when he told his precinct officials he had found a cartridge shell in a coffee cup in a room adjoining that in which the girl's body was found with a hidden bullet wound in her head.

Wound Not Found at First.

Hours before it was known the girl was murdered, her brother, Vernon, and other members of her family, had coffee together, leaving six cups unwashed on a table. That night an undertaker discovered the bullet wound. The next night, Patrolman Langdon was detailed to the house with a special guard.

At this time, Shelby said, Langdon was not under suspicion and police in searching the house had found only one shell, this on the floor beside the girl's body.

Yesterday morning, Shelby said, Langdon turned over the shell he said he found in one of the coffee cups, along with a bullet, which he said he found embedded in the floor under the girl's bed. He was detained and detectives took from his person a .25-caliber pistol. At

MOVE TO DEPOSE RALPH AS SENATE MINORITY LEADER

G. O. P. Members to Try to Elect J. G. Morgan in His Place in Upper House of Assembly.

OPPOSITION IS LAID TO SEWER LAW FIGHT

Republicans Fear St. Louis County Will Defeat Him if He Runs Again in 1932.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 3.—A plan of Republican Senators, engineered in St. Louis, to depose Senator Richard F. Ralph of Valley Park from the minority leadership of the Senate when the Republican caucus is held Tuesday night in advance of the opening of the Legislature has become known in Jefferson City.

According to the arrangements, which are said to have been perfected to a degree assuring a majority of the Republicans to be in accord, Senator J. G. Morgan of Unionville will be chosen to succeed Ralph, and Senator William Maffitt Bates of St. Louis will be chosen caucus chairman.

Morgan, when asked about the matter, said he had been approached by St. Louis Senators who had asked whether he would accept the post, and that he replied he and Ralph were friendly, and that he would not take the position of seeking the place, but that if he were elected he would accept.

Sure of Putting Over Plan.

It is understood that all of the St. Louis Republican Senators had a caucus several days ago and agreed to desert Ralph and elect Morgan, and that by long distance telephone they had ascertained that enough outstate Senators would join them to assure success of their plan.

The exact cause of the apparent break between the St. Louis Senators and Ralph has not appeared, but one Senator explained that it was due to a feeling that St. Louis County opposition to Ralph, growing out of the agitation over the Ralph sewer law, would result in Ralph's defeat for re-election in 1932, and that it would be well, as this Senator expressed it, "to line up with a live one." There was some dissatisfaction with his leadership among a few Senators who complained that he did not consult them on questions of policy and strategy.

Elected 10 Years Ago.

Ralph has been the recognized Republican leader of the Senate since his first election in 1920, though he did not officially have the title until 1925. In the 1921 session his activity in framing the legislation creating the State Highway Department brought him into prominence which has continued through the remaining sessions. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1924 and 1928.

According to information from St. Louis County, the opposition to Ralph is centering on Representative George F. Heege of Kirkwood as a candidate for the Senate in 1932. It is possible that by that time, however, the State will be redistricted to give St. Louis County two Senators.

OIL PRODUCERS' RELIEF PROPOSAL REACHES IMPASSE

said none of the concerns was buying from Prairie, except the Standard of Indiana, which is taking only 10,000 barrels daily until it can arrange for piping oil from its own sources of supply.

In a statement accompanying his letter, Fitzpatrick defended John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller Jr. He deprecated what he said was a disposition in some quarters "to bring the Rockefellers into what appears to be an impending controversy."

The elder Rockefeller, the statement said, had not been a stockholder in the Prairie for many years, but his son was a "substantial stockholder." The statement said: "From our contact with the Rockefellers, we know that they are not open to criticism for anything that has been done or left undone in our dealings with our patrons, competitors and the public. Unjust criticism and unreasonable proposals will not solve the problem."

1500 Oil Wells in Chanute, Kan., Fields Closed.

By the Associated Press.

CHANUTE, Kan., Jan. 3.—The shutting down of 1500 oil wells in the local field began today as a result of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co.'s decision to cease purchasing crude oil because of an oversupply in its tanks and a curtailed market. As the wells were closed workmen were discharged.

Unless a market is found operators say every well will be closed in two weeks.

NICARAGUANS WOUND TWO MORE MARINES

They Are Shot in Skirmish Following Killing of Eight Members of U. S. Forces.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 3.—Guerilla warfare flared again today in the densely wooded country between Totogalpa and Ocotal, and in a brush with Gen. Sandino's followers two United States Marines were seriously wounded.

The Marines under command of Capt. Ernest Russell, pushed on toward Ocotol, driving their opponents before them.

When news reached Ocotol of the clash, which followed closely upon that of Wednesday in which eight Marines were killed and two wounded by the insurgents, another Marine patrol set out to aid in the pursuit.

The men wounded today are Privates James Robert Earnhardt of Concord, N. C., and David Monroe Kirkendall of Chicago. It was said Kirkendall probably would recover. They were brought here by airplane.

National Guard Headquarters reported the insurgents in today's fight were thought to be the same group which ambushed Marines Dec. 31 and attacked the guard barracks at Telepeneca Jan. 1, when they were repulsed and fled in the direction of Palacaguina.

Throughout today Marine flyers continued active, bombing patrols leaving and returning to Managua frequently and carrying fresh Marines to the scene of the disturbance.

An official report says that nine insurgents were killed in encounters with Marines in the last three days. The insurrectionists are well armed, fighting one skirmish with two machine guns. Their number in the fights have ranged from a few men to as high as 150, the report says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The bodies of the eight marines killed in Nicaragua Wednesday will arrive in this country Jan. 30. The U. S. S. Vega, Cargo ship, will convey the bodies of seven men to Hampton Roads, Va., while the body of Sergt. Arthur M. Palrang will be taken to San Francisco on the army transport, Chateau Thierry.

Privates Joseph A. Harbaugh of Washington, Pa., and Lambert Bush of Bay Minett, Ala., will be buried at Arlington National Cemetery, the others at their homes.

ORTHWEINS WILL HELP PROSECUTE BOY'S ABDUCTOR

either she or his son can be found, although he has admitted that he gave his son $40 on New Year's morning and advised him to "go away."

The kidnaping warrants were issued yesterday afternoon after a conference between Prosecuting Attorney Castlen and Sheriff Lill. The maximum penalty for kidnaping is 10 years. Kidnaping for ransom, a capital offense, was not charged in the writs. Preliminary hearings were set for 1 p. m. Jan. 16 before Justice of the Peace William Oepts at Jennings.

Tells of Seeing Negro.

The police were informed yesterday by a man who said he was acquainted with Charles Abernathy, that he saw the Negro in a Ford sedan at Ninth street and Washington avenue at 2:30 p. m. yesterday.

He said Abernathy was with a woman and three children and gave a description of the machine, which was a Ford sedan without license plates. The information was immediately broadcast by radio.

Two Negro attorneys retained by Mrs. Pearl Abernathy visited her husband yesterday for a brief conference in Clayton jail. They told Prosecuting Attorney Castlen they would not be able to arrange bond for their client for the present, at least.

In his last statement to Sheriff Lill, Pearl Abernathy is understood to have held to his original story. This was to the effect that he learned New Year's morning his son was the kidnaper of the Orthwein boy, persuaded him to give up the lad and immediately got in touch with Orthwein.

He declared he met him in the Sheriff's office in Clayton while Sheriff Lill was away on the investigation and accomplished the return without either a request for, or a promise of, ransom.

Frieda Robb told substantially the same story to a Post-Dispatch reporter before she left the Abernathy home on Enright avenue in time to avoid policemen who sought to arrest her.

"The first I knew anything was wrong" she said, "was when my uncle came home very upset about 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon, made a telephone call and told me he wanted me to go with him to Clayton right away."

In the Sheriff's office at Clayton, she said, they met Orthwein, his brother-in-law, August A. Busch Jr., and Troll. The party waited for a few minutes for Sheriff Lill to come in, but when he did not return a conference was begun.

"My uncle explained the situation," she said. "Then Mr. Orthwein and I left in an automobile and went out on a country road. Mr. Troll and my uncle left Clayton together in another car. After Mr. Orthwein and I had waited about 15 minutes by the roadside—I don't know the name of the road—Mr. Troll and my uncle came back with the boy."

Told Not to Talk.

She refused to amplify her statement, explaining that Troll had instructed her not to discuss the case. When the reporter appealed to Troll by telephone to modify his instructions in view of developments in the case, he declined to do so.

Troll has previously said that the boy was returned to his father Thursday afternoon at an appointed spot on Bacon avenue near the Miriam Convalescent Home, in Webster Groves, not far from the Charles Abernathy home, where he had been held for 20 hours.

Troll, to whom members of the family have referred inquiries about payment of ransom for the boy's return, has categorically declared that no ransom or reward was paid or promised Abernathy or his son.

At the time of the boy's return he told reporters there was a possibility the Busch family might find a job for the kidnaper if it was found true, as represented to the Orthwein and Busch families, that he was driven to crime by his destitute circumstances.

$10,000 Reward Rumor.

A rumor circulated yesterday that Orthwein had promised a reward of $10,000 to the elder Abernathy for procuring the safe return of his boy was ascribed by close friends of Orthwein to remarks made by Orthwein at the Clayton conference Thursday that he would give anything for his boy's recovery unharmed.

His friends explain that in the excitement of arranging the return of the lad he repeated the offer of generous reward to the Negro real estate dealer, but declare they are certain no definite amount was mentioned.

No Reference in Warrants.

After he had thoroughly questioned Pearl Abernathy, Sheriff Lill was asked if he had found any indication that money was paid for the boy's return or that a reward was promised. He said he had not. Further indication that no evidence of a reward or ransom was uncovered is found in the fact that the warrants issued yesterday charge kidnaping but make no mention of ransom.

After the conference at Clayton last night reporters drew Attorney Troll's attention to the published report that $10,000 reward was promised the elder Abernathy. He declared the report was incorrect and repeated his unqualified statement that money was neither paid nor promised for the boy's return.

Eugenia Abernathy, wife of Charles Abernathy and mother of their seven children, was released from custody at Clayton yesterday after having been held as a material witness in the case.

She is quoted as admitting she knew her husband had the Orthwein boy in their house on Bismark avenue on Wednesday night and Thursday morning. She left the house in Webster at noon Thursday, she added, taking the children to Pearl Abernathy's house for New Year's dinner. It is generally understood that at that time her husband had already heeded his father's suggestion that he "go away."

Yesterday afternoon, on information furnished by Pearl Abernathy, policemen took from his home on Enright avenue a loaded automatic pistol. Abernathy told deputies at Clayton he had taken the weapon from his son Thursday morning and said he presumed it was the weapon used in the kidnaping.

Time to "Bear Down Hard," Says County Prosecutor.

Prosecuting Attorney Castlen yesterday gave the following statement to the press:

"This appears to me to be an opportune moment to 'bear down hard' on kidnaping and kidnapers in this community. The law cannot compromise with anyone who abducts another. This is a matter affecting the public's welfare and also anyone who conspires with or aids or abets or fails to act against the kidnaper when such action should be taken, lays himself or herself open to serious consequences.

"I appreciate fully the state of mental torture which seizes parents and kinsmen of those abducted, but when the abducted person has been returned and it is shown that the law readily can cope with those who undertook extortion by stealing a human being from his normal surroundings, no overtures should be made by anyone to the criminal or criminals involved. And particularly there should be no attempt to carry out to any person, the party to a kidnaping, payment of ransom or reward made under the strain of mental anguish that induces extravagant promises in the hope of obtaining the release of a loved one from lawful custody.

"In view of the previous three convictions in a prior case last year, and when the law finishes with anyone who may be guilty of the crime in the Orthwein case, kidnaping should be a less flourishing activity in this community. It is the duty of public officials backed by public sentiment in this case to see that such a condition is brought about."

$1,000,000 NET BALANCE IN STATE GENERAL REVENUE FUND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 3.—The State government of Missouri closed the biennial period of 1929 and 1930 with a net balance in the State general revenue fund of approximately $1,000,000 in excess of the outstanding bills, several deficit items and other accounts chargeable to revenues for the two years, according to books of the State Treasurer and State Auditor. This is the largest net balance in the general revenue fund since the end of the 1921-1922 biennial period.

The general revenue fund, derived largely from direct taxation sources, is the principal operating fund of the State departments, boards, schools and institutions. The balance for all of the 63 different funds in the State Treasury on Dec. 31, including the general revenue fund, was $13,043,052.

A preliminary report compiled by State Auditor L. D. Thompson places the total disbursements by the State during 1929 and 1930, including State road construction and all bond retirement and interest items, at $123,946,293. For 1929 the disbursements were $54,787,021 and in 1930 totaled $69,159,272.

SPECIAL CENSUS OF UNEMPLOYED IN 20 U. S. CITIES

Same System to Be Used as 10 Months Ago and Results Will Be Compared—Count to Start Jan. 15.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3. — With the same schedule, same inquiries, same instructions as last April, 4500 enumerators will start a special unemployment census of 20 cities Jan. 15.

The 10-month change in the employment problem is to be gauged since an employment census was taken last April.

Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's Emergency Committee for Employment, said today the census would be rushed to completion. As the count proceeds, he said, figures will be rushed to Washington for concurrent tabulation, making totals available within a short time after the field work is completed.

He said Census Director Steuart was hopeful the findings could be reported by the middle of February, thus making possible application of statistics to conditions still current.

Steuart said the 20 cities, totaling about 21,000,000 population, represented one-sixth of the entire population and all major geographic divisions, and would give "a good idea of the national trend."

He added it would furnish an index of the relation between employment and certain key industries, Detroit, for example, reflecting the automobile industry and Pittsburg the steel situation.

As in the April census, a house-to-house canvass system will be followed. To develop the extent to which people have gone to cities looking for work, one new question will be asked, "has this person been in the city more than four months?"

Steuart said an increase, both in numbers of unemployed and in duration of idleness, was expected from the January census.

The cities in which the census will be taken are Boston, the Manhattan and Bronx Boroughs of New York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Dayton, Cleveland Chicago, Detroit, Duluth, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Birmingham, New Orleans, Houston, Denver, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

MINISTER TO U. S. MADE PRESIDENT BY PANAMA JUNTA

Dr. R. J. Alfaro Accepts Post Offered by Leaders of Revolution Who Overthrew Arosemena.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The legation of Panama was converted into the headquarters of Panama's new President today as Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro wound up the affairs of his ministry in preparation for his journey home. The Minister is undecided as to the date of his departure.

Throngs of Panamanians flocked to the legation to congratulate the President-designate. With him to receive the guests between business affairs was Mme. Alfaro and their five children.

In an interview, Dr. Alfaro said: "I have been called to assume the presidency and have unhesitatingly answered the call of my country. I have been here a little more than eight years. The strengthening of the exceptional ties existing between my country and the United States has been my constant endeavor. I will do my utmost as the head of the Government of Panama to further promote friendship and good understanding between the Panamanian and the American peoples."

Under tentative plans, Mme. Alfaro and their two daughters, Amelita and Yolanda, will go to Panama with the new President. Their sons, Dr. Victor Alfaro of Philadelphia, Ivan and Rogelio, will remain in the United States, the last two to complete terms at the National Catholic University and Western High School of Washington.

The question of recognition by the United States of the new governments in both Panama and Guatemala is held in abeyance by the State Department pending a more settled political situation in those countries. Secretary Stimson indicated the situation in Panama was too complex for any immediate decision. Special considerations, involving American interests in preserving order in the Canal Zone, will govern recognition of the regime there, Stimson said, in addition to considerations as to whether Panama is prepared to fulfill its international obligations under the new administration.

Panama City Quiet After Sudden Overturn of Government.

By the Associated Press.

PANAMA CITY, Jan. 3.—Panama went about its business today as though there had not been an overnight change in the Government. From the presidential palace Harmodio Arias, head of the junta which replaced President Arosemena, announced that recognition by foreign Powers was not necessary since the change of Government was entirely constitutional.

J. J. Vallarino, a member of the provisional Cabinet, appointed a new head of the police force, which also serves as Panama's army, and declared he would see to it that order was maintained. Dr. Vallarino is an X-ray specialist.

The Arias Government will function as it is now constituted until Ricardo J. Alfaro, the Minister to the United States, can return here and assume the presidency. Alfaro was designated for that office by the junta.

Former President Arosemena meantime was confined to his quarters with other officials of his Government but it was generally expected that he would be released soon unless his successor decided to try him on charges of malfeasance.

Hartwell F. Ayers, American newspaper man wounded by stray bullets during the revolt, is still alive in Gorgas Hospital, but there is little hope of his recovery.

INSULL FRANCHISE LESSON LEARNED BY INDIANAPOLIS

Civic Clubs After Investigation Find Street Car Proposal "Unworthy of Consideration."

MANY 'JOKERS' IN 25,000-WORD PLAN

'Service at Cost' and 'Home Rule' Prove Empty Phrases When Provisions Are Analyzed.

By SAM J. SHELTON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 3.—The city of Indianapolis is learning a lesson about franchises from the experts of the Insull utilities organization.

The visible signs are an aroused public interest and an intelligent leadership insisting upon enlightening discussion of a long and intricate document under which it has been proposed to turn the street railway system over to the Insulls of Chicago.

In some quarters it is being said the franchise system is archaic; that it is a delusion; that it is impossible under any franchise which might be devised to reserve to the city the powers of control and regulation it should have for protection of the public—powers which the document submitted here temptingly but feebly purports to bestow.

The community civic clubs of Indianapolis have been stirred to action. More than 25 of them, banded together in a federation, created a Utilities Committee, headed by Oscar F. Smith, a prominent lawyer, to study and report upon the proposed franchise. At a public hearing last Monday night at the city hall this committee pronounced the proposal unworthy of further consideration. One of the committeemen, John F. White, a member of the Indiana Legislature, analyzed the document, reviewed the failure of State regulation and pointed out the absence of effective city control under the proposed franchise, and gave it as his own opinion that the city should resort to municipal ownership.

First Sentiment Favorable.

The public hearing, attended by a crowd which filled the council chamber, was the fifth held by a special committee of city officials appointed by Mayor Sullivan to investigate and report upon the proposed franchise. At earlier meetings sentiment was largely favorable to it; scarcely anyone had read it; organized business was for it; bondholders saw in it a hope of recouping losses; merchants inclined to the alluring promises of some $9,000,000 to be expended for new cars and other improvements; others visioned new securities to be sold.

The Mayor's committee is to help determine the policy of the administration. The city now has no authority to grant such a franchise. The Insull representatives have prepared bills purporting to confer the authority and they wish the city to help get them through the Legislature. The position of the city administration probably will be determined by the report of this committee.

The franchise contains more than 25,000 words. When it was printed textually by the Indianapolis News it fell just a bit short of filling 24 columns in fine type. It was described by a speaker at this week's public hearing as a "maze of words;" by another as "rigmarole;" by still another as being so filled with "whereases, provisions and exceptions" as to keep all the lawyers in Indianapolis busy the rest of their lives trying to interpret it. Even the most conscientious and diligent public official could hardly be expected to read it studiously, the speakers said.

In Hands of Receiver.

Events leading up to the proposal closely parallel situations in other cities. In the early days, exploitation; then with the growth of the automobile, loss of riders and revenue in serious proportions. Last April a badly depreciated street railway system passed into the hands of a State court receiver, who now operates it.

Committees of bondholders, hopeful of salvaging something, began negotiations with the Insull interests of Chicago. The Midland United Co., an Insull subsidiary, worked out the proposed franchise, and submitted it to the city with the information that unless it was granted by the city in all its fundamentals, the Midland United Co. would not be interested in acquiring the property.

Just why the Midland United was not willing to take over the property under its present operating right, an indeterminate permit from the State Public Service Commission, has never been publicly explained. A statement of the situation may throw some light on this matter of policy.

About 1921 Indiana enacted an indeterminate permit law, much like the "terminable permits" bill which was passed by the Missouri Legislature in 1929 and vetoed by Gov. Caulfield. It was the latest style in utility grants. Under it the Indianapolis Street Railway Co. surrendered its municipal franchise and was granted an indeterminate permit by the Indiana Public Service Commission.

"Legislative Sanction."

Apparently the Insulls are not now satisfied with that type of operating right. It lacks the earmarks of a franchise, the "legislative sanction," emphasized by the United States Supreme Court in the early Smyth-Ames decision, which has become the Rock of Gibraltar for the vested rights of the utilities. The draft of the new franchise takes care of "legislative sanction" by providing that it shall be effective only if approved by the City Council and the Mayor, so as to have "the same force and effect as an ordinance."

Inducements held out to the people in return for the franchise have a familiar ring to St. Louis: "Service at cost," control in the hands of a local transit commission, an agreed valuation and schedule of fares, millions for new cars and other improvements.

Some inquiring citizens, leaders in the civic clubs, have examined the terms of the franchise with particular reference to the purported public benefits, and what they have learned from and about this lengthy product of the Insull lawyers makes interesting reading.

"Service at Cost."

They have tried to analyze the "service at cost" provision. The franchise says: "Cost of service is hereby defined and agreed to be and include each and all of the following items." There follows a list of 14 items, each fully described, among them being operating expenses, deprecation allowances, taxes, charges for maintaining operating reserves, "monies included in cost of operaton," interest on borrowed money, 8 per cent return for the property, amortized discounts on and costs of marketing securities, salaries of city transit board members and employes, costs of arbitrations or valuations, uncollectible accounts, contributions to employes' welfare funds, rental of a terminal property, and "any and all other property expenditures incurred in or in connection with the operation under this franchise contract and not of a capital nature."

Questions have been raised about the 8 per cent return clause and those diligent enough have found the answers in the franchise. The company is assured this return on the initial agreed valuation plus all additional investments, provided it can be obtained under the highest rate of fare named in the schedule; the return is to be cumulative, that is, if not earned in one period the deficit may be recouped later.

If 8 Per Cent Is Not Earned.

But in the event the company is unable to earn the 8 per cent cumulative return under the highest rate of fare, 10 cents plus 2 cents for transfer, it may disregard fully the regulations of the local transit board and operate as it pleases until it earns such return.

The agreed valuation set up in the franchise is $11,000,000 for the property as it would be taken over. Critics assert the actual physical value of the property is not more than $7,000,000 and that the new company would start with a highly watered capital structure. The new company would expend $9,000,000 for improvements in five years, making a total investment of $20,000,000 upon which it would be entitled to a return of 8 per cent.

The skeptics ask: How in the face of generally declining street railway business could the new company earn its return on this valuation when the old company has gone broke on a lower capital investment?

The local transit board provision purports to give the city home rule over the company. This would be predicated upon an amendment to the State law ostensibly taking such street railway control away from the State Public Service Commission and lodging it in the local board.

Attorney Smith has pointed out that this purported local control would be ineffective in case of dispute over fares or valuation, because having the legislative sanction of its franchise the company could obtain relief in the Federal Courts which would recognize such elements as reproduction cost, going value and other items which might, result in inflation.

Attorney Smith also has in mind the situation in Kansas City where an agreed rate of fare named in a new "service at cost" franchise was disregarded by the Kansas City Public Service Co., whose action was sustained by the Missouri Supreme Court in a sweeping decision against the City of Kansas City. This Kansas City case was commented upon with interest by James E. Deery, City Attorney of Indianapolis, who is a member of the Mayor's committee.

The Monopoly Clause.

A provision of the franchise objected to by many Indianapolis citizens is the monopoly clause. This would give the company virtually the exclusive right to operate any and all forms of public transportation "upon, across, over, along, above or below any or all of the streets now existing or which may hereafter exist within the city." This is defined as extending to any form of vehicle now or hereafter available.

The city would be obligated to prohibit and prevent competition and in event of failure to do so would be liable to the company for daily damages, and "the company, so long as the city permits or allows such competition to continue, shall have the right and power to give such service within the city and charge such rates of fare therefor as the company, in its sole discretion, may desire or see fit to do."

At the public hearing this week one citizen advocated a policy of aggressive municipal control, equivalent to operation under a revocable permit.

"Let the city call the bluff of the traction owners," he said. "They won't quit. Let us lay down the terms and conditions upon which they must operate or vacate the streets. They will come to terms, for they don't want to vacate."

Municipal Ownership Plan.

The municipal ownership group has figured that the city should buy the property for about $7,000,000 to $8,000,000, make the needed improvements, obtaining the necessary funds from bonds at 4 or 4½ per cent, provide for non-political management, and give the people a service far superior to that now being given.

The discussion attendant upon the Insull proposal has created widespread interest with the probability that before the question is settled the public will have a far better understanding than now of the real meaning of franchises and the eagerness of utilities to acquire them for long periods—in this case for an indeterminate time, equivalent to perpetuity.

Joffre Memorial Service Here.

The French society of St. Louis has sent a cablegram of condolence to Marshal Joffre's widow. Memorial services for the Marshal will be held here by the society at a time to be announced later.

$62,500 IN GIFTS TO OSCAR JOHNSON RESEARCH SCHOOL

Family of Late Henry Elliott Jr. Gives $50,000 for Auditorium, Washington U. Announces.

Gifts amounting to $62,500 for a staff conference room and an auditorium in Oscar Johnson Institute of Research and Teaching in Ophthalmology and Oto-Laryngology were announced yesterday by Washington University.

The family of the late Henry Elliot Jr., president of Elliot Frog & Switch Co., gave $50,000 for an auditorium to be the center of post-graduate activities in the eye and the ear, nose and throat departments of Washington University School of Medicine. The donors are Mrs. Henry Elliot of 35 Westmoreland place and her daughters, Miss Georgia Elliot and Mrs. Edward Mallinckrodt Jr. of 16 Westmoreland.

Mrs. Isabel Holmes Keech of the Chase Hotel, who has made substantial gifts to St. Luke's Hospital here and West Penn Hospital at Pittsburg, Pa., gave $12,500 for a conference room and library for staff physicians, to be used also as a board room for directors of the Institute and McMillan Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital. The building, in which the two institutions will occupy separate quarters, is virtually completed at Kingshighway and Euclid avenue.

The latest in lecture and demonstration equipment will distinguish the auditorium. The speaker will be able to control not only the lights, but the window-shades, from his desk. Projection apparatus will be provided to show illustrations from books, lantern slides and microscope slides.

The 120 seats will be upholstered in red leather, and the walls will be of wood and plaster panels. A simple and dignified decorative scheme for the auditorium and the conference room is being worked out by the university architects, Jamieson & Spearl, in collaboration with the donors.

Adjoining the auditorium will be a waiting room for patients and two locker rooms for visiting men and women scientists. The auditorium and its facilities will be available for conventions of specialists and the scientific societies of the city.

NEW YORK AUTO SHOW OPENS WITH 300 MODELS ON DISPLAY

More Value at Lower Prices Featured by Most Exhibitors; Cars Generally Lower.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—More value at a lower price was the keynote of the thirty-first national automobile show which opened at Grand Central Palace today.

More than 300 models are on display.

All but there makes were equipped with fuel pumps. Five makes featured free wheeling, purported to be a panacea for gear-shift troubles. Ten models were equipped with carburetor silencers, chrome plating for finished parts was almost universal and the majority of the manufacturers used non-shatterable glass in their cars.

There was a great increase in the number of new eights.

In appearance the care were generally lower with a trend toward pointed radiators, spare tires in fender wells, wire wheels and somber colors. Much attention was paid to stream-lining and door accessibility.

Among novelties displayed was a vacuum-operated gearshift and an electrically operated door lock, which, at the touching of a button, locks all doors of the car.

whole host of France's greatest dead.

Ambassador Edge tonight presented to Foreign Minister Briand the condolences of the United States, saying: "The personality of Marshal Joffre was particularly known and loved in my country. In this day of mourning I share your affliction and that of the French nation. In the name of my Government and in my own name I ask you to accept our condolences and the expression of our profound sympathy for this great loss."

His Personality Caught People's Fancy in America in 1917.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—When Marshall Joffre came to America in April, 1917, accompanied by Rene Viviani, French Minister of Justice, to tell the United States that the situation was critical, and made a brief tour of the country, his sturdy figure and genial imperturbability caught the fancy of the people. Crowds met him everywhere and shouted "Papa Joffre." The French soldiers called him that when he wasn't around. With the Marshal, as his aid, was Lieutenant-Colonel Jean Fabry, the "Blue Devil of France." Fabry saw his commander just before he died and the Marshal knew him.

Pleased at his reception, the Marshal said that he was coming back. He did in April, 1922, and was entertained by Pershing.

In 1917 Joffre came up the Potomac River on the presidential yacht, the Mayflower, during bright sunny weather. He said then and on his return that the countryside reminded him of the south of France where he was born.

He had seen the United States once before 1917, landing in San Francisco in 1888 on his way home from a colony post.

One of his favorite tales was of the reception given him by reporters then. His ship had rammed another in San Francisco Bay, and the news gatherers were anxious for an eye-witness story. Joffre spoke no English.

"They called me Colonel and left me quickly," the old warrior laughed.

Marshal Joffre Visited St. Louis in May, 1917.

Marshal Joffre, early in May, 1917, was the center of the first demonstration made in St. Louis in honor of the soldiers and statesmen of the Allied nations, after the United States entered the World War.

He came to St. Louis, in the course of a tour of American cities, in company with Rene Viviani, Vice Premier of France. Viviani was the spokesman of the pair and his eloquence won applause at receptions and dinners, but in street parades and mass meetings the greater part of the enthusiasm shown was for the silent "Papa" Joffre.

The St. Louis city government joined officially in the Joffre reception and Mayor Kiel extended the city's welcome at the rally in the Coliseum on May 6. This was in contrast to the attitude of Mayor Thompson of Chicago, who demurred at receiving the guests.

At the Coliseum, Marshal Joffre presented a large American flag to the Fifth Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, then being recruited. The Fifth became known as "Joffre's Regiment." It was later united with the First Missouri to form the 138th Infantry of the Thirty-fifth, volunteer division of Missouri, Kansas and Colorado troops. The flag presented to the Fifth was destroyed by fire while the 138th was in France and the Marshal sent the regiment another flag to replace it.

TWO INDIANA BANK ROBBERS GET LIFE

One of Them, Walter Detrich, Wanted in St. Louis for $9300 Payroll Holdup.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT, Ind., Jan. 3.—Walter Detrich, 26 years old, wanted for robbery in St. Louis, Jefferson City and Los Angeles, and James Long, 32, received life sentences in the Indiana State prison today for participation in a $15,000 robbery of the Citizens' State Bank of Clinton Dec. 16, when four men were killed.

The two survivors of a band of five robbers were found guilty by a jury, which deliberated 14 minutes, and were sentenced immediately by Judge William Wait. The trial began Friday.

Indiana authorities decided to prosecute the two men for robbery rather than for murder inasmuch as the killings occurred in Illinois and murder charges would have had to have been filed there.

Detrich and Long were two of five men who held up the bank and fled across the State line followed by a posse. In a fight a robber and a Deputy Sheriff were killed while two robbers killed themselves in a field rather than surrender. The loot was recovered.

Long, authorities said, has been identified as "Oklahoma Jack Clark," reported killed in a bank holdup at Seminole, Ok., two years ago. He has been identified by photographs as one of several men who held up a Federal Reserve truck in Denver in 1922, taking $200,000.

Detrich was wanted in St. Louis for a $9300 payroll holdup at the Procter & Gamble Soap Co., 169 East Grand avenue, March 7, 1929; in Jefferson City for jumping a $25,000 bond, and in Los Angeles for holding up a theater. He has served a term in the Missouri Penitentiary for robbery.

St. Louis police were told that Detrich and Lawrence McBride perpetrated the Procter & Gamble holdup. McBride has since been arrested in California and is in San Quentin prison under a robbery conviction.

UNEMPLOYED MAN ENDS LIFE

Ansel Payne, 22 years old, an unemployed paper hanger, was found dead of gas poisoning last night in the basement of 3857 Folsom avenue. He had placed a gas tube in his mouth and wrapped his head with rags.

Payne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Payne, with whom he lived at 3857A Folsom, said he had been despondent and drinking heavily.

his home they discovered another .25-caliber pistol in an old icebox.

Had Killed Two Persons.

"I want the Bureau of Standards to find out two things," the Inspector said. "Whether the death bullet was fired from either of Langdon's guns, and whether the shell in the cup and the shell we had found previously were for the same or different guns."

Langdon denied any connection with the murder, the Inspector said, but said that while patrolling his beat, on which the house is situated, he had walked up to a door and peeped through at the sleeping girl early Wednesday morning. The patrolman also said he had talked to the girl about a complaint against the house.

Shelby said he had information that the girl complained to her family several times that the patrolman was annoying her.

Shelby said Langdon had killed two persons in line of duty while assigned to prohibition work but that in each case he had been absolved.

Shelby said no one else now held was under direct suspicion, but that he would not immeditely release the girl's brother, Vernon, Richard Reed, who roomed with them, or Edward Paddy, who escorted Beulah to a dance the night before her death.

H. S. PRIEST $1,250,000 ESTATE NOW $100,000

Present Value of Stocks Far Below That Shown in Inventory.

Personal property in the estate of Henry S. Priest, former Federal Judge, who died last July, is listed at a face value of $1,258,722.92 in an inventory filed yesterday in Probate Court, but is actually worth about $100,000, due to a shrinkage in the value of stocks which form the major portion of it, according to executors of the estate.

Chief among the shares held, which are valued collectively at $915,238.90, are 431,733 shares of preferred and 4998 shares of common stock in the bankrupt Irma Oil Co., against which the estate also holds a personal claim of $175,901. Liquidation of either portion of the estate is regarded as problematical.

The remainder of the stocks are in milling, mining, coal and oil companies. Included are $226,000 worth of stock in the General Railway Coupler Co., $40,000 in the Marquette Iron & Steel Co., $36,000 in the Tennessee Central Railway, $12,700 in the Cumberland Coal & Coke Co., and 125 shares in the German-American Press Association. One share each in the former St. Louis Transit Co. and United Railways, for which Judge Priest was at one time general counsel, are listed.

Notes of a face value of $125,008, many of them of doubtful collectibility, are listed in the inventory, with bonds valued at $27,140, chattels worth $7075 and $4364 in cash. Real estate holdings are the Priest residence at 4320 Westminster place, 4960 acres of land in Miller County, Ark.; 142 acres in Shannon County, Mo.; property at 7411-17 Maple avenue and 1130 Hodiamont avenue. Three of the pieces of property are encumbered to an approximate total of $100,000.

Among the notes held by the estate is one for $3513 as a loan to Arthur N. Sager, former Circuit Attorney in St. Louis, who was convicted of bribery in New York last spring. Other notes date back to 1897.

The estate, except for a few minor bequests, will be divided between Judge Priest's two sons, George T. Priest and Wells Blodgett Priest, and two daughters, Mrs. William Grayson and Mrs. Thomas Bond, according to the will filed last July, which stated that Mrs. Mabel C. Priest, his widow, had received $30,000 during Judge Priest's lifetime.

Furnishings of the Priest home were auctioned off for $5200 last November.

. . . Each year more millions check Colds 2 WAYS at once

Mother! The night coughs of children can usually be relieved by one application of Vicks. Just rub on freely and cover with warm flannel.

Millions more each year find there is nothing to equal the double attack of Vicks VapoRub in checking colds.

Rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are breathed in direct to the air-passages.

Mothers especially appreciate Vicks because it avoids "dosing," which so often upsets children's delicate stomachs.

Adults, too, now prefer this modern method of checking colds. In fact, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Marshal Joffre, Victor of Marne, Son of Cooper, Chose Army Career And Saved Paris in Great War

In Charge of French Armies in West at Outset of Conflict—Served With Distinction in China.

CREASY, the English historian, years ago wrote his "Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." The sixteenth—the first battle of the Marne—was won by Gen. Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre, commander of the French armies in the west during the world war. Ending a series of disheartening retreats, he stopped 2,500,000 Germans and drove them back when they were within 30 miles of Paris.

"I mean to deliver the big battle under the most favorable conditions at my own time and on the ground I have chosen," declared Joffre to his generals. "If necessary I shall continue to retreat. I shall bide my time. No consideration whatever will make me alter my plans."

The onward sweep of the Germans had reached high tide on September 5, 1914, despite the gallant defense of Liege, the stand at Mons-Namur-Charleroi and a counter invasion of Alsace-Lorraine. Flushed with success, opposed by a numerically inferior force which had continually yielded ground, the Germans had every expectation of capturing Paris and of turning their strength to finish the menacing Russia. The French government, meanwhile, had moved to Bordeaux. Joffre decided to strike on September 6 with fast and furious flank attacks, following the terrific frontal onslaughts of the enemy. The Germany right wing, under General Alexander von Kluck, checked by Joffre's unexpected and tremendous counter-offensive, fell back upon the Aisne river on September 10 and extended itself northward through Picardy, Artois and Flanders to the Belgian coast. Paris was saved and Joffre was acclaimed the hero of France.

25,000 Miles of Trenches.

After the battle of the Marne, the Germans in the West took to the trenches and dug themselves in and then began four years of a new type of warfare in which every death-dealing device and artifice of human ingenuity was employed. Reconnaisance showed that at one time the trenches in the Western front consisted of 32 parallel lines which with the communication trenches, aggregated 25,000 miles. Joffre remarked: "We have only to keep to the path that we are now following to be sure of victory."

Fom October, 1914, to July, 1918, however, the long entrenched battle line from the coast to Switzerland remained almost stationary, although numerous terrific attempts to break through were made by the Germans, notably in Flanders, at Ypres, in the Argonne, at Verdun, between St. Quentin and La Fero toward Amiens, at Chemin des Dames, between Rheims and Soissons and again at the Marne.

Five of the greatest German drives failing, the allies found themselves in a position again to take the offensive in July, 1918, and the following October they smashed the so-called "Hindenburg Line," cleared the Belgian coast and advanced, along the River Meuse, threatening all German communications and compelling the enemy to ask for the armistice, which was granted on Nov. 11, 1918.

Meanwhile, Joffre had retired from active command and had been created a Marshal of France. After the first battle of the Marne, occasional allied reverses cast a shadow upon the glory of the great French soldier. He had aroused enmities in the Chamber of Deputies by his dismissal of 14 Generals and his replacement of them by younger commanders. Paris papers criticised him, notably for his transfer of Gen. M. P. E. Sarrail from the Argonne to a minor command in the Near East. Joffre himself was 63 and late in 1915 rumors arose regarding the plans to shelve him.

Georges Clemenceau, who later became Premier, declared in his paper, l'Homme Enchaine, that the politicians were going to give Joffre "a high-sounding nominal appointment which would have the practical result of installing a new Commander in Chief on the Western front." He asked: "Is the proposed new appointment a favor given because the French front affords insufficient scope to Gen. Joffre's abilities or is it a disgrace which hides under the flowers a bowstring to paralyze our great strategist in the niche of honor?"

In 1916 Gen. Robert Nivelle succeeded Joffre, after Premier Briand had announced the latter's appointment as Commander in Chief of all the French armies except those in Africa. Briand explained: "The sole object of the extended powers of Gen. Joffre is to insure singleness of direction in military operations and at the same time to establish closer co-ordination between the commander of our armies and the technical councils of the allies."

In 1917, a few weeks prior to the entry of the United States into the struggle, Marshal Joffre and former Premier Viviani, as the heads of the French War Mission, came to this country and discussed with President Wilson and other officials America's participation in the war. The Marshal and Viviani were enthusiastically greeted everywhere.

Returns to U. S. in 1922.

Marshal Joffre visited the United States again in January, 1922, coming here from Japan, where he had been the guest of the Japanese Empire. With Mme. Joffre, his daughter, and four staff officers of the French army, who accompanied him from Marseilles, he was extensively entertained in the Pacific Coast cities. Before leaving San Francisco he announced that he would present to the museum there the uniform and sword he wore during the battle of the Marne.

In Washington he was received by President Harding, and the Distinguished Service Order of the American Legion was given him.

In 1918 Joffre was elected a member of the French Academy, thus becoming one of the "Forty Immortals." He was chosen on his literary record. His work was written on Sept. 6, 1914, on the eve of the Battle of the Marne in a general order to his army and read: "At this moment when a battle is about to commence, upon the result of which the salvation of our country depends, no one must look behind. All must unite to attack and repel the enemy. Any troop finding itself unable to advance further must hold the ground at all cost and must fight until death. No retreat."

Joffre's only other literary effort was written in 1895 when, after a French detachment had been annihilated by hostile tribesmen in Africa, he led a punitive expedition from the coast to the interior and described his experiences in a pamphlet entitled: "My March to Timbuctu."

Born at Rivesaltes on Jan. 4, 1852, close to the Pyrenees, the son of a cooper, Joffre was educated at the College of Perpignan and the Ecole Polytechnic. He entered the French army as a Second Lieutenant during the Franco-Prussian war, 1870-71 and commanded a battery at the siege of Paris. He became a Captain in 1876, a Major in 1889, a Lieutenant-Colonel in 1894, a Colonel in 1897, a Brigadier-General in 1901 and a Major General in 1905. He served with distinction in China and Tonkin and organized the defenses of Formosa. At the beginning of the great war he was Chief of the French General Staff.

Marshal Joffre was a brilliant mathematician and military engineer and correctly predicted in 1912 that "the next war will be a long one, waged along immense fronts an in it patience will be worth more than audacity and calculation will count more than dash." He was not a dress parade commander and was rarely seen in the saddle.

Bereft of his wife early in his military career, 20 years later he married Mme. Lozes, the mother of two children, with whom he enjoyed for years the quiet of a home at Auteuil. After the battle of the Marne, a friend remarked: "General, you have won the greatest battle of the ages." Joffre replied: "What I hope I have won is an early rest in my little home in the Pyrennees."

Finally Credited With Victory.

During the eight years since the hero of the Marne visited Japan, Canada and the United States in 1922, receiving great acclaim in each country, he had done little else than write his memoirs, attend public functions and enjoy quiet country life.

Although for several years after the war there were many differences of opinion as to who was the real hero of the Marne, before Joffre's death it generally was conceded that it was he who pushed back the invading Germans when they were within 30 miles of Paris.

It was Andre Maginot, Minister of War, who in 1923 gave full credit to Marshal Joffre for the victory. Speaking at the ninth anniversary celebration of the Battle of the Marne, Maginot said:

"We have had enough idle discussion concerning who should be awarded the merit for such a magic victory. History already has definitely crowned Marshal Joffre as the victor of the Marne. Let no one challenge this."

Only five months earlier the Marshal himself with modesty had acclaimed Marshal Manoury the victor.

Marshal Joffre in 1926 contributed valuable aid to the efforts to ward off the financial dangers that threatened France. He accepted a post as president of a committee seeking voluntary contributions to the national sinking fund and led an active campaign to strengthen the treasury.

For two hours last June 21 he stood at Chantilly, bent and feeble, and saw a statue of himself unveiled at the place where he had his headquarters during the Marne. A worn, aged figure, in sharp contrast to the marble reproduction of the robust General.

His death leaves only two men who will ever bear the title of Marshal of France—Henri-Philippe Petain and Hubert Lyautey. Last year it was announced that France would end the title by extinction.

RAIL AND SHOALS SSUES MAY FORCE AN EXTRA SESSION

Couzens, Discussing Merger Plan, Thinks It Would Be "Unwise" to Adjourn for Nine Months.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Congress will return to work Monday knowing that prospects for an extra session have increased substantially since the Christmas recess started two weeks ago. President Hoover may still be able to send Congress home for the summer when the short session ends March 4, but his chances are diminishing.

Among events of the last two weeks that tend to make an extra session inevitable, two are especially conspicuously—President Hoover's effort to promote an early consolidation of Eastern railroads; and the eleventh-hour attempt of the power interests to wreck the Norris Muscle Shoals plan by substituting a so-called "compromise."

Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, chairman of the powerful Interstate Commerce Committee, who heretofore has been opposed to a special session, said tonight that the President's action in connection with the railroad consolidation plan had convinced him it "would be unwise for Congress to adjourn for nine month this year."

Although the Michigan Senator has not committed himself expressly against thge proposed plan, he has said that President Hoover's action in approving it before it was submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission was "most unethical and indiscreet," and he feels strongly that the plan should not be put into effect until it has been scrutinized in detail by Congress. This cannot be done if Congress goes home March 4.

"And since that situation has been precipitated by Mr. Hoover," he said, "I am ready to admit that there are other matter of sufficient importance to warrant an extra session. I seriously doubt whether we could justify our conduct in running away in the middle of this economic crisis. We have not really done anything about unemployment, and nothing worth while will be done if we go home March 4. Other consolidations and mergers are indicated, and I believe Congress should be on the job when they are attempted. After all, this is supposed to be a representative government."

Couzens' attitude is significant. Although extremely independent, he has never been definitely listed among the insurgents or progressives. Because of his vast wealth and his recognized standing as an industrial genius, he enjoys the confidence of business men throughout the country, and his views carry great weight, not only with them but with other members of the Senate. It would be a very hardy individual, indeed, who attempted to tell Couzens that he doesn't understand business conditions.

Since the present session began a large body of Democrats and progressives have put Muscle Shoals forward as one problem that must be solved before Congress leaves. It has been pending 1 years. Until a few days ago, prospects were bright for passage of the Norris bill, providing for Goverment manufacture and distribution of power from the Government's $150,000,000 plant. Then, without warning, the power interests started a drive to confine Government operation to mere control of the plant and to give private interests the privilege of transmitting and selling the power.

Senator Norris, author of the original plan, has pointed out that the effect of this "compromise" would simply be to perpetuate the present condition, in which the Government sells the power at the switchboard to the Alabama Power Co., which in turn distributes and retails it for as high as 15 cents a kilowatt hour.

Norris declares he will never agree to the "compromise," and if necessary will block all action until the next Congress meets. Naturally, in that event he would want the new Congress to meet as soon as possible.

Railroad consolidation and Muscle Shoals are not the only factors which tend to enlarge the demand for an extra session. There is increasing pressure for action on the Wagner bills to relieve unemployment, and no prospects that they will be reached before March 4. Doubtless it will increase still further when the La Follette investigation of relief measures gets under way next week.

The disclosure that the Republican National Committee financed Executive Director Lucas' secret attempt to defeat Senator Norris in the last election, and the accompanying disclosure that the National Committee established a "special fund" used for that and other purposes just before the last election, is certain to be the subject of angry controversy when the Senate reconvenes. Lucas and Joseph R. Nutt, the Republican National treasurer, have been subpenaed to appear before the Nye Investigating Committee Tuesday for further questioning.

In addition, the act of three newly-appointed members of the Federal Power Commission in summarily dismissing Solicitor Russell and Chief Accountant King, as a result of their crusade to expose and preven ding of po has arouse reconsideri the three bound to heated an bate.

Until a few days ago, prospects were bright for passage of the Norris bill, providing for Goverment manufacture and distribution of power from the Government's $160,000,000 plant. Then, without warning, the power interests started a drive to confine Government operation to mere control of the plant and to give private interests the privilege of transmitting and selling the power.

Lucas and Joseph R. Nutt, the Republican National treasurer, have been subpenaed to appear before the Nye Investigating Committee Tuesday for further questioning.

In addition, the act of three newly-appointed members of the Federal Power Commission in summarily dismissing Solicitor Russell and Chief Accountant King, as a result of their crusade to expose and prevent the watering and padding of power company valuations, has aroused a strong sentiment for reconsidering the nominations of the three commissioners. It is bound to involve the Senate in heated and possibly prolonged debate.

The effect of all these conditions is to postpone the passage of the vital appropriations bills, without which the Government cannot meet its payroll during the coming years. If President Hoover elects to continue his new role as a "big stick wielder"—as some observers expect—he will provoke another storm of controversy on Capitol Hill and more delay.

In the House the Republican "triumvirate" of Longworth, Tilson and Snell remains in apparent control of the situation, and probably will be able to steamroll the appropriation measures through that body in jig time, but they also are troubled by multiplying signs of mutiny, and an insurrection would cause no surprise.

GERMAN PRESS PRAISES JOFFRE FOR COOL HEAD ON MARNE

Marshal "Showed Fortitude That Marks the Truly Great," Says Former General.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Almost the entire German press today paid respectful tribute to Marshal Joffre as a dignified figure and simple-hearted, patriotic Frenchman, who after his resignation in 1916, which is laid to political intrigues, harbored no rancor but continued to serve his country in silence.

The victory of the Marne was due, in the opinion of the obituarists, more to the failure of the German command than to Joffre's strategic genius. One merit, however, none denies him—that he kept a cool head when all for the time seemed lost.

Gen. Hermann von Kuhl, who was Gen. von Kluck's chief of staff and is a noted authority on the Marne battle, wrote today: "In these circumstances, Joffre showed a fortitude that marks the truly great," but continued, "We Germans are nevertheless convinced that it was a calamitous chain of misunderstandings and personal failures that robbed us of victory."

The Berliner Tageblatt recorded gratefully that "never did Joffre utter an evil word against Germany or the German Army, never did he thunder against the 'Boches' like Clemenceau, nor pursue political aims like Foch." The paper recalled grim old Admiral von Tirpitz's grudging tribute that Joffre was "a heart of oak."

COURT DENIES PETITION FOR REINSTATEMENT IN UNION

Counsel for Joseph J. Streib, Ousted Boilermaker, Moves for New Trial.

The petition of Joseph J. Streib, 4016A California avenue, for a writ of mandamus to compel the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America to reinstate him as a member was denied yesterday by Circuit Judge Hogan. Streib's counsel filed a motion for a new trial, alleging the Court erred.

In the mandamus petition, Streib, who had been business agent of the local union of defendant organization, alleged he was wrongfully expelled from membership Sept. 8, 1926; further, at the convention of the international in Kansas City last year he was ordered to leave when he sought a redress of grievances. On account of being out of the union he has been unable to follow his trade as a boilermaker, he said.

About a year ago Streib obtained a jury verdict against the international body for $12,500 damages based on his dismissal. This case is pending on appeal, as is his suit for back pay against the local union, which he also won in the lower court.

Streib was expelled on charges of failure to comply with the constitution of the order. His suit for back pay amounted to $3894.

POLICE WHO KILLED SPEEDER IN CHASE HELD BLAMELESS

Coroner's Jury at Highland, Ill., Finds St. Louis Carpenter Was Shot for Resisting Arrest.

Emil V. Noser, St. Louis carpenter, who was shot in the head with a riot gun Friday night when racing with a police automobile on Highway No. 40, about 45 miles east of St. Louis, "was killed by Patrolman Levic Easley of Highland while resisting arrest," according to a Coroner's verdict returned at an inquest at Highland, Ill., yesterday.

Chief of Police Elmer Winter of Highland and Patrolman Easley described the five-mile chase in which Winter drove the police car while Easley, at the chief's orders, emptied a revolver and an automatic pistol and fired three shots with his riot gun.

During the chase, they said, Noser tried to crowd their car off the road, ignoring the sound of a siren, the shouts of the policemen and a spotlight which flashed the word "Police" in red letters on the road.

"Nothing Else to Do."

Easley had fired 20 shots in the air, at the tires, gas tank and trunk and through the rear windows of Noser's car before Winter decided "there was nothing else to do" but shoot the driver.

Winter and Easley testified they had talked to several tourists who had seen Noser crowd other machines from the concrete while speeding into Highland, but the tourists had been permitted to go on their way. A filling station operator, east of Highland, told of seeing the two cars go by almost abreast during the chase.

Noser, 41 years old, lived at 6550 Beulah avenue with his wife and two children until yesterday when Mrs. Noser took the children to a relative's home at St. John's Station, St. Louis County, and Noser left for Chicago with his carpenter's tools and a grip of clothing in his car. Neighbors said the pair had had a quarrel.

Whisky Found in Auto.

When Noser's body was taken from the wrecked automobile, a pint bottle containing whisky was found at his feet. There were several wounds in the back of his head.

Two brothers of Noser went to Highland yesterday, identified the body and arranged for its removal to St. Louis for burial.

Easley, 22, has been a policeman since last May, having succeeded David McCain who was killed with an automobile thief in a pistol fight near the spot where Noser was slain. As a volunteer chauffeur, Easley accompanied McCain in a chase from Highland and sat at the steering wheel, unarmed, while McCain and the thief shot it out in a cornfield.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

WINS MAJOR HONORS AT SCOUT WINTER CAMP

Troop 60, Union Av. Christian Church, Victor for Third Time in Four Years.

For the third time in four years, major honors at the Boy Scout Winter Camp, held at the Irondale, Mo., reservation of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, Dec. 27 to 31, were carried off by Troop 60, of the Union Avenue Christian Church. Eight scouts from this troop, with their Scoutmaster Dr. Louis Renfrow, won not only the camp inter-patrol contest, but a majority of individual awards presented at the camp.

A clean sweep was registered in the individual achievement contests, scouts from Troop 60 taking first, second, third and fourth places. Six of the 15 Honor Campers and 10 of the 27 boys advancing in rank, were members of this troop. The troop's delegation represented only one-fifth of the 47 scouts, scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters in camp.

The program at the camp was more varied than those of previous years. Contests were held in inter-patrol games, football games, handicraft, scouting projects, stunts, nature study and other scout activities, points being awarded to both the individual scouts and patrols winning these events. Points were also awarded for passing tests and winning merit badges.

Among the innovations at the camp this year were a snow fight, a skiing contest, and an all-day hike to the Big River near Wenda creek. While on this hike the scouts visited an old mill.

Thirty-six merit badges, three first-class, four star and two life scout badges, were awarded at the first court of honor ever held at a winter camp. The court, which was conducted by three members of the St. Louis City Court of Honor, Hermann Schwarz, T. T. Cook and George Danforth, was held Tuesday evening, to present awards won at the camp.

The two life scout badges went to Scoutmaster Dr. Renfrow and to Scout James McIntosh, both of Troop 60. The star awards were presented to Assistant Scoutmaster Loren Syler, Troop 60; Scout Edgar Commander, Troop 60; Scout Bert Cain, Maplewood 5, and Scout Fred Kemp, Troop 6.

Merit badges were won by Harrison Beste, 60; Jack Hunt, 205; Bob Carp, 30; Myron Cook, 90; Francis Schwartz, 151; John Zuzack, 51; Jerry Manning, 60; Otto Hacke, Webster Groves 7; Joe Codeno, 190; Carl Bay, Webster Groves 3; Joe Barr, 60; Robert Buckrucker, 39; Charles Lorenz, 60; Marshall Matteson, 60; Bobby Rederer, 30; Joe Glaser, 90; Jack Talley, 102; Albert von Hoffmann, 152; Homer Linzee, 345, and Bert Cain, Maplewood 5. Joe Barr, 60; Albert von Hoffmann, 152, and Myron Cook, 90, received first-class badges.

James McIntosh and Jerry Manning, both of Troop 60, and William Buehl, Troop 39, received honor camper awards for the third time. Marshall Matteson, 60; William Sippey, 126, and Le Roy Lane, 101, received similar honors for the second time, while Dr. Renfrow, 60; Charles Lorenz, 60; Loren Syler, 60; James Delano, 2; Sanford Rederer, 30; Ferd Gast, 39; Alfred Fleischer, 90; Morty Pareira, 90, and Harry Siemer, 58, won honor camper badges for the first time.

Troop Notes

West District.

Four West District troops are due to reregister during January: Troop 13 of St. John's Methodist Chuch; Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A.; Troop 79 of the Union M. E. Church, and Troop 113 of the Church of the Messiah. All of these troops have reported that their reregistrations will be completed and turned into Scout Headquarters by Jan. 10.

Three second class badges, three first class badges, and two merit badges were presented at a Troop Court of Honor held by Troop 17 of the First United Presbyterian Church last week. A. O. Wilson, Deputy Commissioner Fred Goldtrap and Chairman M. I. Harvey of the troop committee presented the awards. This court was the second the troop has conducted.

Eleven scouts and Scoutmaster Dr. L. H. Renfrew of Troop 60 of the Union Avenue Christian Church attended the Winter Camp

● A real, little girl—a real story—and real proof that children like cod-liver oil this emulsified way

You mothers—who know what marvels cod-liver oil can do for youngsters, but can't get yours to take it without a lot of coaxing and trouble—listen to this! Vergean Allen, the merry-faced child above, has a wonderful hint for you.

Vergean, you see, has never liked plain cod-liver oil. So when we called at her home recently, at 16 Livingston Ave., Yonkers, N. Y., Mrs. Allen gladly agreed to let Vergean try some Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil.

Vergean took a spoonful. Then her worried eyes started to twinkle. "It tastes good!" she smiled. "I wouldn't mind taking more."

Pleasanter to take—but that isn't all

Pale, thin, run-down children—they need cod-liver oil. Give it to them the pleasantest way—give them Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion hasn't that strong "fishy" taste. It doesn't upset even delicate stomachs. It brings you purest, Norwegian cod-liver oil in its pleasantest form—a perfect emulsion. Easier to take—easier to digest. Almost immediately the body absorbs the health-giving vitamins—and the assimilation is complete. You get more good out of Scott's Emulsion and you feel the benefits quicker.

Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the growth-promoting vitamin that helps guard against disease. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin that prevents rickets. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. This gives Scott's Emulsion a special advantage for growing children, infants, nursing and expectant mothers. Get Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil to-day, at your nearest druggist. Watch cheeks grow rosy. See youngsters gain new weight and sturdiness.

at Irondale last week. The camp ended New Year's eve.

Scouts Stewart Young, Joe Landau and James Thornhill of Troop 94 of St. Barbara's Church, advanced to Star Scout rank recently, while Scout Leiber was presented with his Tenderfoot pin at an Investiture Ceremony held at a Christmas party given by the troop Dec. 18. Twelve scouts and Assistant Scoutmaster Kenneth Else hiked to the troop camp grounds last Sunday.

South District.

A new South District troop, Troop 115, has been organized at the St. Mary Magdalen Catholic Church, under the leadership of Scoutmaster K. I. Gannon and Assistant Scoutmaster Larry Collins. Nine scouts were present at the first meeting, held last Monday evening. The Troop Committee is composed of the Rev. William F. Mullally, Frank E. Bergin, J. P. Lenney, J. J. Kane, William V. Schreiber, and Joseph F. Schroeder.

Troop 20 of the Holy Family Church performed a Christmas good turn by preparing 18 bushel baskets of food for needy families Christmas day. The baskets were distributed by the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

The scouts of Troop 106 of the Second United Presbyterian Church, were given a party by Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. Pfeffer, 4407 Shaw avenue, as a surprise for their son, Philip Jr. The party was opened with a serenade to Scout Pfeffer by the troop harmonica band. The evening was spent playing games and eating ice cream, candy and nuts. The harmonica band also gave a concert.

The scouts of Troop 247, of the Froebel School, held a Christmas party Dec. 17 for the scouts, parents and friends. Scoutmaster and Mrs. Sparwasser, members of the troop committee, parents of the scouts, and the scouts themselves all received gifts. Two talks were given, one by Committeeman Flanagan, and the other by Field Executive C. H. Laemmli. Refreshments were also served. The troop provided food, clothing and toys to a family of 11 Christmas day.

Central District.

Twenty-five scouts and the scoutmaster of Troop 167 of the Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church attended a Christmas party held by the troop, Dec. 23. There were patrol games and stunts, followed by refreshments.

North District.

One first-class and three second-class awards were presented at a Troop Court of Honor conducted by Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church a week ago Friday evening. The presentation, which was witnessed by a crowd of parents and friends, was made by the Troop Committee. This was the first court of honor the troop has held, but plans have been made to conduct these courts regularly hereafter. An interpatrol contest in handicraft was won by the Lion patrol.

Suburban District.

Troop Pacific 1 of Pacific, Mo., performed a Christmas good turn by collecting a truckload of clothing and distributing it to needy families Christmas Eve. The troop is planning a similar good turn again for the near future.

Missouri Boy is Healthiest

"MY little son, Carl, suffered from constipation," says Mrs. Rose Radder, 1323 Blair Ave., St. Louis. "He was having a hard time of it until I learned about California Fig Syrup and got some. It regulated his bowels, brightened him up; seemed to help him a great deal.

"Since then I have used Fig Syrup with my son during colds or upsets. It has been a wonderful help to him; has assisted in making him the strong boy you see—perhaps the healthiest one in our neighborhood."

Keeping the bowels from becoming irregular during colds, or children's diseases is half the battle. Most any doctor will tell you that. And nine times out of ten he'll tell you there's no safer, more pleasant and effective way of doing this than by using pure vegetable California Fig Syrup.

Whenever a child shows by unpleasant breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, lack of energy and appetite that his bowels need cleansing, a little of this rich, fruity product will have him right in a jiffy. Weak stomach and bowels are strengthened by it. Appetite is increased. Digestion is assisted. The bowels become regular and remain that way.

A parent's task is lots easier when California Fig Syrup is used. Any child accepts it eagerly. It is safe for infants; effective for children and grown-ups too. The genuine endorsed by doctors for 50 years, bears the name California. So look for that when buying and avoid imitations which may not act the same.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Makes One Look Younger

Men and women who used to be called Grandpa and Grandma are now setting the styles by darkening their gray hair at home.

For instance, J. A. McCrea, a well-known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half-pint of water, add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

England's System of Doles For Unemployed Is Called Staggering Burden of Fraud

Politics Blamed for Creating Long Array of Evils Instead of Blessings Expected from State Insurance Against Idleness—Premium Put on Laziness.

By C. Patrick Thompson.

English essayist and magazine writer on political and industrial problems of the times. He was a captain in the English tank corps during the war and since peace has been engaged in authorship in London.

TWENTY years ago unemployment insurance was adopted in England. It was going to iron out the unemployment situation caused by the advance of a machine civilization. Statesmen and economists hailed it as a reform destined to invigorate and nourish the industrialized state. Now, under its first real test, it is behaving like an abscess under the national tooth, seeping poison into the national blood stream, sapping vigor, vitality and morale.

The remedy is obvious. Have the tooth out. But there is a difficulty. It is a difficulty not peculiar to England, but of interest to all democratic peoples who themselves have industrial civilizations and the employment problems arising therefrom.

The physicians around the patient being politicians, not scientists, cannot agree either on diagnosis or treatment. Says one: "Poor fellow, the shock would be too much for his nervous system." Says another: "We must be careful or complications may set in." Says a third, voicing a common apprehension: "He's a powerful, violent fellow. Suggest the dentist and he may start up and break our political necks."

Meantime, the patient groans, curses and complains, and the poison goes on working.

How far the damage to the general organism has gone is one of the chief topics of debate among the patient's friends. The patient is also conducting an intensive self-examination. The damage to his pocket is less obscure. Solvent on this disease account until a year ago, he has abruptly plunged into debt to the tune of $350,000,000. His expenditure on this account exceeds his income by $3,500,000 a week. He averts his mind from a contemplation of the situation in 1931. The only certainty he or anyone else can perceive is that unless he gets that abscess attended to he is going to get worse before he gets better, and he may be permanently weakened because of it.

Summary of Evils.

We now may say good-by to the metaphor and note that a list of the unsatisfactory points disclosed by the dole system under its first big test would fill several columns. Glance at the high lights:

It tempts employers to work short time and throw the cost of maintaining their workpeople on the fund. It tends to make unscrupulous employers and employes try to extract as much as they can from the fund. It tends to demoralize youth by making him a dole drawer (from the age of 16) before he has time to become a wage earner. It keeps at home a younger generation who ought (in an overcrowded island) to be thinking of migrating. It gives seasonal workers pocket money when they ought to be rousting about for other jobs. It snaps the workers' independence, sense of thrift and self-reliance. It maintains married women who ought to be kept by their husbands. It tempts the weak and foolish into petty fraud. It encourages labor immobility at a time which loudly demands labor mobility and makes it increasingly difficult for employers getting under way with new enterprises to get the skilled labor that they need and encourages labor specialization in an age which more and more demands the adaptable allround man.

It docks the wages of the fully employed and the energetic and the versatile workman and pays the money into an insolvent fund, whence a good proportion of it is doled out to unemployables, scamps, persons who have been unemployed for many months and have properly fallen out of the insurance scheme altogether, thriftless workmen who have earned good wages and not saved, a large body of permanent unemployed who will never get jobs again in their special fields but refuse to uproot, boys and girls of 16 and 17 who are offered (to their surprise) something for nothing by the State and take it.

Unions Started It.

This appears to be a formidable indictment, but we are here concerned with liabilities which have been exposed. On the asset side one may say generally that the smooth working of genuine relief can too easily be thrown into shadow by the strong light that beats upon the abuse of the dole. It may be timely to observe that we deal here with a system and that it is the system and not the British worker as an individual and as a class that we survey.

This unemployment insurance system, the so-called dole, which England operates in an attempt to insulate her people from the shocks of recurrent slumps in the trade cycle, represents the latest stage in an organic growth which began with the rise of machine industrialism last century.

Back in last century we find the trade unions and friendly societies pioneering insurance against unemployment. It was one of the big discoveries that the early organizers made. They found they could get new members and hold trade societies together by helping their members in seeking employment and by making allowances to them in seasons of slack trade. There were no abuses under this system. The union leaders, stern guardians of the union treasury, saw to that. So also did the union members, who had to work for the dollars and cents they contributed.

The big safeguards then were a waiting period and rates of benefit insufficient for the subsistence of a family. In the waiting period the worker had to live on his own reserves. That made him save against a rainy day and stopped him from looking on the union unemployment fund as a sort of rich uncle who would pay his debts when he got in a mess.

Well Managed, Then.

The argument behind keeping the benefit rate under the family subsistence scale was to increase the urge of the man to find work (some unions made a special traveling allowance to help their men look for work outside their home locality) and prevent him from dropping a wife and an unlimited number of children onto the union fund, in which all were interested.

In brief, the worker had to stand on his own feet. His fighting spirit was not undermined. His hard fiber was not softened. He was encouraged to preserve his sense of individual responsibility. His family were kept looking to him and not to any body behind him, a union or the state, for the meal ticket when the labor market failed in that locality.

The years between 1904 and 1908 were slump years. The treasuries of the trades unions were gutted. Liberals—they look like conservatives now, but they were very radical then, and Lloyd George was in his heyday, baiting the dukes and bringing in a peoples' budget—were in power. They wanted to get the state into the business which had so stimulated the growth of the trades unions.

This unemployment insurance sounded socialistic. But when you got down to it with accountants and actuaries and examined the benefit records of the chief unions you found that the risk was measurable and could be insured against at a moderate premium like any other risk. The grandiose idea of pooling the unemployment risks of all the workers and replacing the old trade union machinery by a modern plant—a nation-wide labor exchange system and a compulsory system of contributory insurance, with the employer paying 5 cents, the worker 5 cents and the state 3 cents—looked fine.

How Fund Is Supported.

It was accordingly put through as an experiment scheme three years before the war. Only 2,500,000 workers were covered by it. They were in trades which statistics showed were especially liable to periodic fluctuations of prosperity.

There were also various safeguards on the lines of the old self-help union principle—a waiting period of a week before the benefits began, no benefit payable to anyone under 17, 10 contributions by the worker before he was entitled to any benefit, one week's benefit and no more for five contributions, no more than 15 weeks' benefit in any year. So most dole schemes start. How they end is another matter.

The system is and always has been a tripartite one, with the worker contributing his quota (now 14 cents), his employer his (now 16 cents) and the state its (now a sum amounting to half whatever the combined contribution of worker and employer amounts to). But notable changes have occurred. For a start the scheme has been kicked clean off its actuarial and insurance basis and is now in the blue.

Trade goes in cycles. The framers of the scheme recognized that. They called in actuaries and were advised that their scheme was actuarially sound, in the sense that income and expenditure would balance over a period of from 10 to 15 years, including good, bad and average experiences of employment. If unemployment was light a reserve would be accumulated in the fund, which could be drawn upon later on, when the toll of the jobless increased. Conversely, a deficit occurring in earlier years of the cycle would be met by advances from the exchequer—i. e., the taxpayer.

Mounting Costs.

So far, so good. What had been foretold occurred. One year the fund was out about $50,000,000. Another year it was in $100,000,000. But that was long ago.

As I have said, the fund can borrow from the exchequer in hard years. The exchequer takes it from the taxpayer (and doesn't pay him back). The limit of this borrowing was fixed by Parliament at $150,000,000. No one thought more than this could ever be needed. However, last fall the limit was raised to $200,000,000, and it went up $50,000,000 at a time until in November's last week it was notched up amid roars of protest from the Opposition representing the taxpayers who have to foot the bill, to $350,000,000.

And this colossal overdraft sees the fund through only until the end of 1930. In theory this loan will be repaid. In fact, it will be collected in cash from the taxpayers next year, and it never will be repaid. It would require 20 years of boom conditions, approximating those America enjoyed for the first post-war decade, to accumulate in the fund a surplus big enough to wipe out the overdraft.

And, so far from booms being in sight, many observers say that England, and indeed, most industrial states, have reached a point where they will have to face for many years a permanent unemployment problem. Owing to the progressive elimination of human labor by the machine and improved processes generally.

Apart, then, from what has come into the fund through 1930 from the contributions of employers and workers plus the graduated state grant and has been paid out again in doles, the State has had to find an additional $335,000,000, and is handing this bill to the small body of income tax payers (incomes of more than $2500 number less than half a million in Britain).

Headed for Bankruptcy.

All this has come as a shock and a surprise to the island folk outside the Labor-Socialist circle (and they are pretty sick, although for other reasons). Which only goes to prove that, as Einstein demonstrated, things are not always what they seem. The level road upon which the statesmen, sociologists, mathematicians and economists thought they had set their scheme to run proved not to be level at all, but really a long and steady decline which took a steep tilt as soon as a strong radical element crowded into a front seat in the political arena. The whole scheme is now tobogganing toward bankruptcy, having passed the insurance and actuarial straight and narrow months ago at high speed.

Those actuaries have been all wrong. Nowhere were they more wrong than in their anticipation nine years back that one-third of the insured population would cut loose from the general scheme by "contracting out" by industries. Only two white collar industries got out from the general plan by forming their own schemes and getting them approved. These were the banking and insurance workers, totaling only 226,000 persons all told.

It would bore you—it bores England—to trace its progressive deterioration. The tale is one of benefits gradually extended and conditions and restrictions pogressively relaxed until today practically anybody, male or female, from the age of sixteen up can demand a job to suit him or the dole for himself and his dependents, not excluding his mistress. In case that last looks like a slip, I repeat, not ex-

One Out of 50 Pays Income Tax

Number Paying on $5000 and Less Steadily Decreases as Does Their Aggregate Income, While Both Income and Numbers Go Up in Higher Brackets of Wealth.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.

A WITTY Englishman has said that there is only one thing worse than having to pay income tax, and that is not having to pay it.

Nearly 98 per cent of the people of the United States, insofar as Federal taxation is concerned, are in the more deplorable of those two plights. That is to say, about 98 per cent have incomes which are so low as not to require a return to be made to the Federal Government, or which, if a return is made, are non-taxable because the net income is exceeded by specific exemptions.

The Treasury's Statistics of Income for the calendar year 1928, made public this week, show returns for that year totaling 4,070,851, but of these only 61 per cent, or 2,523,063, were taxable. Thirty-nine per cent, or 1,547,788, were non-taxable for the reason stated. Those who actually paid Federal income taxes numbered slightly more than 2 per cent of the estimated population of 120,000,000 for 1928.

To understand the Treasury's income tax tables, it is necessary to know something of the law under which the tax is levied. The revenue act now in effect requires a return to be made by every person whose gross income for the calendar year preceding the return amounted to $5000 or more, or whose net income amounted to (a) $1500 if single or if married, and not living with husband or wife, or (b) $3500 if married and living with husband or wife.

Deductible Items.

The gist of all this, in the simplest possible terms, is that a single person or a married person living singly is entitled to a personal exemption of $1500, while a married person living with husband or wife, may claim $3500. The larger exemption may be claimed also by an unmarried person who can qualify as "head of a family." In addition, the taxpayer is entitled to a credit of $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) under the age of 18, or incapable of self-support, who was receiving his or her chief support from the taxpayer on the last day of the taxable year.

There are various other provisions, but these are the essential ones on the subject of exemptions. They are clearly set out on the next income tax blank—that for the year 1930.

The taxpayer first puts down his gross income for the year—from salaries and wages; income from business or profession; rents and royalties; profits from the sale of real estate, stocks and bonds; dividends, etc. He is then entitled to make certain specified deductions—for interest paid; taxes paid; losses by fire and storm; bad debts; contributions, etc. The amount remaining after he has made his deductions is his statutory net income.

In the returns which the Government received from 4,070,851 persons for the calendar year 1928, the total income reported was $28,987,634,519. Deductions were made amounting to $3,761,307,607, leaving net income of $25,226,326,912.

Saved by Exemptions.

Against the taxpayer's net income are figured the exemptions to which he is entitled—$1500 for a single person, $3500 for a married person, $400 for each child, and so on.

Now in the case of 1,547,788 of the persons who made returns for 1928, the exemptions exceeded the net income, so that they had no tax to pay. The total net income of this group, before exemptions, was $4,194,692,822, and this is included, of course, in the total of $25,226,326,912 which the Treasury tables show as the total net income reported for 1928. The taxes which the Government received for the year were paid by 2,523,063 persons who had a total net income before exemptions, of $21,031,634,090.

More than one-fifth of this amount, or $4,451,207,085, was reported by 15,977 persons whose net incomes of $100,000 or more entitled them to be rated as millionaires.

Million Dollar Incomes.

More than one-twentieth of the amount, or $1,108,863,041, was reported by 511 persons having net incomes of $1,000,000 or more.

More than one-one-hundredth of the amount, or $253,359,358, was reported by 26 persons having net incomes in excess of $5,000,000.

To a very large extent, those who escaped paying any taxes on their reported net incomes did so by reason of their personal exemptions and credits for dependants, though in the $5000 to $6000 bracket and upward the provision allowing deductions on account of net loss for prior year was also operative. Personal exemptions and credits for dependents, for all brackets, amounted to $11,859,161,174, of which $5,474,177,001 was in the class of untaxed incomes. Net loss for prior year gave credits amounting to the comparatively small sum of $33,616,475.

Taxed and Untaxed.

The following table shows the numbers of those who did and who did not pay taxes in the various income classes:

	Taxed.	Untaxed.
Under $1000	12,250	98,873
$1000 to $2000 ..	498,828	419,619
$2000 to $3000 ..	458,326	379,455
$3000 to $4000 ..	253,673	450,040
$4000 to $5000 ..	334,815	154,085
$5000 to $6000 ..	208,347	22,763
$6000 to $7000 ..	141,608	9,324
$7000 to $8000 ..	101,420	5,940
$8000 to $9000 ..	73,895	4,199
$9000 to $10,000	57,780	3,490

In the classes higher than these, there were none whose exemptions exceeded net income.

All this, of course, takes no account of the taxes which are escaped through ownership of tax-exempt bonds—a subject to which Mr. Mellon has sorrowfully alluded in several of his annual reports. That is another story. Suffice it for the present that the total amount of such securities reported for 1928 in returns of net income of $5000 and over was $5,374,000,693, and the total interest received was $268,192,852.

It is interesting to see how these securities were distributed. For example, the 231,110 persons in the bracket from $5000 to $6000 held $98,100,562 worth, and the 150,932 in the bracket from $6000 to $7000 held $93,873,234 worth. By contrast 7049 persons in the bracket from $100,000 to $150,000 had tax-free securities valued at $464,707,051, while the 26 at the very top of the heap—those with incomes of $5,000,000 and more—had a similar investment totaling $214,422,426.

Growing Concentration.

Indicative of the way in which the wealth of the United States is tending toward concentration at the top are the figures for the years 1925 to 1928, showing the number of those making returns and the amount of net income in each of the several brackets.

The number of returns in the $1000 to $2000 class for 1925 was 1,071,992, and the net income reported by this group was $1,774,601,508. In 1926 the number dropped to 1,045,519 and the income dropped to $1,747,917,122. In 1927 the number dropped to 996,098 and the income to $1,645,575,700. In 1928 the number dropped to 918,447 and the income to $1,526,831,937.

These figures are comparable with the following for the group paying taxes on incomes of $1,000,000 and above:

	Number of Returns.	Net Income.
1925 ...	207	$ 422,456,852
1926 ...	231	494,393,917
1927 ...	290	600,640,846
1928 ...	511	1,108,863,041

For these four years, the number of persons making income tax returns remained fairly constant, at a little more than 4,000,000. For 1927 it was 4,101,547, and for 1928 it was 4,070,851, a decrease of 30,696. The somewhat smaller group for 1928 had net incomes of $25,226,326,912, or $2,681,236,359 more than the net income for 1927.

Where Riches Increase.

Where did this increase go? Not to the class under $1000, where the total net income between 1927 and 1928 fell from $72,230,684 to $64,535,224. Nor to the class between $1000 and $2000, where the net income fell from $1,645,575,700 to $1,526,831,937. Nor to the class between $2000 and $3000, where the net income fell from $2,062,275,084 to $2,030,900,943. Nor to the class between $3000 and $5000, where the net income fell from $4,700,816,426 to $4,648,097,736.

It is not till we get into the bracket from $5000 to $10,000 that the increase begins to be seen. From that point forward the comparisons are as follows:

$5,000 $10,000	$3,895,759,157	$4,282,520,130
$10,000 to $25,000	3,748,057,507	4,037,853,104
$25,000 to $50,000	2,051,770,684	2,326,502,829
$50,000 to $100,000	1,535,387,374	1,857,877,924
$100,000 to $150,000	636,018,520	850,450,966
$150,000 to $300,000	787,270,255	1,157,131,081
$300,000 to $500,000	431,121,727	663,900,326
$500,000 to $1,000,000	378,166,589	670,861,671
$1,000,000 and over	600,640,846	1,108,863,041

To recapitulate: Out of a population of about 120,000,000 in 1928, there were about 4,000,000 persons, or one in every 30, with sufficient income to require them to make a Federal income tax return to the Government.

One Out of Fifty.

Out of these 4,000,000 persons, there were about 2,500,000, or one in every 50 of the population, whose incomes were such as to require payment of Federal income taxes.

Out of these 2,500,000 persons, there were about 16,000 millionaires, or one in every 7500 of the population, with a combined net income of nearly $4,500,000,000, or more than 20 per cent of the income reported by the 2,500,000.

Out of these 16,000 millionaires, there were 511 persons, or one in every 250,000 of the population, whose combined income was well over $1,000,000,000, or 5 per cent of the income of the 2,500,000.

Out of the fortunate 511, there were 26 at the top, with incomes of more than $5,000,000 each and a combined income of over $250,000,000.

The income of the 26 was four times as great as the income of the 111,123 with net incomes of $1000, and less—and these 111,123, lowly though their rank in the income-tax scale, were yet among the financial aristocrats of the nation.

Not Another Great War Soon, Despite Ominous Rumblings, Is Belief of Lloyd George Europe Dividing Into Two Camps on Question of Peace Treaty Revision—Financiers Abroad Look to America for Start of Business Revival.

By David Lloyd George.
(Copyright. 1931.)
LONDON, January 3.

EUROPE parted company with 1930 with the same sort of satisfaction as when one says "adieu" to a sulky and disagreeable traveling companion. In trade and finance it was for Europe a year of unbroken and deepening gloom. In international relations, one of growing misunderstanding and menace.

The thick fog that rolled over from the West in October, 1929, shows no sign of lifting from either East or West. The news from America is discouraging and is having a depressing effect on our markets on this side of the Atlantic.

The very doubt which seems to be deliberately fostered as to the magnitude of the disaster in America in itself increases the alarm. In Great Britain and Germany the worst facts about unemployment from week to week are known and published with fearless accuracy. The only doubt that exists in Great Britain is as to whether some thousands have not crept onto dole who ought never to be there. But even including these, we know that as a maximum there are 1,702,952 men and women wholly out of jobs and 494,798 working on half time.

We also know that the German unemployed have now reached nearly 4,000,000. Our endeavors to get at the true state of facts in America are not prompted by the human curiosity of the man in trouble to find out whether his neighbor has not been harder hit than he has. The reason is of a different character. The slump started in America and there is a firm conviction in all lands that the revival must also start from that quarter.

Revival Dates Differ.

The business men of Europe are gazing at the western sky for some signs of the rising sun in the direction where it sank. Signor Mussolini gave expression to this general opinion and expectancy in his speech in the Italian Senate on unemployment. He attributes Italian depression to the Wall street collapse of October, 1929. He, however, saw signs of a revival in America; and he predicted that this revival would be as sudden and violent as the crisis, and that when it came it would extend to the whole world.

Business men and students of economics whom I have consulted here are not so sanguine. They can detect no signs of returning prosperity. Their view is that when these signs do appear the weather will clear very gradually and we shall not see an unclouded trade firmament for two or three years. A day or two ago I met a prominent business leader—shrewd and highly successful—and he told me that he had budgeted for three years' depression. But whether the Italian Duce's cheerful prophecy or the business world's dismal forecast will prevail in the year 1931 will soon show.

Business men are not always good judges of the imminence or the duration of trade depressions. They take long views of their own individual enterprises, but they are apt to take short views of the general position. If things go well in trade they cannot see a slump yawning 500 yards off.

Gold Not a Preventative.

On the other hand, if things are going from bad to worse and there is not a patch of blue sky to be seen, they are apt to see nothing but the prospect of a long Arctic night. In 1920 few even of the most capable amongst them in Great Britain foresaw ten years of unemployment right in front of them. I am inclined to believe that the fears which now obsess them of a very prolonged depression extending over two or three years, will be falsified. Still the change is not coming soon, and ere it comes we shall certainly pass through much worse times in Europe.

So far the deluge has not reached France—at least not severely. But she will not escape altogether. Her greedy accumulation of gold may well prove her undoing. The fate of America has shown that a high golden parapet does not keep out the waters of a flood. On the contrary, it just dams them in, once they break through. The restoration of trade depends on a freer circulation of international credit. But credit depends on confidence. Neither America, Great Britain nor France will invest their wealth in any enterprise abroad just now, because they have no confidence in the stability or prospects of other countries; and they are afraid of further shaking confidence at home if they part with their golden reserves. Even an enterprise in their own countries finds difficulty in attracting fresh capital. So seas and rivers are frozen with fear and commerce between the nations cannot move freely. Will anyone have the courage to turn on the icebreakers and clears a fairway for trade between the nations? The lowering of the bank rate in America is a wise and courageous action and must help.

Politics Source of Worry.

The diplomatic situation in Europe is not calculated to restore confidence unless there is a visible improvement soon in international relations. Since the signing of the peace treaties the general outlook has not been so disquieting as it is now. During the disturbed conditions that unavoidably followed war, there was no danger of any general conflagration. The war spirit had burnt itself out. But it is welling up again, especially amongst the young men who saw nothing of war. On the continent of Europe wherever you go "the next war" is being freely discussed and groupings in that impending war are canvassed.

It seems too foolish to be credible. But there it undoubtedly is—a cauldron of suspicions, hatreds and fears. The disarmament discussions have been an elaborate sham. No country contemplates a serious reduction in its armaments. When the Soviet representative at the meetings of the Disarmament Commission proposed a resolution in favor of reducing military forces and of destroying great accumulated reserves of war material, a foolish chairman actually ruled him out of order and refused to allow the proposal to be recorded on the minutes. A worthy chairman of a fatuous commission.

Europe is already dividing into two camps—those who stand for the revision of the peace treaties and those who are opposed to any revision. This is how they stand today: Revisionist—Italy, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria; anti-revisionist—France, Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania.

Peace Guarantees

Russia, when the time comes for decision, I have no doubt will lean heavily towards revision. Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries will on the whole exercise a disinterested judgment. And I am confident that America, when the crisis comes, will exert the same influence.

But revision does not necessarily presuppose war. The treaty of Versailles contains in itself machinery for the peaceful revision of its own terms if the demand arises and a case is made out. The important element in the new situation is the fact that Germany is no longer isolated and that a conquerors' alliance can no longer trample upon her with impunity. This in itself affords a definite guarantee for peace.

No French statesmen will be in a hurry to repeat the rash venture of the Ruhr invasion. Even in 1924 it was a costly failure. Today it might end in disaster. A country which possesses no aggressive force may easily prove to be unconquerable on the defensive. Two countries which were easily overrun by Napoleon's legions ultimately cost him his empire. Between them they exhausted his strength. On the other hand, as Ludendorff has pointed out to his fellow countrymen, a disarmed Germany is impotent for attack.

Russia Out of It.

Until Russia has finally surmounted her economic difficulties, she is not of much military or diplomatic use to her friends. Russia is not in a position to equip an army possessing any formidable striking power across her frontiers. At the present moment her finance will not run to cannon, ammunition and transport. That is why she failed in her attack on Poland in 1920. The comparative strength of the Russian and Polish armies remains what it was then. The Russian army is stronger than it was then but so is the Polish. The Russians are not on the lookout for military enterprises across their own borders.

They cannot afford them. That kind of venture would ruin the Five-Year Plan irretrievably. Her leaders know that quite well and therefore the proponents of world peace need not apprehend any disturbance from Soviet Russia for many years to come. Without Russia the revisionist powers can ac-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

River vs. Rail.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MANY people believe that river boats drawing eight feet can carry freight as cheaply as the big ships of the lakes and oceans. In a previous letter I showed that, due to shallow draft, current and meandering channels, ton-mile costs on the rivers must be much greater than on the deep waters, and expressed doubt that river transport is cheaper than rail transport.

This doubt is confirmed by the fact that, although a nine-foot channel has existed in the Mississippi, as far up as St. Louis, for many years, no volume of shipping of any consequence has developed.

Apparently, if the rivers have any advantage over the railroads in movement cost, it is offset by the ability of the railroads to set their cars on shippers' sidings, or convenient team tracks, and to move the freight with no rehandling in transit. I refer here to the kind of traffic which moves in solid carloads, the kind that water carriers are supposed to be able to handle to advantage.

"Cub Pilot" says that boats move with less friction than railroad cars. But other factors, including speed, affect transportation costs. The friction of a boat is proportional to the square of the speed, while the friction of a railroad car is constant at ordinary speeds. In order to keep the friction from becoming excessive, a boat must move at moderate speed, seldom over 10 miles per hour for freighters, while a railroad freight train can make 30 or 40 miles per hour without excessive friction. A big deep-draft ship can overcome this handicap in speed because of its low friction per ton, but the shoal-draft river boat is less favorably situated.

"Cub Pilot" produces figures to show that certain river boats can move a tremendous tonnage at a very low cost per ton mile. Then why don't they do it?

In the light of the evidence at hand, my view is that meandering, current-ridden rivers, deep enough only for boats of eight-foot draft, are practically worthless for cheap transportation. The Government engineers should be asked to estimate the cost of a genuine shipway from Lake Michigan to the Gulf of Mexico, following the Illinois and Mississippi Valleys. If this cost appears excessive, the rivers should be looked on as drainage ways, useful only for such transportation as can utilize them in their natural state.

Why Not St. Louis?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SINCE we seem, after an effort of some 20 years, unable to eliminate the smoky atmosphere of St. Louis, let us all help the Post-Dispatch in its fight for natural gas. Other cities are using natural gas. Why not St. Louis? We should at least be able to breathe nature's free air. We should rise up and refuse to permit a coterie of hungry profiteers who put private greed above the city's welfare to deprive us of it.

OLD SMOKY.

Kin Hubbard.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ALL lovers of American humor will greatly mourn the death of Frank McKinney Hubbard, whose humor was given to the world through the rustic character, Abe Martin. E. V. Lucas said recently, "I have deep admiration of Hubbard's genius as an aphorist, a satirist and a humorist."

It will not be amiss to quote one or two of his wisecracks: "One of the finest accomplishments is makin' a long story short." * * * "It's jest about :ot so a doctor a day is cheaper than apples." * * * "Never leave any alcohol around where there's a feller who says, 'We're better off without it.'" * * * "It's sweet to be remembered, but it's often cheaper t' be fergotten."

CYRIL CLEMENS.

In Three Months.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HAVING read your very pleasing announcement of Sunday, Dec. 21, that the crowned heads of Washington have passed the $116,000,000 public works bill and that Mr. Hoover has said actual employment can start in most cases within from one to three months, I wish to state that it looks like a safe bet for the house. Those of the unemployed who have not starved to death in the next three months will be too weak to work, and thereby save the country a nice, fat bankroll.

Lines on the Norris Incident.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

DENOUNCE, revile and drive him out;
Your shameful charge is just!
He has no place with knaves who flout
And sell a people's trust!

Pronounce him "bad Republican"—
Betray yourself by rage,
For he is true American—
The fault is in the gauge!

Aye, how that party's gauge has shrunk!
Too small for Norris' brow,
And Lincoln, too, would deem it sunk
A league beneath him now!

Remove such pillars from your halls—
Unsmirched, they shame your lust!
Remove them that the rotten walls
May crumble down to dust.

CHARLES J. SCHUSTER.

THE FLAWS IN OUR DEMOCRACY.

The Treasury report on personal and corporation income taxes, showing the rapid concentration of wealth in the hands of the few, exposes with vivid light the flaws in our democracy.

The period of prosperity from 1921 to 1929 shows not only a continual increase in the number of millionaires, but a vast increase in the wealth of the privileged few. The number of citizens with taxable net incomes of over $1,000,000 rose from 21 in 1921 to 511 in 1928, which was the climactic year in which the increase of large fortunes reached its greatest acceleration. The number of those who paid taxes on incomes of over $5,000,000 more than doubled from 1927 to 1928. They rose from 11 to 26. The number of individual fortunes paying taxes on incomes from $1,000,000 up practically doubled in every class in that year. These 511 billionaires are only .018 per cent of the 4,070,851 persons making Federal income tax returns, yet their income returns represent 4.4 per cent of the aggregate reported incomes. Taking all the returned incomes from $50,000 up, 1 per cent of the tax payers had 25 per cent of the earned income. These were about 43,000 citizens out of 120,000,000. The number of mere millionaires in 1928 was 15,977, nearly seven times the total of 1921.

Many who made returns on income paid no tax, on account of exemptions, but it is apparent that not more than 3 per cent of the total population had sufficient incomes to pay the tax. The mass of income tax payers paid on salaries and wages, but the few in the higher brackets paid out of the interest and dividends of accumulated wealth.

The significance of the report lies in the evidence of the rapid concentration of wealth, the vast accumulation of wealth in the hands of an extremely small percentage of the people. The figures are the more startling in this period of depression when we have a few thousand billionaires and millionaires in contrast with about 5,000,000 unemployed, without the means of subsistence. In the period of prosperity, with large numbers even then of unemployed workmen, the great corporations of the country paid enormous dividends in cash and stock to the few men who control the country's resources, finances, industries and commercial enterprises. In the richest country on earth, with a surplus of food, a surplus of clothing and of all the necessaries of life, we have millions on the edge of starvation, without the means to buy any of those necessaries.

Surely this is not the goal of that democracy in the vision of the fathers who founded the Republic. They foresaw a free constitutional government in which the rights of all would be carefully guarded and not equal wealth but equal opportunity would be assured to every citizen.

What is the cause of these startling contrasts in the economic life of the people? What cause can there be but privilege and advantage? Freedom of the individual, freedom to work out his own well-being, his own fortune without injury to others, served admirably to build up the greatness and the wealth of the United States. But individualism has run riot under laws favoring the grabbing and monopolizing of the country's resources and the exploitation of the people through privilege, until we have reached intolerable conditions, with the privileged few possessing nearly all the wealth of the country and the unprivileged many subject to their economic will. We have the billionaire rioting in wasteful expenditure at the top, and a growing number of the completely dispossessed at the bottom.

More disheartening than the contrast presented by the figures we have quoted is the apparent utter lack of a realization of the destructive drift in our economic life by the public men intrusted with the control of the Government. There is little evidence except on the part of a very few of any alarm at the drift or any recognition of the necessity of correcting fundamental causes of the distress of the many. Instead of reducing privileges that enrich the few, the controlling majority in Congress, with the approval of the President, has increased them. Legalized robbery through tariff taxes has been raised to a peak of privilege. The great corporate trusts controlling the country's resources, their distribution and their price, have a free hand to exploit the unprotected public. A new trust, striving to control practically the last of our resources, the Power Trust, is in the saddle, with excellent chances of achieving its greedy ends.

Expediency seems to be the end and aim of the dominating element in control at Washington. Immediate relief for the distressed starving millions, mostly futile, by the expenditure of public money and the increase of taxes, is the only method of meeting the situation that appeals to the Government. Let us feed the hungry till we muddle through this depression, and trust to luck for the future, seems to be the rule of governmental conduct. The vital things that have caused it and that are constantly growing worse are ignored.

Even in the international field conditions which contribute to our own distress are ignored. We close foreign markets by our tariff legislation for the benefit of the greedy few, and we try to squeeze war debts out of impoverished peoples on the verge of bankruptcy. There is no enlightened leadership, no progressive ideals or policies suggested, no thought of fundamental remedies which touch the vitals of economic evils, on the part of those who are in a position to undertake leadership.

We are not attacking our economic system, but we are arraigning those who are responsible for the flaws it has developed and who do not try to correct them. We are in mortal terror of agitation against the system, but do nothing to remove the causes of the agitation. We resort to force to suppress revolutionary utterances, and even free speech, without attempting to correct the abuses that provoke such utterances.

How long can our democratic and economic system survive under this drifting, cowardly, stupid policy?

A MISSOURI TRIBUTE TO PERSHING.

Gen. John J. Pershing holds high position on the honor roll of famous Missourians. Born and reared near Laclede, in Linn County, he attended and taught Missouri common schools and was a student at Kirksville Normal before launching forth on the military career which led to the Army's highest rank and an illustrious record of war-time service. Now some of his old neighbors in North Missouri have started a movement for a permanent and practical honor to Gen. Pershing. It is proposed to set aside a tract of some 3000 acres in the Locust Creek bottoms, near Laclede, for a State park and game refuge, to be named and maintained in his honor. Missouri will be honoring itself no less than its famous son in such a tribute while he still lives instead of waiting to do him posthumous honor.

THANKS.

The Nation's annual roll of honor for 1930 contains the following awards in journalism:

> The Editor and Publisher, for its quiet but unyielding defense of the rights of free speech and a free press.
> The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for maintaining its high standards of journalism, and particularly for its effective and unremitting battle to protect the people of Missouri from exploitation by public utility corporations.
> Louis B. Seltzer and Carlton K. Matson, editors of the Cleveland Press, who preferred jail to submission to a judicial tyranny that sought to silence them by injunction.

Naturally, we blush. It would be a great feat for any newspaper to protect the people of its state from exploitation by public utility corporations. They all need to be told what it means to give these corporations franchises, as they all need to be told what their rights are in dealing with the utilities. Since the late John B. Sheridan characterized the newspapers of Missouri as "God's fools" in the gullible practice of publishing the propaganda of the utilities, the people of Missouri have made encouraging progress. The publishers themselves have said through their press associations that they are no longer going to be the dupes of the corporations, and Missouri cities like Cape Girardeau, Fayette, Boonville and Salem have set the good example of enlightened self-interest in this important field. No more important step in self-protection against profiteers has been taken by the people of any state than that of the cities and towns of Missouri in organizing for common defense against extortion.

We will feel more deserving of a place on the Nation's roll of honor when we succeed in delivering the city of St. Louis from the clutches of these profiteers. The Detroit News had the satisfaction of helping to render this good service to the people of Detroit, from which franchise grabbers have been excluded for years. The coming of natural gas in Missouri has served to bring this matter to the front all over the State. Some of the Missouri cities granted franchises and so surrendered all control over service and rates. Others refused to do so, and others still will follow their courageous lead. Every city, whether big or little, can get all the service it needs from any utility by granting it a simple permit to operate. That is all it needs to do, and it is all any legitimate service requires.

Upon the other hand, a legislative grant of any kind delivers all control to the Federal courts under the law of the land. If the people of Missouri are learning that, and if they are resolved not to pull the cork under any longer for profiteers in electricity, water, gas, etc., we are very glad.

DR. LIPPMANN'S TESTIMONY.

Dr. Gustave Lippmann makes an interesting commentary on the economic geography of St. Louis in the magazine section of today's Post-Dispatch. Commenting on the Hoover Child Welfare Conference, he says, "The root of the problem is economic . . . It is so plain here in St. Louis. West of Grand boulevard the child can stand quite a bit, what with better air, more sunlight, better sleeping quarters, more play space. East of Grand—in the crowded quarters, I mean—he can stand much less—an attack of whooping cough and the child dies." This is the testimony of a child specialist with nearly 40 years of experience among the children of the rich and the poor.

It is obvious facts such as this that Dr. Lippmann insists we should not overlook in a program of child welfare. To face such facts squarely means, in Dr. Lippmann's opinion, the recognition of the necessity of certain economic adjustments along the line of Vienna's co-operative housing projects and the successful experiments in co-operative endeavor being undertaken in Denmark and Sweden. This clear and realistic perspective is particularly welcome at a time when it has been necessary to resort to every variety of makeshift relief in order that actual suffering and want shall be prevented.

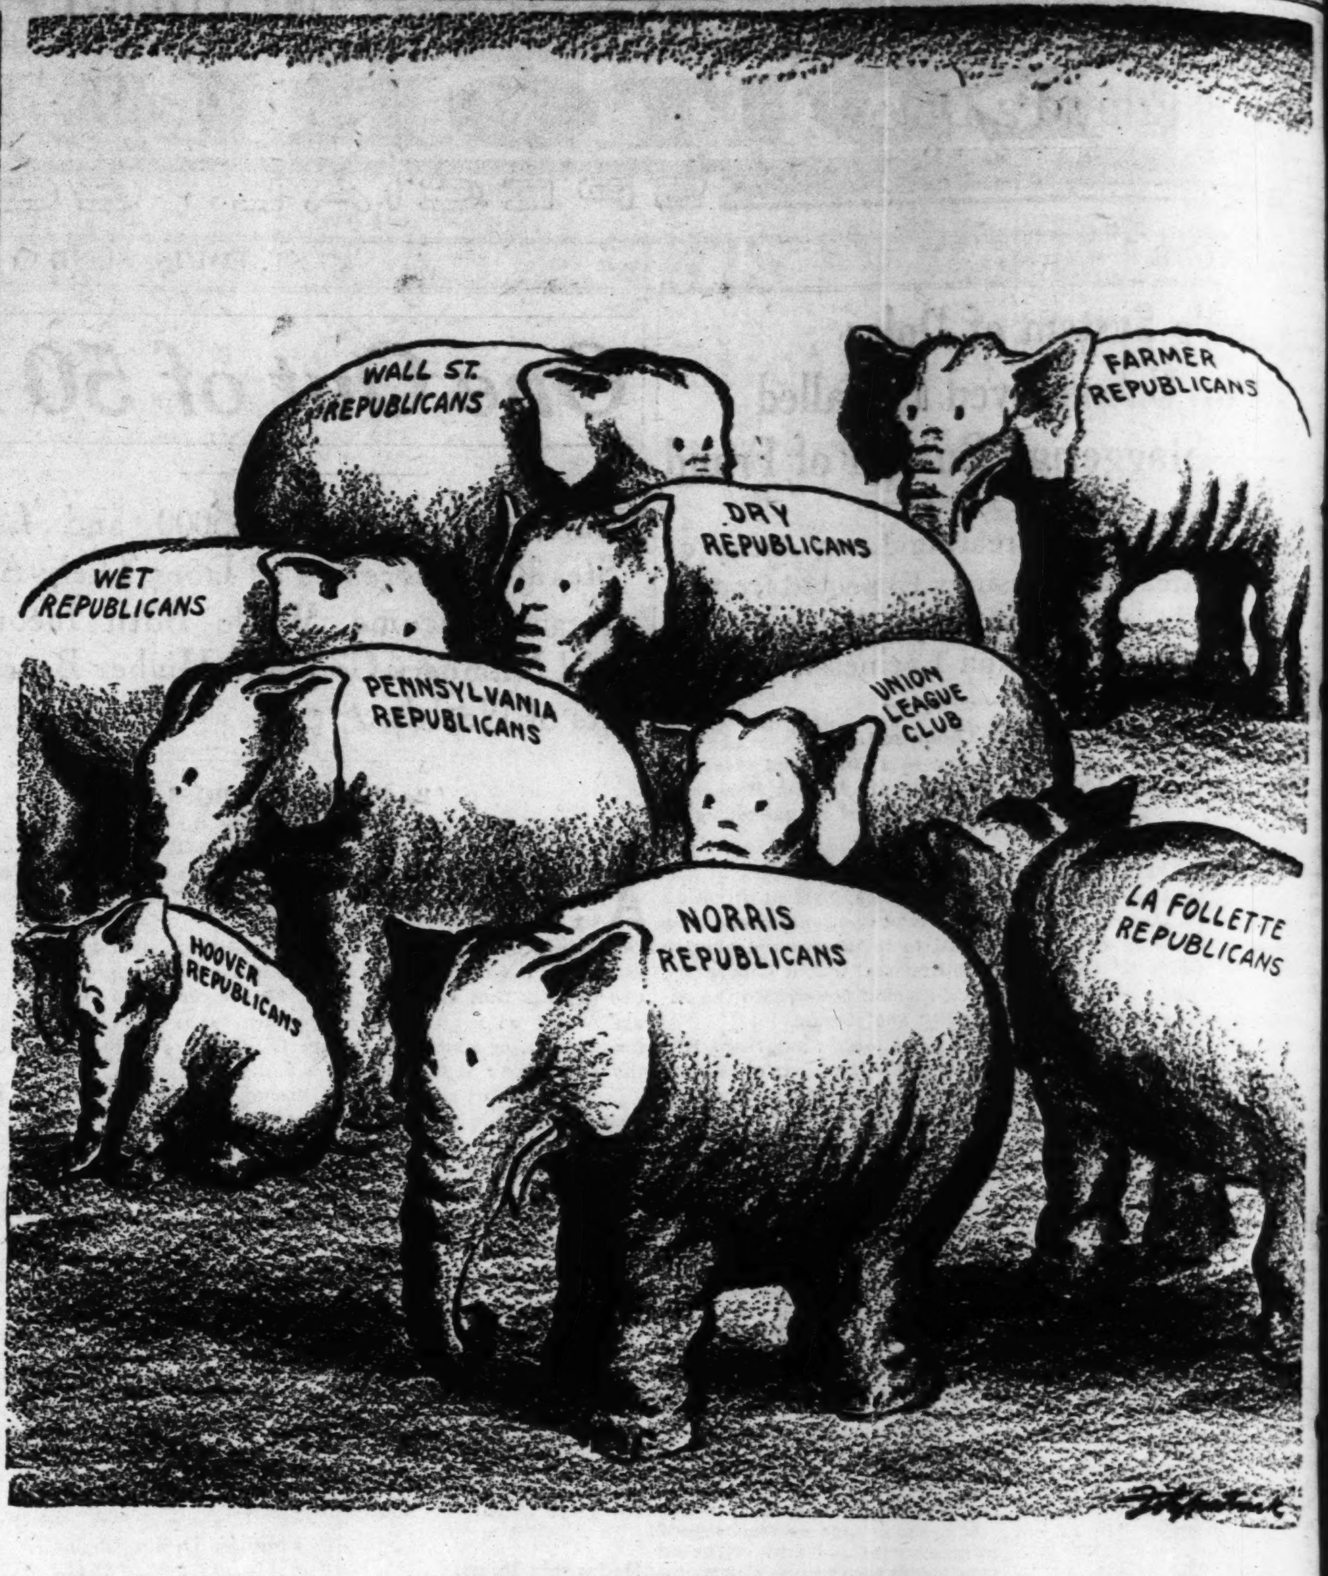
MARSHAL JOFFRE.

Marshal Joffre, who had had complete authority over the French army since 1911, became its Commander in Chief on Aug. 5, 1914, two days after Germany declared war. For a month it seemed as though the Germans were about to repeat the history of 1870, sweep aside the French resistance and march into Paris. As a boy, Joffre participated in the defense of Paris. As a greying veteran, he was again playing the role. When he failed to turn the German flank and was obliged to withdraw his left wing, his enemies—and they were numerous—began the long campaign for his removal. On Sept. 6, Joffre rallied his fading forces and drove the Germans from the Marne to the Aisne. That was the first decisive check to the German drive and Joffre became "the hero of the Marne."

Joffre's part in the victory was searchingly questioned, however, and his critics continued to demand his head. The war was going none too well. While the French had beat back the German push on the Yser, they themselves were unable to pierce the enemy line. The break in Joffre's power came after the battle of Verdun in 1916. In December, 1915, Joffre had been questioned by the ministry as to the adequacy of the fortifications at that key point and Joffre, always jealous of his authority and hostile to any interference, lost his temper and offered to resign. He was assured of the Government's confidence. Two months later, in February, the German army began the great battle of Verdun and, finding the defenses vulnerable, advanced eight kilometers in four days.

While Joffre held on until the end of 1916, he could not live down the Verdun incident, which seemed to support his critics in their repeated charges that the Commander in Chief was unfit for the job. In December, 1916, Joffre was replaced by Gen. Nivelle, who had distinguished himself by recouping French losses at Verdun, and Joffre was sent to the United States as a propagandist for the allies.

Despite the storminess of his army career and the bitter feuds in which he participated, Joffre enjoyed the affection of the French. They called him "Papa" Joffre. It will always be an interesting subject for speculation as to whether or not the French cause would not have been improved in the early days of the war if Nivelle or Foch had been given command. But no one can gainsay the fact that Joffre's task was one of the most exacting that has ever fallen to the lot of a military man.



WHY START A NEW PARTY?

A Gloomy View of European Politics

English journal thinks Western Europe is worse off today than it has been since evacuation of Ruhr; League must face vexing questions of disarmament and treatment of minorities; Germany, poverty-stricken, is demanding relief from exactions of Young plan; opportunity exists for bold British leadership.

From the Manchester Guardian Weekly.

THE international situation of Western Europe is today worse than at any moment since the evacuation of the Ruhr—one might even say since the armistice, because the difficulties of the early post-war years were always lightened by the knowledge that the war mentality would pass away in time.

It was thought that a new chapter would indeed open with the signing of the Locarno treaty and the entry of Germany into the League. That hope has been disappointed, and even the withdrawal of the last soldier from the Rhineland has left a situation which is profoundly disquieting. With the healing of the worst sores it has perhaps become even clearer that a possible basis of permanent peace has not yet been found, that there is no sufficient accord on fundamentals.

There is still the fatal gulf to be bridged between a dictated peace and a peace of concord, and the gulf between these two conceptions yawns more visibly and therefore more dangerously than it did. There is, perhaps, not a great number of years in which constructive bridge-making will still be possible. But our architects of peace at Geneva appear to know nothing of all this. They think, it seems, that they have all eternity in which to disband one soldier or redress one political wrong.

Disarmament and the treatment of minorities by the victor states are the two questions by which the sincerity and worth of the Council of the League of Nations must in the next few months be judged. The result depends upon Great Britain more than upon any other Power, because she is on the whole the most disinterested. But our representatives have hitherto shown themselves wholly unwilling to assume responsibilities which have, perforce and most disastrously, been discharged by Germany. We have made Germans feel that they have nobody but themselves to look to on the Council of the League for the enforcement of their rights. The strongest possible encouragement has thus been given to German Nationalist, anti-treaty and anti-League sentiment. Hitlerism is a product of Geneva.

The problems of disarmament and minority rights are now ripe for settlement. They cannot be postponed much longer. If in January the League Council, which has to fix the time of the conference, does not fix an early date, Europe will know that the Powers have no real intention of disarming.

The problem of the minorities has also become suddenly acute. The "pacification" of the Polish Ukraine and the conduct of the Upper Silesian election have opened the eyes of Europe to the treatment of minorities in Poland. Germany is bringing this before the Council in January. If nothing is done then, it will be known that the minorities treaties are a dead letter, that they cannot be enforced.

Between Germany and France there is no serious direct cause of friction, nor would there be between Germany and Poland if the League guarantees were effective. But in practice Poland is not amenable to reason because she can always fall back on the French alliance, not least in the League council chamber. And as long as Poland is fortified by French support, so long will German chauvinism flourish and Franco-German relations be on edge. Franco-German tension prevents disarmament and thus embitters German opinion, which crystallizes in Nazi or Stahlhelm militarism. It is a vicious circle which it is almost impossible to break. The one hope lies in bold English leadership. But it is not a good hope.

These difficulties are of long standing. Why, then, is the situation so much worse? For an immediate answer one need only turn to Hitler and his National Socialists. To the outsider the Nazis are just nationalist hooligans. That, it is true, is one side of their character, but it is only one side. In a vague, muddled and essentially dangerous way, like Italian Fascists in their early days, the Nazis are a party of economic revolt and of economic ideals. They hate modern capitalism and they hate the Young plan as an instrument of capitalism designed to enslave Germany. This may be a foolish view, but it is genuinely held.

It would not matter very much if Germany were prosperous. Actually, unemployment is near the 3,500,000 mark, and wages are being drastically reduced. It is not surprising that more and more Germans turn to this new party. The Nazis want to denounce the plan as slavery; the moderate parties fear that it may be necessary to declare a moratorium for reparation payments, as the plan allows Germany to do. There is all the difference between these two attitudes, but it is sometimes difficult for the foreigner to distinguish them.

Thus to the two political problems of disarmament and minorities is added the economic problem of the Young plan. On all these questions German opinion is at one in demanding some kind of relief. She asks that a term be put to the period for which she is the only great Power disarmed, that her kinsmen in Poland should be reasonably well treated, and that she herself should not be burdened with reparation payments which have proved too heavy. If the constitutional method of negotiation fails, then the movement toward the physical force solution of the Nazis will grow further. The political stability of Germany largely depends upon progress in disarmament and better treatment for minorities—to which we are, after all, pledged.

On the economic side the task is less clear, but none the less important. If Germany declares a moratorium, this must not be assumed to be a political maneuver, but must be examined on its merits. In general, it must be recognized that Germany's status is that of a great Power and not that of the chief of the defeated Powers. She is at present suing the League for rights which are hers even under the treaty of Versailles. But she will not sue forever. How long are we to suppose that Germany will remain a member of a League in whose capacity to do justice every day fewer Germans believe and in which they have so little ground for believing?

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.

DEATH has removed another familiar figure from the Hill—Frank Lester Greene, senior Senator from Vermont. This mild-mannered, kindly, modest man will be missed. Not so much, perhaps, because of spectacular activity in the Senate, for rarely did he stray far from the path of routine while he was a member of that body.

For some 18 years he served in Congress—six terms in the House of Representatives, the rest in the Senate. But at that, he was probably one of the least known men on the Hill.

It was a rare thing for him to make a speech on the floor. In the present Congress, not more than a half dozen times at the outside did he raise his voice in the Senate chamber. All of the time that the tariff bill was under discussion—the greatest verbal battle of recent times—he had a few words to say about sugar when that schedule came up. But that was all.

HE was one of the most regular attendants at sessions of the Senate. In his seat in the back row on the Republican side, between his two friends, Senator Gould of Maine on one side and Senator Gillett of Massachusetts on the other, he was content to listen. He always took a keen interest in what went on in the chamber. But for taking part himself—that was another thing.

It was a familiar sight to see him limp into the chamber, shaking hands with each of his colleagues as he made his way to his desk. His circle of friends around the Capitol was wide.

His limp was the result of a serious wound he received on a street near the Capitol several years ago when police and a liquor runner engaged in a running gun fight. Senator Greene tried to shield his wife, who was walking down the street with him, when he got in the path of a bullet which almost ended his life.

FOR a long time his life was despaired of. And, although he recovered, his body was badly crippled. Not only did he limp, but had little use of one arm. It was typical of the man that he made no attempt to exercise the influence of his position as a United States Senator to punish those who disabled him.

When the Spanish-American War came, as a Captain in the Vermont National Guard he recruited a company of infantry for this conflict. At the close of the war he was commissioned a Colonel and aid-de-camp on the staff of the Governor of Vermont.

In the Senate, Senator Greene was among the stanchest members of the old guard Republicans—a conservative of conservatives. No Republican Senator voted more regularly in support of party principles than he.

POISONING WILD GAME.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

FOR several years since vast amounts of captured German ammunition were dumped by the Government in Chesapeake Bay, an average of 10,000 wild ducks each year have been killed by phosphorus poisoning. Meanwhile Uncle Sam is spending a lot of money every year to "protect game birds." Beat that, if you can, as a reductio ad absurdum.

cluding his mistress, and by mistress I mean the "female person" (the official term) who lives with him without the formality of a preliminary marriage service.

Reasonable folk may wonder why the system continues when it is riddled with so many abuses and underlying evils. The answer requires only one word—politics. Reasonable folk may again ask whether politics cannot be kept out. The answer is "No." You cannot keep politics out of a fund controlled in a democratic state by the government of the day, a fund swelled by a state grant of (in practice) an unlimited amount, a fund today maintaining 2,500,000 people and covering 12,000,000 (all but a few voters, and some having wives who vote their way, counting two votes).

Politicians Stumped.

Having opened the fund wide to all comers by abolishing the last safeguards, including the "genuinely-seeking-work" clause, the present MacDonald Cabinet, unwilling to risk its political neck by tackling alone the mess it had got the fund into, invited the other two parties to co-operate. An all-party committee sat and inevitably failed to agree. The government's own economic advisory committee inquired intensively. All the material to justify immediate and courageous action was, however, at hand. All that was lacking was the will and the courage to act. Ramsay MacDonald threw the whole business into a royal commission, which is the traditional pigeonhole for any awkward question a British government doesn't want to tackle for quite a while. Every politician will sympathize with him.

The situation now is rather as if the representatives of the policy holders had got control of the board of an insurance company and the bank behind it, with this difference: That the bank behind the British insurance company is the income taxpayer, who takes longer to bankrupt than an ordinary bank.

This prying open of the fund has considerably added to the cost of maintaining the dole. In the November demand for an additional $50,000,000 to see the fund through December, it was disclosed that $20,000,000 was required for married women, seasonal workers and others who, as the Labor Ministry put it a year back, "are not really in the market as competitors for employment."

This means that motor coach drivers, serving girls in summertime cafes and the like get pocket money through their off season, no matter how much they were earning in their busy season. It also means that a woman who has kept her job after marriage or taken one after marriage gets the dole if she is out of a job without reference to what her husband, sons or daughters may be making.

How Dole Is Applied.

The dole is not enough to keep the genuinely unemployed from looking hard and anxiously for work. It is $4.25 a week for an adult male up to 65, plus $2.25 for his wife or any other one adult dependent upon him, plus 50 cents for every dependent child. (He may add union benefits to that). A woman gets slightly less and the grading is slightly different. For instance, she has at 21-25 year's class, when she gets only $3.75 a week dole. Males under 21 are graded 16-18 and 18-21 and (the insurance contributions all around being correspondingly lower) get $2.25 and $3.50, irrespectively. Girls under 17 get $1.25.

Still, among the 2,500,000 workers there is a section that prefers the dole to work and gets along; there are boys who draw the dole and live at home; there are married couples who both draw the dole; there are men who get odd jobs and earn maybe $5 or $10 a week and still draw the dole; there are a whole multitude of professional beggars, street singers, tumblers and what not, all drawing the dole.

Frauds are not easy to detect, and the will to detect them varies with districts. There was an experimental drive one year. Suspects amounted to 11,413. But evidence sufficient to warrant prosecution was found in only 1964 cases. Out of those 1964 cases convictions were obtained in 1844 cases. From which it may be gathered that the authorities have to be very sure of themselves before they move, and also that the fraudulent dole drawers have to be very stupid before they get caught.

A few sidelights on the dole from day to day may be illuminating. Here is a news item dated November: "There is too much of this sort of thing going on all over the country, and as far as possible it has got to be put a stop to," said Alderman Sir T. Vansittart Bowater, M. P., at the Mansion House (the city police court), when a number of men were convicted of obtaining the dole by false declarations of unemployment.

Abuses of System.

The English representative of a leading American banking house, who owns an estate in Kent, told me this story. He thought he would help the local problem a bit by expediting work on his garden. Through the local employment agency, he engaged 22 men, and on the agency's advice paid the minimum wage for that district. Visiting the garden on the first day after work had been started, he found the men idling and employing the most time-wasting method of doing the job. Accordingly, he took off his coat and went to work with them, showing them how things should be done. Next day eight of the 22 had decided to go back to the dole.

Evidence of a letter in an inquiry into the seasonal unemployment field: "During the three months' season in this south coast resort boarding houses, hotels, laundries, etc., employ numerous women, both married and single. At the end of the season these women are able to go back on the dole until the following summer and meantime can and do refuse opportunities for taking domestic employment." One may add that the newspaper columns are full of help wanted advertisements, although more than 600,000 girls and women are drawing the dole.

Note from London's East Side: A manufacturer decided to close his plant for three days. A deputation from the workers asked him to make the holiday a week. He asked why, and was told by the deputation that if the men were out of work a full week they could claim the dole.

Observation on anomalies' by Blanesburgh committee of investigation: A man has a daily job and adds to his earnings by doing portering or taking on a night job as a cinema attendant. He loses his regular job and is entitled to draw the dole while going on with his spare-time job. But if, jobless, he takes on any odd job that comes his way and declares it he loses his dole. Hence, losing his regular work he is encouraged to keep away from odd jobs (if they are likely to be found out) and becomes a regular dole drawer.

Plain Cheating.

Insight into collusion: A small employer says to a jobless man: "Here, you do a bit of work for me. I'll pay you $3 a week officially and slip you another $3. Then you can declare you are earning under $5 a week on a casual part-time job and draw your dole." This suits both worker and petty employer, the latter getting a part-time man to work for $6 a week plus the dole, instead of having to pay a man $10 or more for what would be a regular job.

Note for sociologists and moralists; During the war the British War Office paid army separation allowances to "a female person" living with a soldier as his wife. This practice dropped after the war. But the Labor Ministry picked it up and applied it to unemployment insurance. The union has to be on a bona fide domestic basis. Until the Blanesburgh committee overhauled the system two years back, the female person aforesaid was not required to qualify by acting as housekeeper or as a mother to the man's children as well as discharging the functions of a mistress. Now she has to so qualify.

These are odds and ends. In the broad field of getting rid of unemployment itself the dole puts on brakes and, operating under a radical free-trade regime, tends to perpetuate an economic system which makes unemployment. Low cost of living, gained by opening the home market to dumping and the products of slave labor, matters more than setting men to work. This ironical paradox can best be illustrated by quoting a passage from the last debate on unemployment in the British Parliament:

"To make the position still worse (it is a Tory critic speaking, but Oswald Mosley, J. H. Thomas and a bunch of other protectionist labor men echo him) the Chancellor of the Exchequer the other day removed duties from industries which were gradually picking up. The workers in these industries appealed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer not to do this, and the trades union representatives interested in those particular industries also appealed to him, but he paid no heed and only turned a deaf ear to them. He has always said that he wants to see men in employment with a high standing of living, as we all do, but when he had the chance of doing something to bring that about he did nothing. He reminds me of the man in a high position who was approached by a friend in trouble who told him his plight, and said: 'I have been robbed by the foreigners. I have lost my work. My family is starving and I have nothing to give them. I want work. Can you help me?' Having listened with much sympathy, the great man rang the bell on his desk and hope came to the heart of his visitor, but when the attendant came he merely said: 'Show this poor fellow out. He is simply breaking my heart.' That is the kind of sympathy that the Chancellor of the Exchequer has given to the men who are out of employment and want work."

As between direct taxpayers totaling under a million out of 50,000,000 and the mass of dole drawers, a radical regime does not hesitate to choose. Free trade radicals of the Snowden school argue that the workers' primary interest is a low cost of living maintained by a system of free imports. When it is argued that a worker would be better off earning $20 a week in a job and paying, say, 8 cents for a loaf of bread in a protected state, than drawing $5 a week dole and paying only 4 cents for bread they beg to differ.

The dole comes from the taxpayers. The taxpayer, the comfortable class, exists to be bled. If the taxpayer class makes money by utilizing labor in good times, it must be mulcted to maintain the jobless portion of labor in lean times. When political minds are bent this way the attack on the dole problem peters out, since the support of an attack on the employment problem itself is deliberately withheld.

Eleanor Rathbone, probably the leading authority in England on the whole subject, has said that no scheme of unemployment insurance can distinguish those genuinely seeking work from persons who are not anxious to try to get work. All the same, no responsible person suggests that the principle of unemployment insurance should be abandoned. It is regarded as a permanent feature of Britain's code of social legislation.

But many cirtics, Miss Rathbone among them, declare that the British system is hopelessly out of date, behind all the systems of unemployment insurance known to the civilized world. The Geneva men, who want international co-ordination, criticise it bitterly, for no other country but England could stand such a drain and keep solvent.

The British system is one of flat rate contributions and benefits, with the state's contribution levied through income taxes on the higher range of income. Continental countries, on the other hand, either divide their unemployed into groups according to their industrial status, with a special rate of benefit and of contribution, or the rate of contribution and of benefit are expressed as a percentage of their rate of wages.

To get the British fund back on an insurance basis means either raising the contributions or cutting the benefits or cutting a mass of the unemployed out of the scheme altogether and dealing with them by means of a special and open distress fund. But political considerations so far have barred the way to these alternative solutions. It is easier to get the money from the exchequer, which means from the taxpayer, and leave the next government, a Tory or a national coalition one, to nurse that baby.

So it will be—it must be—in every democratic state operating such a system.

No Probability of Great War Soon, Lloyd George Says

complish nothing by force. They are just strong enough to make any attack upon them an unprofitable speculation and that is all they can hope for in their present condition of offensive impotence.

These are reasons why in British circles no one believes in the possibility of imminent war. The continental answer to us is that neither did we credit the possibility of war in July, 1914. That I admit is a good debating answer—but no more. The men of 1914 had no idea what war meant—the men of 1930 know too well what it means in horror and destruction, and also in taxation and impoverishment for the victors and vanquished alike. There will not be another great war just yet, in spite of all the ominous rumblings. But from the standpoint of the trader and the financier the fear of war is almost as bad. It rattles business. There is no confidence. The financier will not lend except on short loans. The trader will not buy except from hand to mouth.

There are two services 1931 can render to the world. It can thaw credit and it can put an end to all this silly talk about war. If it succeeds in these two objects, then Christmas in 1931 will be a festival of undimmed good cheer.

FINDS FORGOTTEN LAW ON REINCORPORATION

St. Louis Mutual Life Insurance Co. Counsel Digs Up Omitted Section of 1869.

The discovery by counsel, Lambert Walther, of a long-forgotten Missouri law enacted in 1869, has enabled the St. Louis Mutual Life Insurance Co., the oldest life insurance company chartered in this State and the last one operating under a special legislative grant of 1857, to be reincorporated under the general laws of Missouri.

The company, handicapped by restrictions of a local character in its special charter, had been seeking reincorporation under the general law to permit expansion and more favorable competition with companies in other states. In the absence of express statutory authority, however, the reorganization could not be effected except by unanimous consent of the policy-holders, a procedure obviously inpracticalble.

Its special charter, granted upon its organization as the German Mutual Life Insurance Co. in 1857, required that all members of the board of trustees be residents of St. Louis County, which then included St. Louis, and limited real estate mortgages tc Missouri lands. When in 1869 the Legislature decreed that all companies had thereafter to be incorporated under general law, the incorporators of the German Mutual company chose to retain their special charter. As the insurance business in Missouri expanded beyond the dreams of these men, however, their charter became a liability rather than an asset.

Then last March Walther found that the provisions of the 1869 law had been omitted in the code of 1879 and subsequent revisions, apparently through inadvertence. Insurance Commissioner Joseph Thompson rendered an opinion that the omitted sections of the old law were still in force in the absence of repeal either expressly or by implication.

The company's management accordingly decided to reincorporate as a stock and mutual company the form of organization it believed most closely approximated that authorized by the special charter and best protected the policy-holders' interest in the surplus. The plan was approved by the needed two-thirds majority of policy-holders last Nov. 20 and the new charter was issued Wednesday.

There will be no change in the company's management, according to its president, former Mayor Frederick H. Kreismann. The reorganized company has an authorized capital of $100,000, which was paid in by subecriptions to stock at $15 for each $10 par value share. Shares not taken by policy-holders were subscribed for by business and professional men of St. Louis. The extra $50,000 will be added to the present surplus of about $230,000 for expansion purposes.

The company has headquarters at 3640 Washington boulevard. It has insurance in force of about $13,000,000.

I. C. C. NOTIFIED OF MERGER PLAN OF FOUR MAJOR LINES

No Indication of Attitude Toward Consolidation of Eastern Systems.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Interstate Commerce Commission was notified formally today of the desire of Eastern railroad executives to consolidate all Eastern lines, except those in New England, into four major systems, but it gave no indication of its attitude.

The commission acknowledged receipt of a communication informing it that an agreement had been reached among the roads. The commission said it assumed that the plan was forwarded by the executives for its information only, pending further steps.

Speculation in railroad circles still centered upon whether the carriers proposed to file new applications proposing their consolidations or whether the commission would be expected, if it approved, to amend its own plan promulgated last December.

"Thank You, St. Louis"

The last page has been turned. Our story is finished.

Saturday night we turned the key in our store for the last time—and transferred our entire remaining stock on hand, accounts, good will, etc., to the Union House Furnishing Company.

It almost seems like a romance that this younger store which has grown up beside us as a friendly competitor should now absorb the institution we built.

But because we know the high ideals which actuate the Union House Furnishing Company, we can, in good faith to our customers, turn the guidance of this institution over to them.

And we bespeak for the Union the confidence you have given us. We know that every May-Stern customer will find the same courteous friendship, the same whole-hearted effort to serve and the genuine interest in your welfare that have always been a first consideration with us.

Starting Monday all payments due on May-Stern accounts are to be made at the Union House Furnishing Co., 1120-30 Olive Street. All books and records have been transferred to their store and the same convenient terms to which you have been accustomed will be available as at May-Stern's in the past.

Now, as we say farewell to our many friends of a half century's standing, let us thank you—every one—for your patronage during all those years. It is with a real tug at the heart-strings that we close our doors forever and say—

Good-Bye, St. Louis—We're Through!

May-Stern & Co.

Every man's PRIVILEGE to borrow to pay

MONEY MANAGEMENT FOR HOUSEHOLDS, a helpful booklet on budgeting your income, leading to the happiness of financial security, is offered without charge to all. Telephone, call, or write for a copy

A GREAT CORPORATION, facing the emergency of unusually heavy expenses, borrows millions.

An individual, facing the emergency of unusually heavy bills, borrows hundreds.

The corporation goes to its bank and borrows on its value as a going concern, its inventory of equipment, and the money it expects to receive from its customers.

The individual goes to his family finance company and borrows on his value as a "going concern", his inventory of personal property, and the money he expects to receive from his employer.

It is right and proper that the corporation should borrow to pay. It is equally right and proper that the individual should borrow to pay.

If it were not so, doctors and lawyers, merchants and manufacturers, employees and employers, would all be handicapped by slow payments. Jobs would be scarcer; our comforts of life, fewer; our progress, slower.

On every man's privilege to borrow to pay is built the very credit structure of this nation.

Banks extend this privilege to the few who have stocks, bonds, real estate, or going businesses for collateral.

Family finance companies offer the same privilege to the many who have not the kind of collateral which is recognized by banks but have the ability and will to earn their way out of any difficulty.

Family finance companies cannot "retail" loans of $300 and less at the same rate that banks "wholesale" thousands, so wise legislation has fixed a maximum rate of interest that is fair to both the individual and the finance company, at the same time permitting competition to determine the minimum rate charged.

The Household Finance Corporation, through large volume and efficient management, is able to render a fair and understanding service within the low interest rate of 2½% per month established by the small loan laws of this state on amounts of $100 to $300. Household pledges itself to give to the borrower all the advantages of any further lessened costs of operation.

Just as banks give sound investment advice Household gives sound advice on how to live within one's income, in order to keep out of debt in the future.

Turn the dial to KWK every Tuesday night at 8:00 Central Time and be a guest of the Household Entertainers, featuring America's foremost stars of the opera, concert, and stage, as well as leading thinkers in affairs of national importance. . . . .

CCORDING to the more or less truthful Shubert publicity de- partment, one of the keenest ats of the theatrical season is performance of Philip Merivale "Death Takes a Holiday." The y has been adapted from the lian of Alberto Casella by Wal- Ferris, and was one of Broad- 's comedy successes through- last season.

"Death Takes a Holiday" is a stic tale—that of Death him- invading for a three day iod the castle of Duke Lambert, pearing among the latter's sts, not as himself, but in the e of one Prince Sirki, whose ds are at the end of the world. ki becomes a very human visi- , falling in love with a sweet d beautiful young girl, and hold- her fascinated.

The thrill of mystery is in the y and the uncannines of the pernatural, yet its effect is said be straightforwardly simple h Mr. Merivale reveling in the portunities presented to him, as sombre figure of Death, or as gallant, quasi-mysterious lover. The company supporting Mr. rivale includes Helen Vinson, nk Greene, Alan Willey, Roland ttomley, Charlotte Andrews, llace Erskine, Irby Marshall, Birkbeck, Eleanor Stuart, an Royce, Thomas Bate and nces Amherst Johnson.

ISS HART'S company at the Orpheum tonight enters into a two-weeks' engagement of ebound," a play from the pen Donald Ogden Stewart, maga- writer and actor. Helen Flint, l known New York actress, se- red by Miss Hart for the leading inine role in this comedy, will re honors with Pierre Watkin, orite of the resident company, Owen Davis Jr., popular ju- ile, who has again been held r for this presentation.

The story of "Rebound" tells of worldly-wise daughter of rich ents who has reached the age 28 without entering into matri- ny, but who is in love with a n who doesn't seem to realize luck and who goes away to is without telling her he loves r.

Before he returns she has mar- d a young chap who has just n jilted by a girl who had real- loved him but had married for ney instead. Six months later all meet in Paris.

he girl who had married for ey, already fed up with her 50- r-old husband, meets the young band whom she had jilted and ts a flirtation that almost brings rebound marriage to the rocks. w everything is untangled makes an amusing climax.

Following "Rebound," on Jan. 11, Hart will bring Blanche Ring e to head the cast for the first formances in St. Louis of "La- of the Jury."

T'S a Wise Child" is still play- ing at the Grand Central The- ter, but, as remarked before, l be followed Thursday by "As od as New." It is said to be a ery, modern comedy, full of ghs and offering fine opportuni- to the Grand Central Players.

Many novel situations arise in play, written by Thompson Bu- nan, which tells of the compli- ed affairs of the Bannings, an rage American family. In the edy it is the father who strays m the righteous path instead the son, and the burden of ightening out matters and keep- the family together rests upon shoulders of the son and ghter rather than on those of parents.

yle Talbot, leading man of the nd Central cast, will be seen the Otto Kruger role of Tom nning, the likeable but erring er. Ivy Merton plays the part the wife.

Von Schillings To Conduct the German Operas

Four Famous Works to Be Sung, with Gadski Among the Stars, at the Odeon, Starting Jan. 15.

DR. MAX VON SCHILLINGS, who is to be the musical director of the German Opera Company which comes to the Odeon Jan. 15, 16 and 17 to present four of the best German operas, is a composer of distinction and a brilliant conductor who is steeped in the very sources of the traditions of Bayreuth. Schillings in 1892 became an assistant conductor at Bayreuth, and in 1902 the chorusmaster for the Wagner festivals. He became director of opera at the Stuttgart Court Theater in 1908, and in 1919 was made director of the Staatsoper in Berlin, succeeding Richard Strauss. In 1926 he retired to devote himself to composition and has busied himself with creative effort until this visit to America was undertaken. His own opera, "Mona Lisa," was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York March 1, 1923.

"The Flying Dutchman," with which the German engagement opens here on Thursday evening, Jan. 15, and the performance of "Tristan and Isolde" with which it comes to a close on Jan. 17, will be conducted by Dr. Von Schillings. "Don Juan" on Friday evening, and "Tiefland" at the Saturday matinee, are to be conducted by his assistant, Carl Adler.

There are in the company this season more than 50 principals, added to which there is the chorus and an orchestra of 54, which has been assembled and prepared in New York for the American tour. Foremost upon the roster of its stars is Johanna Gadski, the Wagnerian soprano who sings Marta here for the first time in the presentation of "Tiefland" at the matinee, Saturday. Johannes Sembach, known as one of the best Wagnerian tenors, is also with the company this year.

Music by Kroeger for Today's "Pop" Concert

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, through its guest conductor E. Fernandez Arboos, pays tribute today to a St. Louis composer, Ernest R. Kroeger, two numbers from whose "Lalla Rookh" suite the Spanish conductor has included in the program for the Radio Pop concert at the Odeon between 5 and 6 p. m. It is the first time the work of a St. Louisan has been presented in the course of this popular concert series.

The two numbers are the "Cavalcade" and the "Dance of the Girls of the Pagoda." They have been favorites of St. Louis audiences during the many years since "Lalla Rookh" was first presented at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition concerts in 1904.

The major work of this afternoon's program is Strauss' "Don Juan," which was a feature recently of one of the regular concert programs of the orchestra. Carl Maria von Weber, Franz Schubert and the Abbe Liszt contribute other numbers to the program.

Film Guild to Show "The Silent Enemy"

THE newly formed Film Guild of St. Louis, an organization established to present the better class of motion pictures which are not acceptable to the commercial theaters will give the first showing tonight of "The Silent Enemy," an Indian picture which has attracted considerable attention elsewhere. The showing will be held at the Y. M. H. A., on Union boulevard, and will be open to the general public.

A Russian picture called "China Express" had been secured for tonight's performance, but a private showing of the film yesterday, when it was viewed by members of the guild, convinced them that it was not entirely suitable and only parts of it will be shown.

Other foreign and domestic pictures have been secured and will be shown on successive Sunday nights.

German Comic Opera In a First Showing

"VERLIEBTE LEUTE," a comic opera, will be given tonight for the first time in the United States by the German Theater Stock Co. in the auditorium of the German House, 2345 Lafayette avenue.

The story is based on present-day life in the capital of Germany, Berlin, and contains a number of songs which are already well known in this country.

Winnie Lightner in Person at Ambassador

WINNIE LIGHTNER, comedienne of the stage and screen caroms through some boisterous and funny comedy in person at the Ambassador Theater this week as one of the stage attractions of Jack Haley's new offering "Masquerade."

Well known for her comical antics and singing in "The Life of the Party," "Hold Everything," "She Couldn't Say No," and "Gold Digger of Broadway."

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

--By Nie

IF you happen to be interested—or are you—in getting up a list of your own of the Ten Best Pictures of 1931, it might be well to start off with "Blue Angel," which is at the Missouri as the initial offering of the new year. This is a German-made film, directed by Josef Von Sternberg of Hollywood, and it brings back to American screens our old friend Emil Jannings. Also it presents Marlene Dietrich, the splendid German actress, who has already been seen in a later, American-made picture, "Morocco." It was her work in the present drama, viewed first in Berlin, which caused the California magnates to drag her to this country. "Blue Angel," after the custom of most German pictures, is a sordid, drab, tragedy, but it is so finely played and so beautifully directed that it comes close to being a masterpiece. True, the registering of the dialogue is far from perfect, foreign films not yet having reached the stage of perfection of Hollywood, but the amount of dialogue has been reduced to a point where the film is almost a silent one and the story of the mesalliance of a middle-aged schoolteacher is wonderfully absorbing. Jannings is the schoolmaster who falls in love with a waterfront cabaret singer, splendidly played by Miss Dietrich. He goes down the ladder to oblivion and death instead of raising the girl to his level, as would have been done had the film been turned out in this country. It is, perhaps, not a picture for the entertainment-seeking masses, but it is a great piece of screen art.

Oh, For a Story.

THE lovely Jeanette MacDonald wastes her own time and that of the customers in "Oh, For a Man" down at Loew's. This is the tale of an opera singer—Jeanette can really sing, you know—who falls in love with a burglar when he climbs into her room at night to make way with her jewels. What he gets is her heart and they are married. Artistic temperaments being what they are in the singing and burglary profession the pair can't hit it off and there is a bust up somewhere over in Italy where the couple went because the film makers had some nice Italian sets idle at the moment. In the end Jeanette is back in bed—she spends a lot of time in bed in this opus—and her boy friend comes in the window again for he has gone back to his old trade. There is a reconciliation for the windup as Jeanette just had to have a burglar around the house.

An Eye for an Eye.

"THE CRIMINAL CODE," at the St. Louis is lifted out of the class of the usual run of pictures of life in the hoosegow by the perfect performance of Walter Huston who is a warden with a heart and a pretty daughter. The story is not above the ordinary with the practically innocent young murderer getting a parole in time to marry the girl who beamed on him from her father's office window, but Huston makes it all very real and very interesting by the way in which he insists on living up to the code which demands that eyes and a couple of teeth be exchanged when a crime is committed.

Philandering Husbands.

IT doesn't make much difference about the picture down at the Ambassador this week for Winnie Lightner, rough soubrette of the stage and screen, is there in person and packing 'em in four or five times a day. It's just as well, too, for "Divorce Among Friends" is pretty slight entertainment without any divorce taking place, and most of the fun being furnished by Lew Cody while he is under the influence of the stuff which makes husbands see double and feel single.

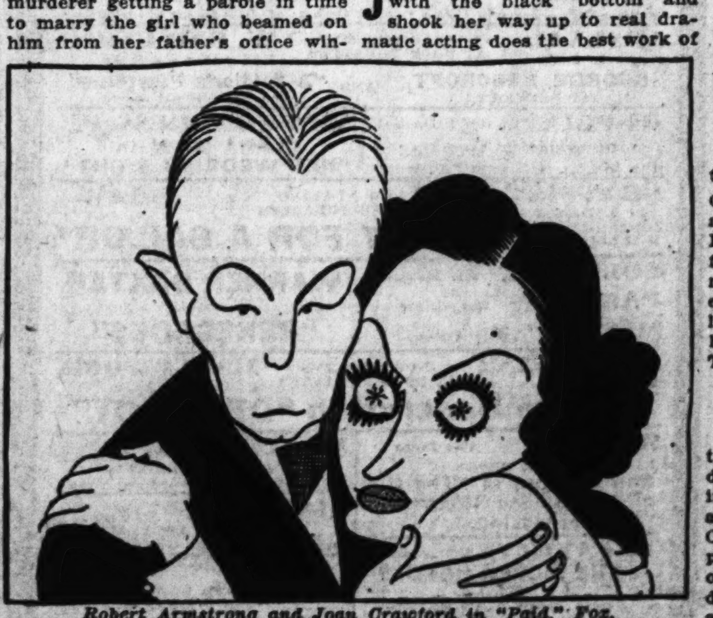
Paid in Full.

JOAN CRAWFORD, who began with the black bottom and shook her way up to real dramatic acting does the best work of her screen career in "Paid" at the Fox. This is a film made from Jane Cowl's old drama, "Within the Law," and, in case you don't remember, is about a sweet young gal who was sent to prison for a crime she didn't commit and came out vowing to get even with the world in general and with the man who sent her up in particular. How she does it by becoming the master mind of a gang of racketeers and eventually marrying the son of her arch enemy, makes a good and exciting lesson for youngsters who want to learn how to become successful crooks.



Robert Armstrong and Joan Crawford, in "Paid," Fox.

To Sing Messiah Tonight.

The All Saints Church choir will present part one and the Hallelujah chorus of Handel's Messiah at Christ Church Cathedral tonight at 8 o'clock. Nothing in part one will be omitted. The choir consists of 35 voices, under the direction of C. Spencer Tocus. Daniel R. Phillipi, organist at Christ Church Cathedral, will accompany the choir and play the instrumental numbers of the Messiah.

Nancy Carroll's Sister.

For the first time in either of their professional careers, the two Carroll sisters, Nancy and Terry, are playing in a picture together. It is "Stolen Heaven," now being filmed in a New York studio. Terry, who has been working in several Broadway productions recently, bears a marked resemblance to her sister. In "Stolen Heaven" Terry appears as a society girl.

New Colbert March Picture.

Arbos Ending His Season With This Week's Concerts

Nathan Milstein, Russian Violinist, to Be Soloist With Orchestra at Odeon Friday and Saturday.

WITH the concerts by the St. Louis Symphony orchestra at the Odeon next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Senor E. Fernandez Arbos rounds out the first half of the orchestra's fifty-first year, and bids farewell to his audience for the current season. In these farewell concerts he presents Nathan Milstein, Russian violinist, as soloist, who plays the Brahms concerto. The major orchestral number will be the magnum opus of Richard Strauss :"Don Quixote."

When "Don Quixote" was first presented in America Bruno Steindel, uncle and teacher of Max Steindel, played the solo violoncello and when the Boston Symphony Orchestra first presented it under Wilhelm Gericke in 1904, Senor Arbos was concertmaster of that orchestra and the late Max Zach, who died as conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, a decade ago, played the solo viola for Sancho Panza's role.

There are but three works upon the concert program for this week: the Brahms concerto, "Don Quixote" and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture.

Concert at Principia

Florence Austral, well-known Australian soprano, and her husband, John Amadio, who is a celebrated flutist, will appear in a joint recital at Howard Hall, the Principia, next Friday night. Both have appeared in concerts in all parts of the world. Mr. Amadio served as principal flutist with Calve, Melba and Tetrazzini.

"Butter and Egg Man."

The third production of the St. Louis Catholic Theater Guild will commence tomorrow night and run until Jan. 9, at the St. Louis University Auditorium. The guild's selection for this presentation is "The Butter and Egg Man," a comedy by George S. Kaufman.

More Comebacks

Many Cinema Stars Who Dropped Out When the Talkies Came Are Going to Try and Re-establish Themselves Out in Hollywood, Dolores Costello Among Them.

THE new year is going to see some comebacks in the cinema world—some of the big "silent" movie stars whom the talkies dethroned or imperiled.

Monte Blue is the latest, the same Monte who before talkies was a big, strong he-man of the films, and mighty popular, as he still is.

In talkies he fared not so well, and reports that his contract was bought up for $50,000 by his studio were current at the time of his release.

Since then he has been idle, just looking around at his leisure for a part, not being bothered with the wolf at his door. Now he has found it in "the Flood," a special for Columbia.

ESTHER RALSTON, who didn't wait for the talkies to do anything to her before she could get in some time on the stage, obtained a release from her contract and went into vaudeville.

Now she's back, a different Esther, more beautiful and more confident, with her first talkie completed and others in the offing. The first one, "The Southerner," assured her future from its first preview.

Billie Dove's talkie experience—she made four—was only average, and she retired temporarily on completion of her contract. Her return is imminent under the banner of the multi-millionaire producer, Howard Hughes.

Colleen Moore, recently seen on the stage here in St. Louis, whose two talkies were not quite good enough to justify her huge contract salary, left the screen for a stage debut, and now that she has come home speculation as to her plans is one of Hollywood's current topics of luncheon conversation.

ANOTHER definite return is that of Laura LaPlante, St. Louis girl, whose release from Universal was the result of her miscasting as much as anything else. She is back now, in a farce comedy, "Lonely Wives," doing the sort of thing that built her reputation as a comedienne.

Corinne Griffith made two talkies, neither of which was commensurate in quality with her importance as a silent star, so the studio bought her contract for $250,000.

And Corinne, not being especially eager to continue on the screen, and having plenty of money, seems to be satisfied to rest. But who can say that she won't try a comeback if the urge seizes her?

THE recent announcement that Dolores Costello would return to the screen this month was surprising only because her plans for retirement had been believed final, and not at all because she is now a mother.

For motherhood no longer is unfashionable among the screen's notables.

Time was when stars kept their families religiously out of the spotlight for fear their standings with the fans as romantic heroines might be endangered.

But Norma Shearer had no qualms in this regard. There were rumors that at the birth of Irving Thalberg Jr., the actress, newly risen to heights of popularity, would retire to private life. She dispelled those by signing a new starring contract.

YEARS ago, when Irene Rich first came into pictures, she made no secret of her motherhood, and her two daughters are not kept in the background even now.

There are, of course, a few stellar mothers who prefer to keep their children "dark" as much as possible, but these are diminishing in number.

Gloria Swanson, the most prominent of them, will not allow her children to be photographed for publication because she does not believe it fair to them, and wants them to grow up without any distorted ideas publicity might engender in young heads.

The present lack of secrecy about happy family life is in direct contrast to the old idea that stars must be demigods leading charmed, unearthly lives. To have the fans known they live like the rest of the world doesn't hurt any.

MISS COSTELLO'S last released picture, "Hearts in Exile," was a poor creation, but that the fans remained loyal enough to her in spite of it to make it profitable for her old studio to sign her again is another indication that stellar personalities still count at the box office.

The blonde star's fan mail, large as ever, was one factor in her return.

The fans who wrote, however, may rest assured that she will not play Trilby to John Barrymore's Svengali. Trilby must sing, and Dolores doesn't pretend to that. Besides, husband and wife will be starred individually, as before.

FORD CANADA PLANT TO REOPEN

More Than 5000 Men Will Be Employed There Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 3. — The East Windsor plant of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., and assembly branches throughout the country will reopen next Monday, officials announce today. More than 5000 workers on the rolls when operations ceased Dec. 19 for inventory will resume work, the announcement says.

BANKRUPTCY FUNDS IN CLOSED BANK

U. S. to Demand $48,943 of Surety Company Holding Bond for $50,000.

A total of $48,943 belonging to various bankrupt estates in the Eastern Federal District of Illinois, on deposit in the Merchants State Bank of Centralia, Ill., when it failed to open its doors on Dec. 17, will be demanded of a surety company with which the trustee's funds were protected by bond to the extent of $50,000.

Referee in Bankruptcy Walter Grant said yesterday that the creditors of the bankrupt estates would not lose a cent through the bank's failure.

"It was a fortunate circumstance, however," Grant said, "that saved the estates from partial loss. Federal Judge Walter Lindley had ordered the maximum amount of deposits in the bank to be $50,000.

"About three weeks before the bank's failure, Federal Judge Fred L. Wham ordered a deposit of approximately $22,600 to be placed in the bank. This amount was realized from a receiver's sale of the Leaf Garment Co., which was held in Judge Wham's office at Centralia. He ordered the funds to the nearest designated depository which brought the total to $59,643. Judge Wham had no knowledge of the amount already in the bank or of the maximum ordered. I have supervision of those matters, and since it was a receiver's sale, I did not know of the deposit until the matter came before me later.

"Fortunately, a few days before the bank's failure I authorized payment of creditors' claims in the Daniel E. Rose estate for $10,700, which was also on deposit in the Merchants State. All these checks cleared before the failure, except one, bringing the balance of deposits under the amount of the surety bond."

Judge Wham said over the telephone at Centralia that Grant's account was correct, except that there were other bonds which would have covered a certain amount in excess of $50,000 loss to the trustee's funds.

The Merchants' State Bank of Centralia was one of the banks in which trustee's funds were deposited under Federal Judge George W. English, who resigned under charges of impeachment, one charge concerning the placing of trustee's funds to the advantage of members of his family.

New York Day by Day

The best seats of every hit show in New York are still in the hands of ticket speculators despite the camouflage and hullabaloo. And that's what's the matter with the theater.

Incidentally, all of the hit shows this season were presented by new producers. It has been a bad year for the old timers.

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR FISK RUBBER CO. IN BOSTON

Firm's Loss in First Half of 1930 $2,651,822; Depression Given as Cause.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The appointment of a receiver for the Fisk Rubber Co. in Boston today followed an ineffectual effort to weather the effects of the general business depression and the drastic decline in rubber and cotton prices which demoralized the tire industry.

Reorganization had been suggested by H. T. Dunn, president of the company, and committees had been formed representing holders of various securities who were invited to help formulate a plan which would maintain the company's position in the industry and restore its credit and earning power.

The concern's working capital was depleted to such an extent that, it announced, it was impracticable to refund at maturity Jan. 1, 1931, $8,199,500 of 5½ per cent notes outstanding. Various economies were effected during the year, two of the fabric plants were closed and the tire manufacturing plant at Cudahy, Wis., was closed.

The company's net loss during the first six months of 1930 amounted to $2,651,822, after $796,920 was written off for crude materials and reserves against a net loss of $236,718, for a like period in 1929. Its net loss for 1930 was estimated at $6,700,000.

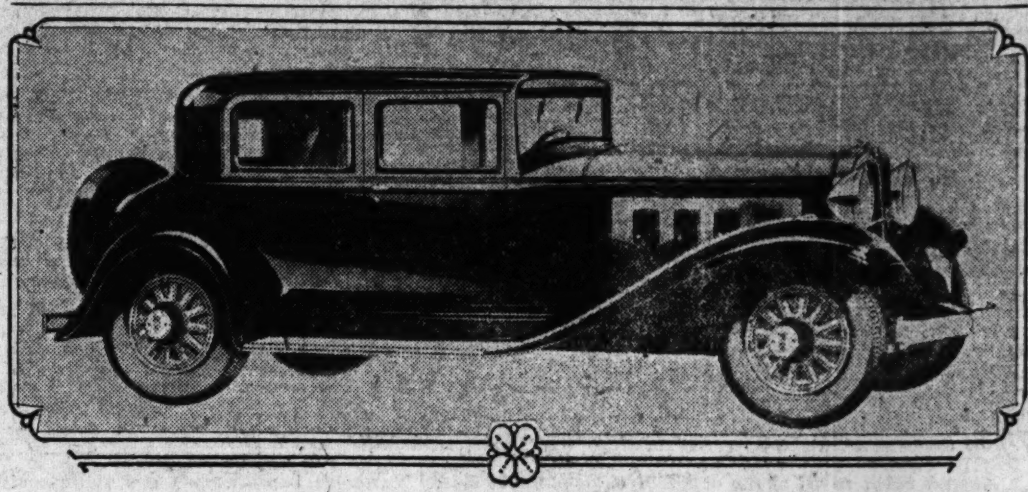
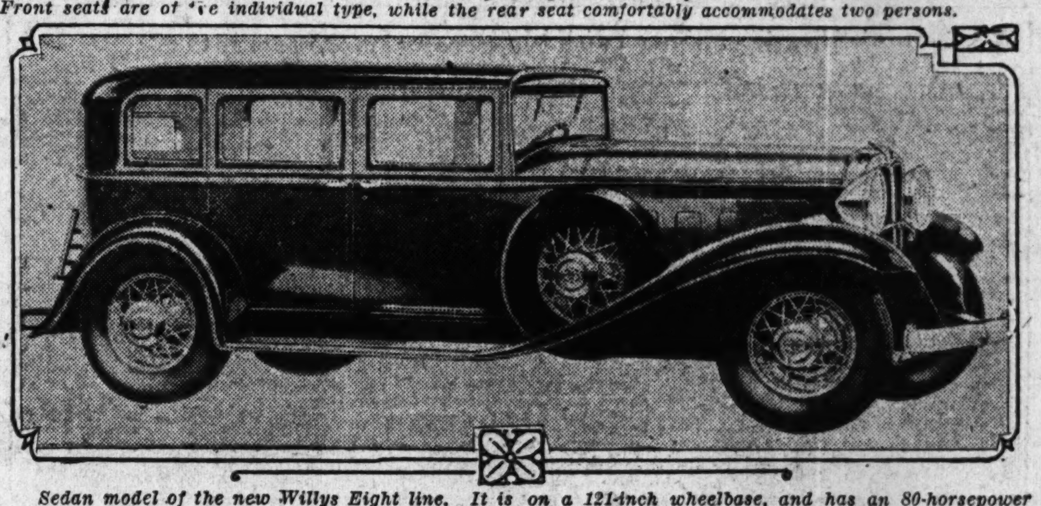
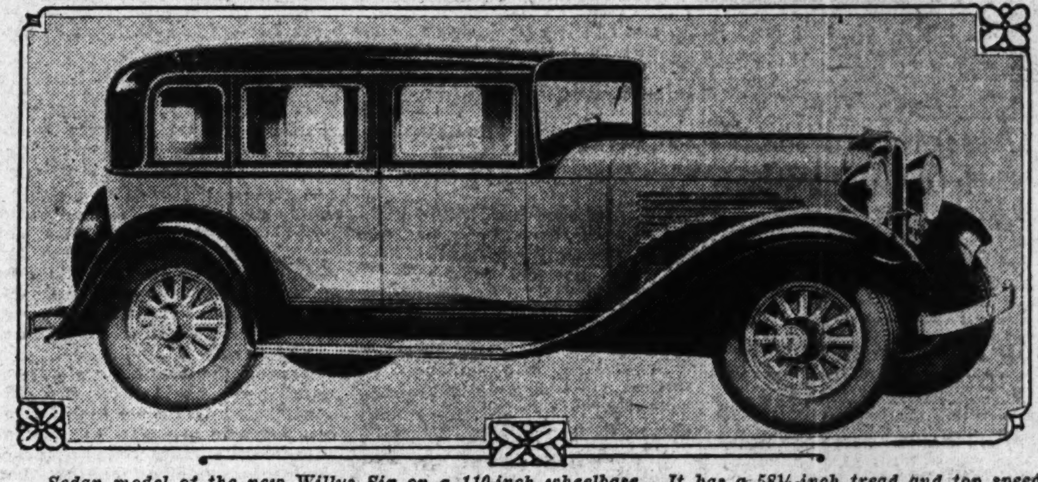
How the New Willys-Overland Cars Look



The new Willys-Knight victoria, a distinctively designed close-coupled car on the 121-inch wheelbase. Front seats are of the individual type, while the rear seat comfortably accommodates two persons.



Sedan model of the new Willys Eight line. It is on a 121-inch wheelbase, and has an 80-horsepower engine.



Sedan model of the new Willys Six on a 110-inch wheelbase. It has a 58¼-inch tread and top speed better than 70 miles per hour and 48 miles in second gear.

Four New Lines Of Willys Cars Are Introduced

One Is a 6-Cylinder Model on 110-Inch Wheelbase in Price Range of a Four.

A completely new line of cars, embodying more than 100 mechanical and structural improvements, has just been introduced by Willys Overland, and is being shown today by E. J. Johnson, Inc., the distributer, and dealers.

The 1931 line of Willys cars includes a Willys six, model 97, with a wheelbase of 110 inches, priced from $495 for the roadster to $675 for the six-window sedan.

A Willys six, model 98-D, on a wheelbase of 113 inches, in standard victoria and sedan and de luxe victoria and sedan, at $795 to $850.

A half-ton commercial chassis lists at $395.

A Willys eight on a wheelbase of 121 inches in standard victoria and sedan and de luxe victoria and sedan, at $995 list for wood wheel models and $1095 for models with wire wheels.

A Willys-Knight six on a wheelbase of 121 inches in four body models, at $1095 for standard victoria and sedan and $1195 for de luxe sedan and victoria.

Thus the entire line, including the eight and the Willys-Knight-engined six, come within the $1200 price limit.

The Willys six has a top speed of 72 miles per hour and 48 miles in second gear. The Willys eight is good for better than 75 miles per hour and up to 50 in second. The Willys-Knight six will hold 78 to 80 miles per hour on the road.

Marked roominess of interiors has been effected by increasing the tread of all models to 58¼ inches and lengthening wheelbases. The wider tread, naturally, permits widening seats, so that three persons can occupy the rear seat of any of the models in comfort.

In addition to the longer wheelbases and wider tread, distinctive improvements of the new Willys line include: Safety, nonshatterable glass in all models all around, at slight extra cost; fully inclosed, cable-controlled four-wheel brakes; fuel pump replacing vacuum tank; Float-O-oil device for more highly efficient lubrication under all conditions; deep cushions with individually wrapped springs; greater leg room and head room; adjustable seat backs in sedan models; inside radiator filler cap; double drop frame; larger fuel tank; platform-type accelerator; optional gear ratios; optiional paint jobs; quieter second gear; steel running boards; improved, all-steel rear axle; flame arrestor; windows insulated against rain or snow; quieter second gear performance; improved ease in gear shifting; garnished moldings; larger, steel-center steering wheel; gas gauge on dash; larger flush-type cowl ventilator; new cylinder head on Willys Six; one-bar bumper; improved, double-acting hydraulic shock eliminators; new type instrument panel; modern roof construction and visor; new treatment of hood louvres.

The Willys six engine is virtually identical with that of the cars which won first and second places in the Pike's Peak climb for stock cars last fall. It develops up to 65 horsepower at 3400 r. p. m. The Willys eight engine develops

New Graham Models Will Be Announced Soon

Added Straight Eight to Be Included in Line, Detroit Reports Indicate.

Reports in Detroit are that Graham is to announce a new line of cars on Jan. 11, a week after the opening of the New York automobile show.

It is said that the line will include an entirely new straight eight model.

Prices will be lower than those of the present Graham line, reports go, but values will be markedly increased.

The added eight, it is understood, will have an engine developing around 85 h. p. and will be on a 120-inch wheelbase. In fact, the power of every model in the line will be stepped up.

All models have been newly styled and engineered.

In addition to bringing out its new lines of motor cars, Graham is to sponsor a series of weekly Sunday night broadcast programs, the first of which will go on the air at 8:30 tonight over the CBS country-wide chain. These programs will bring music by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and talks by Edgar A. Guest, the writer of verse. The concerts will be broadcast from Orchestra Hall in Detroit. KMOX will be the St. Louis station broadcasting the Graham programs.

Auto Executives Desert Detroit For Auto Show

Expect New York Exhibition This Week to Develop Signs of Buying Increase.

By CHRIS SINSABAUGH.

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—Detroit is as deserted so far as the higher officers in the motor car industry are concerned. Every motor company sales executive and as many members of his staff as can be spared, are in New York, where the national auto show opens today.

Thorough preliminary surveys, conducted with a positive willingness to look facts squarely in the face, have convinced the industry that it has genuine cause for higher hopes for this year. The heads of many companies are satisfied that a reaction from the recession can be expected.

One executive expresses it thus: "Eighty-five to 90 per cent of the purchasing power of the country is intact. The 10 to 15 per cent lost temporarily is represented by the reduction from normal employment. We at our plant are convinced that the industry should have a normal year in 1931."

Persons who cannot understand how the new cars can be what they are in quality, yet have such low price tags, must be overlooking the fact that material prices are sharply down. This is one of the most significant factors in the economies that have been wrought in the production of models which the industry regards as the greatest values it has been able to offer.

There are some respects in which the National Automobile Show at Chicago means more to the industry than that at New York. It always has attracted more dealers than the Eastern display, and the dealer situation is one that demands the industry's interest and sympathetic understanding now.

The Chicago show will have one more passenger car exhibit than the current New York affair, with the new De Vaux from California making its formal bow to the public. While the car will not be in the show proper, it will be on display in the Auditorium Hotel.

New Oakland And Pontiac Cars Displayed

Former Now Has Synchro-Mesh Transmission—Pontiac Has Longer Wheelbase.

Two fine cars, freshly styled for 1931—the new Oakland eight and the new Pontiac six—are being introduced today by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., distributer, and associated dealers.

Oakland's most important change is the new syncro-mesh transmission, which, combined with the 85-horsepower developed by the improved V-type engine, provides easy shifting and second-gear acceleration up to 40 to 45 miles per hour.

The Pontiac has been lengthened to a new wheelbase of 112 inches and its 60-horsepower engine has been further refined. The Oakland wheelbase is 117 inches. Five wire wheels are standard equipment on both cars at no additional cost.

A new type semi-drop base rim for tires on both the standard equipment wire wheels and the optional equipment wood wheels, increases the volume of air which cushions the cars from the road. In addition, rubber insulation has been engineered into more than 40 places on each car to provide multiple barriers against the "telegraphing" of road shocks or sounds of engine and chassis operation.

New carburetor air intake silencers, developed by the AC Spark Plug Co.; new electro-plated pistons, stronger frames and heavier "big-tooth" rear-axle differential gears are a few of the additional improvements.

Despite their many refinements of body and chassis, the new cars are offered at base prices below the minimum price at which any Oakland eight or Pontiac six previously has been sold.

The most apparent external advancements in the styling of the new badies are found in the chome-plated, in-built screen which conceal and protect the cores of the cross-flow radiators; in the curved tie-bars supporting the new chrome-plated head lamps; in the long hoods secured by a single electro-plated handle lock on each side; in the one-piece full crown front fenders carrying chome-plated indicator lamps and invisible splash control gutters; in the concave running board aprons smoothly continuing the body contours to the aluminum-bound, rubber-covered steel runnng boards; in the rear splash aprons extending from fender to fender; and in the slope of the narrow windshield pillars. New belt mouldings and new type sun visors add further touches of distinction. Chrome-plated bumpers of new design, employing a heavy single convex bar, are provided on all models at a slight additional cost.

The ventilation feature of the Fisher VV slanting windshield has been rendered even more effective. Pedal and control openings are sealed by felt or rubber pads against the intrusion of unwanted hot or cold air.

Heavy dash insulation muffles road and engine sounds and prevents motor heat from entering the passenger compartment. Also the front door mat is felt backed. Improvements in top construction and a new method devised by Fisher. whereby the side panels are built in single units, render the bodies both stronger and more silent.

Direct metallic contact has been eliminated between body and frame through introduction of a cushion of 10 fabric-reinforced rubber mountings, five on each side, which envelop the 10 body bolts and render the bodies silent under the stresses or rough roads. Rubber also is used to insulate the engine mountings.

Rubber appears in both transmission drives, that of the Pontiac six having been redesigned to include a rubber hub of the type that has seen several years of successful service on the Oakland car. This hub cushions engine torque and minimizes telegraphing of axle and road noises up through the propeller shaft.

Both Oakland and Pontiac are offered in six body types—two-door and four-door sedans; four-door custom sedan, standard and sport coupes and a convertible coupe. The latter model, affording the advantages of a closed coupe and an open roadster, has not previously been included in either line. Among its features are a forward-folding windshield with chrome-plated supports and a folding fabric top also with chrome-plated fittings.

Noel Opens Brake Service, Repair and Garaging Business

The Paul W. Noel Motor Service, recently organized to specialize in motor repair, brake service and garaging, has opened in the large garage building at 718-20 Bayard avenue. The building is of bricks and one story high. It fronts 70 feet on Bayard avenue and runs back 160 feet.

A brake lining and testing department has been installed equipped with latest type electric brake testing and wheel alignment machines, drum truing, testing and brake shoe grinding equipment. Separate shop, general repair and service departments will be in the rear of the building, as will the lubricating and greasing departments manned by experienced mechanics. Mobiloil lubricants and Rusco brake lining will be used exclusively.

The new station, open day and night, is the official garage for the Roosevelt Hotel.

Paul W. Noel, owner of the firm, has been connected with automobile service for 20 years, will supervise all departments.

Hudson Eight Has Engine Designed to Prevent Detonation

In the new Greater Hudson Eight, a combustion chamber design is used whereby the incoming, comparatively cool gases from the carburetor are caused to swirl over the exhaust valve, keeping it cool, preventing its burning or warping, and tending to prevent detonation, which is partially caused by overheated exhaust valves.

Hudson spark plugs are also located adjacent to exhaust valves. In this position the spark plug is not only cooled by the incoming cool gases (the same as is the exhaust valve), but the mixture is fired in the hottest portion of the combustion chamber.

This is the ideal firing position, eliminating the tendency of secondary explosions or high pressures to be set up, causing knocks when the mixture is fired from any other position in the cylinder.

Blomburg-Kingsland Firm Is Appointed Willys Cars Dealer

The Blomburg-Kingsland Co., 3647 North Kingshighway, has been appointed as a Willys-Overland dealer by the E. J. Johnson Co., distributer. The firm will also be in a position to service Willys-Knight cars and will carry a parts stock.

R. L. KINGSLAND.

R. L. Kingsland is president of the company and B. F. Blomburg is vice president and treasurer. Kingsland has been in the automobile business for the past 13 years. For three years he was retail sales manager for E. J. Johnson and also has been associated with another local automobile company. Blomburg has had much automobile selling experience and also formerly was associated with E. J. Johnson.

B. F. BLOMBURG.

Arthur Phillips will be in charge of the accounting department of the firm, while the sales force will include J. B. Trotter and Dewey Gardner.

The building that the firm occupies at 3647 North Kingshighway has an unusually large amount of floor space, measuring 100 by 150 feet.

The new Willys six and eight models and the new Willys-Knight cars that have just been introduced are being displayed by the firm.

Defiance Tire Co. Sales Convention

The St. Louis district sales organization of Defiance Spark Plugs, Inc., Toledo, O., held its annual sales meeting at the Melbourne Hotel on Monday.

According to W. R. Townsend, local district manager, sales of the Defiance Co. have shown a substantial increase each month over last year and officials predict an even better showing during 1931.

L. L. Siegfried, general sales manager, bases this prediction on the fact that new cars come into the market for replacement parts from 18 to 24 months after they are purchased. Thus, the unusually large number of cars bought in 1928 and 1929 will need new ignition cables, tires, batteries, spark plugs and other parts in 1931.

Cadillac Resumes With Full Payroll Of 6000 on Jan. 5

The normal payroll of approximately 6000 men will resume work at the Cadillac Motor Car Co. on Jan. 5, it was announced by A. U. Widman, works manager. This number is exclusive of 1000 salaried employes, and means that more than 500 former employes will be recalled.

"During the past year we have maintained our payroll virtually intact," said Widman. "We felt it was better to give a large number of workers slightly reduced hours than to provide a small number with full time. Our records show we have successfully followed this policy.

"We expect to increase our payroll from 10 to 15 per cent when the plant reopens Jan. 5. This means that 500 to 750 former employes will be recalled to work."

Buick Limousines Bought by U. S. for High Army Officers

Thirty Buick limousines, finished in olive drab, and inscribed, "For official use only," were delivered last week to the United States Army. The limousines will be placed at the disposal of commanding generals, headquarters of divisions and higher units.

Col. Edgar Stayer, commanding officer of Camp Holabird, Maryland, went to Flint with a crew of enlisted men to inspect the cars. Eighteen of the limousines were driven away by the soldiers, with Camp Holabird, which is near Baltimore, as the destination. Later one of these cars is to be shipped to Panama.

Each limousine, in addition to having special finish, is fitted with shatter-proof glass.

80 horsepower, while that of the Willys-Knight engine is 87 h. p.

A change in the shape of the combustion head and installation of a new type carburetor have made more active the Willys six engine which is used in both the 110-inch and the 113-inch models. In the 40 to 50 m. p. h. range this carburetor is some two miles to the gallon more economical.

More stylish appearance, greater comfort in all models, slanting type windshield (those on the roadster and touring car fold horizontally), finger-tip control on the steering post, and greater use of rubber and other cushioning materials to eliminate or deaden vibrations and road and engine noises, are characteristic of all the new Willys cars.

Nash Claims Fourth Place in Registration Figures in November

KENOSHA, Wis., Jan. 3.—Registration figures for November show Nash occupying fourth place, even including Ford. November registration figures indicates that in a large number of cities which are regarded in the industry as key merchandising points, as well as in several states, the Nash position is even better, Nash having outsold every make except Ford and Chevrolet.

"The new Nash cars are the fastest, finest and most beautiful cars that have ever borne the Nash emblem, yet prices are $100 to $360 lower," said C. H. Bliss, sales manager.

Prevents Glove Loss.

That "no motorist ever lost a pair of driving gloves that are always left in a locked car" is at least relatively true. Lots of driving gloves, which cost quite a bit of money, are lost because the motorist tucks them into a coat pocket and carries them around with him during the day. Better leave them in the car. Lock it if it is a closed type; put them in a good hiding place if an open model.

Dodge Adds Six and Eight To Present Lines

ally controlled water circulation and automatic radiator shutters, all devised to keep the cylinder head at proper temperature for high compression without forcing the owner of the car to use special high test or anti-knock fuel.

The internal expanding four-wheel service brakes have 12-inch drums.

In practically every detail the new Dodge six is a fitting companion car to the new eight-in-line. The engineers have carried out faithfully the new and improved radiator shape, the sweep of the fenders, the close fitting visor, the chromium framed windshield, the mono-piece body, new double center drop frame with center-box reinforcement and the internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

There are available on the new six chassis a four-door sedan, a business coupe, a coupe with rumble seat and a convertible coupe with rumble seat, ranging in price from $815 to $845. Wheelbase is 114 inches. Overall length is 176 13-32 inches.

The monopiece body has adjustable front seats, double top-cowl ventilators, arm rests, dome light, ebony garnish molding and instrument panel, five distinctive upholstery selections, and 20 carefully chosen color combinations to pick from.

The new Dodge six engine, with its increased power, has a 3¼-inch by 4¼-inch bore and stroke, piston displacement of 211.5 cubic inches and develops 67 brake horsepower at 3200 r. p. m.

Rubber engine mountings are used at all four points of suspension. Crankshafts, camshafts, valves, pistons, rings and connecting rods are the same type and material as those used on the new eight. The radiator has shutters.

Steering gear is the worm and sector type, springs are semi-elliptic, rear axle semi-floating, while the internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes operate on 11-inch drums. Clutch is a nine-inch dry plate disc type.

Artillery wood wheels are standard equipment, with wire wheels at extra cost.

Fuel Trouble Likely.

Some car owners are inclined to suspect the spark plugs of a pair of dilatory cylinders when the engine starts with difficultly. The plugs may be guilty but more likely unequal fuel distribution is the cause. Switch the plugs from a pair of good cylinders and see whether it makes any difference before deciding finally that the plugs are to blame.

Share Prices Make Most Vigorous Recovery Since Technical Rebound From Temporary Bottom of Early November—Bonds Are Better.

RAIL SHARES LEAD WEEK-END MARKET

Pivotal Issues Make Only Moderate Gains, Few Advances Exceeding a Point or Two, but Some Volatile Issues Are Up Sharply.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Share prices during the past week made the most vigorous recovery since their technical rebound from the temporary bottom reached in early November last. Rail shares made the sharpest advances since the violent rebound of November, 1929. Bond prices crept steadily higher. Copper advanced early in the week, and before the end of the period, gasoline, wheat, corn and cotton achieved some recovery.

Announcement of the four-party Eastern railway consolidation agreement was made during the week.

The quick breaking of the year-end money pinch, although pinch was indeed mild, was construed bullishly. After getting up to 4 per cent, call money dropped to 1½ for the first time since September. Bankers' acceptances fell to the lowest rates since that form of credit was brought to this country with the formation of the reserve system.

Greeted with favor in international banking quarters was the drop in the Bank of France's discount rate from 2½ to 2 per cent. This reduces the rate to a full 1 per cent under that of the Bank of England, and should check the disturbing drag by Paris on London's gold stock. Sterling exchange on New York immediately stiffened.

The price average of 90 representative stocks made a net advance for the week of 10½ points. Trading was in light volume most of the week. Much of the vigor of the advance was probably derived from short covering. Shorts who have had profits on commitments outstanding for some time hesitated to take them until the turn of the year, so that they would not be taxed until 1932.

Rails Lead Week-End Rise.

The rail stocks tugged the entire market higher today, although the gains in all groups were considerably less than yesterday.

Submission of the four-system merger plan to the Interstate Commerce Commission so soon after the preliminary announcement of the agreement was followed by another display of strength in the carrier shares.

Industrials followed less enthusiastically, despite advances in U. S. Steel, Westinghouse and others through their highs of the Dec. 17 rally, while some utilities were buoyant. The motor issues were content to hold yesterday's gains. Oils closed higher. On the whole, few pivotal stocks, with the exception of the rails, were up more than one or two points. Sales totaled 1,547,790 shares.

Bears sold rather freely this morning on the theory that the recovery was temporary and many leading stocks were leaning "flat" when the session was over, indicating a revival of the short interest.

Improved activity in the steel and automobile industries; firmness of the commodities and continued strength of the bond market were favorable influences on sentiment. Steel mills in the Youngstown district will increase their rate of production 2 per cent next week according to an estimate.

Some of the rail stock quotations bore faint resemblances to the prices prevailing three weeks ago. Pittsburg & West Virginia, which the merger plan places in the joint control of the four systems, soared 15 points. Baltimore & Ohio, Erie and Reading rallied 2. Missouri Pacific, New Haven, Wabash and Atlantic Coast Line, and New York Central, Pennsylvania and Chesapeake & Ohio about one each. Some of the Southwestern lines joined the advance, Atchison rising 8¾ and Frisco 6.

Transactions on the St. Louis Stock Exchange Fall Below 300 Shares at Initial Session of New Year — 9400 at Final Session.

The new year on the St. Louis Stock Exchange started out very tamely, in marked contrast with the volume of business that featured the closing days of 1930. Only 295 shares changed hands in the two-hour initial session of the year. At the final session of 1930 sales were 9447 shares. Sales for the week were 28,063, against 26,542 week preceding.

Tax selling at the year end brought up the volume of business and there were transactions aggregating 7500 shares, in which some one house was both buyer and seller of the particular issues. These included 1500 Hussmann-Ligonier, 1600 St. Louis Public Service, 2400 Ely-Walker and 1045 Fulton.

Sales of St. Louis Public Service common led in transactions, with total of 5671 shares, followed by Ely-Walker with 3092, Hussmann-Ligonier with 2525 shares, Wagner Electric 1950 and Rice-Stix 1090. Four of the latter were unchanged at close, the fifth, Public Service, being up ⅜ point.

1 to nearly 2 points. American Telephone led the utilities with a 3 point gain, but the pace proved too fast for Consolidated Gas, American Water Works, Public Service of New Jersey and North American whose improvement was nominal.

U. S. Steel closed at the top, 143½, up ⅛. American Can, General Electric and Westinghouse lagged. Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, McKeesport Tin Plate, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Columbian Carbon and Ingersoll Rand rose 1 to 3.

Wheat, after some irregularity, closed ¼ to ⅝ higher, reflecting better Canadian export sales, dry weather in the southwest and a strong market at Buenos Aires. Corn's advances were about the same, based largely on higher Argentine quotations. The buying movement in cotton carried through to the week-end, adding 50 to 90 cents a bale to Friday's upturn.

Foreign exchanges sagged, with the French franc again conspicuously easy.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES FIRM AT AN ADVANCE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Cotton was generally firm and higher today on a continuation of the buying movement which developed here yesterday afternoon and was attributed to covering combined with a little commission house and trade demand. There was some irregularity at the start owing to relatively easy Liverpool cables, but after selling off to 10.10c March advanced to 10.29c and closed at 10.28c. The general market closed firm at net advances of 10 to 18 points. Spot steady. Middling 10.30c.

The opening was steady, one point higher on old January, but generally 3 to 8 points lower in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and apprehensions of labor troubles in the Lancashire market. The comparatively limited offerings were very readily absorbed around the initial prices, however, and the market worked higher during the balance of the morning. The ruling of the stock market seemed to promote the buying of cotton, while offerings continued light and the best prices of the day were reached in the late trading. New January sold up from 9.92c to 10.09c and May from 10.36c to 10.55c, and closing quotations were within a point or two of the best.

The action of the market was regarded as indicating that it had been pretty well liquidated of long accounts preceding the holidays and that with very little hedge selling in evidence, a scarcity of contracts developed when shorts attempted to cover. Reports that efforts to bring about a settlement of the dispute over the 8-loom-per-weaver proposition in Lancashire mills had failed and that a walkout was apprehended on Monday appeared to have very little effect on sentiment here, as offerings were relatively light after the early spurt of realizing or liquidation had been absorbed, there was a little selling here by houses with Liverpool connections at the start, but offerings from that source were not particularly in evidence.

Liverpool cable reported continental buying and trade calling supplied by realizing in that market. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 158,000 bales against 161,000 last year and 164,000 two years ago.

COPPER MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Copper held steady, with domestic prices quoted in all quarters at 10½ cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. The c. i. f. quotation was advanced ¼ cent to a parity with the domestic price. Foreign buying was in moderate volume, but smelters are said to be expecting an improvement, as consumers, it was said, have covered future requirements to only a limited degree. Domestic fabricators have remained out of the market pending development of demand for finishd products. More definite indications are expected to be available shortly in the automotive and building industries.

While the lead market was unchanged as regarding the price situation, the feeling was that consumers had much contracting to do to meet requirements for the current month.

Zinc was without special price change. Consuming interest was expected to improve in the way of fair buying for first-quarter requirements.

Despite the reduction in the price of silver to the lowest level in history, antimony price changed but little. Importers were expected to come in for prompt and January deliveries, owing to the tightness of the spot market.

WANTED

A Sales Manager

To act as exclusive wholesale distributor for new, non-competitive, product for automobiles so radical, so different, so absolutely startling in its demonstration and so utterly convincing in its price and sales appeal as to offer an unlimited field of profit to the right man.

Sales are made direct to all new car dealers as well as to truck fleets and bus lines on regular open account, and we carry the accounts. No investment is needed except for just a few units that are carried in stock for emergency and C. O. D. deliveries, which $200 would cover easily.

The man we want must preferably be acquainted with the trade, have had actual experience as a sales manager, and be able to get and direct his own salesmen as well as lead them in the field.

To such a man we will give every cooperation, a $5000 sales manual for himself and men, literature and other effective sales help as well as our personal contact. Write at once to the TRIPPE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Dept. A-186, 1731 Belmont Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, with references and all details as to previous record.

FORWARD MOVEMENT IN BONDS CONTINUES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The forward movement in the bond market continued through the short session today.

There was a liberal sprinkling of large advances in railroad, utility and industrial obligations, and the movement in the foreign list straightened out as support improved. Short-term Treasury issues made the largest gains in several weeks, Treasury 4¼s and the 4s rising from 1-3 to ½ points, respectively.

Reinvestment demand, a strong stock market and reversion to the easy money conditions that prevalled throughout most of the fall has enabled the bond market to stage a strong recovery this week. The advance represents a rise of 2 per cent for the week as gauged by the averages. At the close today they stood at 96.7, compared with 94.6 a week ago.

Convertibles made a rally in sympathy with stocks. There were large advances in Alleghany Corporation bonds, B. & O. 4½s, American International 5½s, Rock Island 4½s, American Telephone 4½s, General Theaters 6s, Richfield Oil 6s and Warner Bros. 6s.

Railroad issues of all descriptions advanced as in previous sessions this week; the bidding for some was very brisk. Average gains, however, were not as large as yesterday, but there were many of a point or more. St. Paul adjustment 5s, Denver, Rio Grande & Western 5s, Lehigh Valley 4½s, Louisville & Arkansas 5s A, Missouri Pacific 5½s, New York, Boston & Westchester 4½s, Frisco 4½s, Seaboard 4s, gained 2 to points. Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s closed 6 higher.

Telephone and electric company obligations moved upward. American Telephone bonds gained fractionally and International Telephone 5s and 4½s were about points higher. Laclede Gas Light 5½s C, Metropolitan Edison 4½s, Montana Power 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s were other issues that profited from a strong demand. The inquiry for some of the industrials was the best of the week-end. Firmer prices were the rule.

The rally in Australian bonds was a feature of the movement in the foreign section. Brisbane City 5s of 1957 advanced 6 points, and the 5s of 1958 climbed 8 points. Australian 4½s gained 5¾ on a few sales and the 5s advanced one point. There was a heavy demand for Italian 7s and several other European issues. Latin-American bonds were dull and irregular.

ONLY SLIGHT DAMAGE TO CITRUS ORCHARDS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Jack Frost's 12-day reign over Southern California citrus orchards ended with only slight damage to crops, six county agricultural commissions reported following a conference here yesterday. No specific estimate of the loss was attempted.

Harold J. Ryan, Commissioner of Los Angeles County, said improved orchard heater, wider equipment of orchards with frost-fighting apparatus and a special weather forecasting service were "effective in keeping the recent prolonged cold spell from causing as great damages as that suffered in previous years."

CHICAGO WHEAT HIGHER BUT MARKET UNSETTLED

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Influenced by suggestions of a loan to China to permit large imports of wheat, the grain markets scored new upturns today. As a plausible basis for the proposed loan, it was reported that wheat can now be furnished to the Orient cheaper than traders there can supply rice. On the other hand, skeptics here pointed to civil war in China as likely to prevent loan negotiations making much progress.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅛-⅜c higher, corn unchanged to 1c up, oats ⅛-⅝c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Winnipeg dispatch circulated here said the Canadian Government was working on plans to export 100,000,000 bu of wheat to China.

More activity was shown in the cereal markets than for a long while, and offerings were absorbed readily without prices slipping back much. An expected increase of the United States wheat visible supply total on Monday checked upturns in wheat. Heavy profit-taking sales of corn were made for recent buyers.

Oats sympathized with corn.

Provisions responded to upturns in grains.

Predictions of smaller world shipments tended to strengthen wheat, and so likewise did an official forecast of general fair weather next week over domestic winter crop territory, where moisture dearth has been complained of. Indications of export business in Canada were a further encouragement to buyers, together with word of adverse harvest conditions in Argentina. Rising prices for corn acted as an additional stimulus.

Big shrinkage of corn receipts attracted much attention. Primary corn arrivals were but 507,000 bushels against 1,010,000 a year ago. Chicago had only 41 cars, compared with 189 at this time in 1930, and Omaha, St. Louis and Kansas City receipts were aso meager. Omaha advices said 40 stations called had been able to furnish only two cars.

WHEAT CROP ESTIMATE FOR 41 COUNTRIES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The total 1930 wheat crop for 41 countries exclusive of Russia and China was estimated today by the Department of Agriculture at 3,649,656,000 bushels.

This estimate, which included the first official report on the Argentine crop represented an increase of 9 per cent over the comparable 1929 total. These 41 counties a year ago accounted for 96 per cent of the estimated world crop.

The current Argentine crop was placed at 271,404,000 bushels against 162,576,000 bushels a year ago, or an increase of 66 per cent.

While the total world crop for the 41 counties was increased, the 1930 production for the 25 European countries so far reported, excluding Russia, is 5.3 per cent below the 1929 total for the same countries. Russian production for 1930 as estimated at 1,157,400,000 bushels against 702,851,000 bushels in 1929.

Australian Minister on Wheat Outlook.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 3.—Parker J. Moloney, Australian Minister of Markets and Transport, expressed the opinion here today that the wheat markets of the world have reached their bottom. "A rising market," he said, "will not be long delayed."

Homeward bound from the London Imperial Conference, Mr. Moloney arrived here last night en route to Vancouver.

FINANCIAL NOTES

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—New construction undertaken in the metropolitan area of New York in December increased to $62,291,800 over $56,702,200 in November, F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. New constructoin for December of 1929 totaled $106,909,400. The total for the year 1930 was $938,693,300, against $1,241,842,000 in the previous year.

December sales of the National Bellas Hess Co. declined $1,627,804 from the like month of the previous year to $3,524,903.

Chevrolet Motor Co. production for December totaled 64,018 cars and trucks, more than twice the 26,000 units built in December of 1929, and by a wide margin the biggest twelfth month in the company's history, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, announced on his arrival for the New York automobile show. December is the second month to register a new high production figure, he said. Employment stood at 32,101 for the week ended Dec. 27, a gain of 347 over the previous week, he added, and during the present month the figure is likely to climb to 40,000, the company's normal operating force.

The Bolivian Government has approved the international agreement to fix tin export quotas for 1931-32 by official decree and has appointed representatives to deal with representatives of other signatory governments, private cable advices from the Tin Producers' Association in London state.

"Electrical World" reported today that electric light and power companies would spend $894,394,716 for new plant and equipment this year, or less than in 1930.

The publication's budget for the industry allocates to fuel-burning stations $202,394,816 against $207,901,458 last year; to hydro stations $105,381,392 against $117,395,384; to transmission $114,986,418 against $137,084,606; to distribution and substations $412,131,669 against $432,570,278; and to miscellaneous items $59,113,102 against $65,938,026.

Expenditures in New England will decrease, it was said, because several large hydro plants were completed there in 1930. In the South, also, several new lines and plants have been installed, permitting temporary reduction in outlay. In the North Central, Western and Eastern districts budget expenditures for 1931 about equal those of 1930, thus indicating normal growth.

Expenditures by sections of the country this year, as estimated by the paper, are: Eastern States, $301,840,195 against $308,586,932 in 1930; Southern States, $171,752,695 against $194,395,948; North Central, $284,789,876 against $318,096,822; Western, $135,624,531 against $139,800,040.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Raw sugar was quiet today, with no sales reported, but the undertone was firmer, in sympathy with futures, and holders were asking advances of 1-16c, or 3.24c for spots, duty paid.

Firmer London cables and reports that the conferences abroad would be resumed and that the question of financing German's carryover would be discussed seemed to create a better tone in few features, with closing prices showing net gains of 5 to 7 points. Offerings were comparatively light and prices advanced on moderate covering and some buying by houses with Cuban and European connections. The market opened 1 to 4 points higher, but reacted a point or two after the call under realizing, only to again firm up with final prices at the best of the session. Approximate sales, 11,300 tons. January closed 1.16c; March, 1.22c; May, 1.31c; July, 1.38c; September, 2.46c; December, 1.53c.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 4.55c for fine granulated.

FRANKLIN DODGE, FORMER DRY AGENT, INDICTED FOR PERJURY

Nemesis of George Remus Accused of Aiding Georgia Bootleggers He Once Prosecuted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 3. — Franklin L. Dodge of Lansing, former Federal dry agent whom George L. Remus, former bootleg king, accused of being his nemesis, was bound over to the Detroit Federal District Court today on seven charges of perjury preferred in an indictment issued at Savannah, Ga. It is charged that Dodge after working up cases which resulted in 146 indictments in Georgia, returned seven years later, after he had left the Government service, and as defense witness for an alleged bootlegger, gave testimony which directly contradicted his own reports on the same cases.

Dodge plans an extended legal fight which, it was indicated, will be carried, if necessary, to the United States Supreme Court. The commissioner's decision, reached after an extended study of the record in the Savannah Federal Court procedure, must be reviewed by the Detroit Court. If it is upheld, Dodge plans an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati.

Possessioon of some personal letters written by Dodge indicating that he recalled more about the case of George Brown, Savannah bootlegger, than he admitted on the stand at Brown's trial last May, clinched the case against Dodge so far as the commissioner was concerned, he admitted.

Brown, whom Dodge attempted to aid after obtaining the evidence against him, has since died.

OILS FEATURE OF STRONG CURB LIST

Liberal Sprinkling of Large Advances in Rails, Utilities and Industrials.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Curb market found gushers in its petroleum division as it closed a week of recovery today.

In a turnover of 319,900 shares, the trend was upward from the start of the session and most of the shares closed at the top of the day's movement.

Petroleum shares such as Gulf and Humble that were sharply depressed in the latter months of 1930, showed the greatest vitality in weeks. Gulf closed at the top of a 6-point rise, and Humble finished 6⅝ points higher. In addition to Humble, others in the standard group gained about a point each, and Cities Service nearly as much. Strength of this group followed advance in gasoline prices, at points.

Goldman Sachs, Ungerleider Financial, American Founders, in the investment trusts, profited from a good demand, advancing from 1 to 2 points. Securities Corporation General, which last year sold as low as 14, advanced 7¼ points on a few sales to 21⅜.

Leaders in the utility group moved quietly forward. Electric Bond and Share reached the best level in some time at 45, an advance of 1⅝. American Gas and Electric advanced more than 2 and lost but a small fraction. Public Service of Northern Illinois rallied 7 points, and United Light and Power B nearly 4. Both are thinly traded. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore moved against the trend to dip 2 points.

In the industrial section, Wheatsworth advanced 4½ points. It closed at 44½ compared with a 1930 high of 40. Sale to National Biscuit has been proposed.

Newmont Mining gained 4⅜, Aluminum of America 5½, Driver Harris 3¾ and Ford of Canada B 3. Deere was under some pressure and closed 1⅜ lower.

EMPLOYE OF NEW YORK FAMILY FOR 50 YEARS FOUND SLAIN

Former Cashier of Fashionable Department Store Had Feared Attack on Life.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—In the musty East Side cellar where for years he had faithfully directed the vast real estate business of his boss, Edward A. Ridley, last of the family which many years ago owned the most fashionable department store in New York, Herman Moench was found murdered today.

Two months ago Moench obtained a permit to carry a revolver in the fear of an attempt on his life. Apparently he kept the identity of his enemy a secret. Police could suggest no reason why anyone should invade the basement of the garage that used to be a livery stable.

This morning Edward A. Ridley, 85 years old, climbed down two flights of steps into the dim, unventilated office he had used since Ridley & Sons gave up the fight against more modern competitors in 1901. He found the crumpled figure of his trusted secretary on a pile of fire extinguishers. Moench had been shot in the chest and abdomen.

Moench joined the firm of Ridley's in 1879 as a cash boy. He had become cashier before the department store went out of business. When Ridley opened his real estate office he took Moench along as secretary. The old employe was really the "brains" of the business, according to Ridley.

Moench's revolver was found in his pocket fully loaded. His watch, stickpin and $16 in cash also had been left undisturbed.

THREE CONVICTED IN OKLAHOMA SALES OF JAMAICA GINGER

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Jan. 3.—Three men convicted in connection with the sale and distribution of Jamaica ginger for beverage purposes were sentenced in Federal District Court here today. The charges were pressed by the Government after many drinkers were afflicted with a mysterious malady which paralyzed parts of their bodies.

D. Richardson Ray, 68 years old, president of the Kansas City wholesale drug firm which allegedly supplied Oklahoma City druggists with large quantities of Jamaica ginger, paid a $2000 fine and was paroled to Alva McDonald, former United States Marshal on his sentence of 12 months in jail. J. C. Kincaid, Oklahoma City druggist, was sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $500 in a similar case. John Hadley, Oklahoma City druggist, was sentenced to 18 months in Federal prison for distributing Jamaica ginger for beverage purposes.

26,355 COMMERCIAL FAILURES LAST YEAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Commercial failures for the year 1930 totaled 26,355, exclusive of bank suspensions, and their liabilities amounted to $668,283,842, compared with a total of 22,909 defaults in 1929, R. G. Dun & Co. reports.

The total for December was 2525, against 2037 for the corresponding month of 1929.

An accentuation of the unusually high commercial mortality during December was not unexpected, the review says, for even in settled times the closing month of a year invariably is marked by an upturn in the insolvency totals.

The total of 26,355 defaults in 1930 was unparalleled, and in no preceding December has the number of failures equaled the 2525 reported last month Moreover, last month's indebtedness of $83,683,361 also was the largest on record, and only once before, in March, 1924, has the amount been exceeded.

"A distinguishing feature of the past year's returns," the review says, "was the fact that in each month, excepting August and September, the number of insolvencies was above the 2000 level, with the maximum reached in January at 2759. The December figure, which represented the second highest point of the year, was fully 24 per cent above the number for November, although a part of this increase was accounted for by the longer month."

DYING WOMAN SAYS HUSBAND SHOT HER FATALLY FOR LOVE

New York Millinery Model Succumbs to Wounds; Mate Denies Homicide Charge.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Yvonne Cassieri, millinery model, died today in a Brooklyn hospital from three bullet wounds. In her dying words she accused her husband, a grocery clerk, of having shot her "because he loved me and because I loved him."

John Cassieri, 31 years old, had just finished a morning meal when police arrived. Without being told his wife was dead he was taken to her bedside.

Cassieri was questioned and discrepancies in his story of having attended a motion picture show last night led police to hold him on a charge of homicide. His 28-year-old wife was taken to the hospital shortly after midnight from the porch of a house in Flatbush where she collapsed after the shooting.

A block away her automobile was found with a revolver and five cartridges on the floor. Across the street lay one of her slippers.

Cassieri said that three years ago he left his wife for several months after he had seen her riding on a motorcycle with a man. He returned and they were reconciled. He added he had not seen his wife since New Year's eve. Pressed for an opinion of who he thought killed her, Cassieri replied, "One of her gentlemen friends."

Announcement of two $1000 rewards for the arrest and conviction of dynamiters was made today. Officials declined to state who is offering the rewards. The explosion tonight, thought to have been of dynamite, was at the home of a nonunion worker, Mrs. M. K. Davis. The only damage done was the breaking of several panes in a side window. No one was hurt.

SAYS LEGGE TOLD OF BREAKING WHEAT PRICE

Senator Thomas' Letter Giving Secret Testimony Published by Farmers' Union Head.

By the Associated Press.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Jan. 3.—A letter from Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, asserting Chairman Alexander Legge of the Federal Farm Board told the Senate Committee on Agriculture last Nov. 22 the board had caused a break in wheat prices by selling 3,500,000 bushels on the Chicago Exchange, was made public here today by John A. Simpson.

Simpson, president of the National Farmers' Union, is in controversy with Legge over the Farm Board's marketing activities. He said he learned only after he had used the information contained in the letter in his attacks on Legge that the Senate committee session was secret and that the report of the proceedings sent him by Senator Thomas was not to be used.

Senator Thomas' Letter.

The letter from Senator Thomas as made public by Simpson said in part:

"Mr. Legge admitted the board had practical control of a monopoly of the American wheat situation and the board could at will place the price of wheat at any figure desired. Mr. Legge testified last Saturday, Nov. 22, that after the board had entered the buying side of the market, wheat started to rise and the board not desiring to see wheat go up at this time stepped in, sold 3,500,000 bushels on the Chicago Exchange, causing a break.

"The board told the committee it did not wish to see a rise at this time, on the other hand it wanted to keep it low so it could be within reach of the buying public during depressed times; that it desired to see wheat kept low so that it would be economically possible to be fed to livestock, instead of corn.

"The only reason given by the board for not desiring a wheat advance at this time is that the board has under contract 100,000,000 bushels and if wheat advances the owners will begin making deliveries and flood Chicago. The board says it has insufficient storage to care for wheat and is opposed to any policy serving to bring about actual delivery. To me this is a most amazing admission, and I believe if the wheat farmers knew the inside workings, protest against the policies would be more pronounced.

$250,000 Brokerage Costs.

"Instead of the Farm Board buying from farmers, it is buying on grain exchanges, taking delivery on future contracts. It expended $250,000 of public funds on brokerage costs in purchases on the Chicago Exchange. The board admitted to the committee that on cotton owned and controlled now it stands a loss of $40,000,000 and on wheat $25,000,000, a total of $65,000,000. With this gigantic loss, the board does not seem interested in having wheat go up so that the loss, or at least part, can be regained.

"Mr. Legge admitted it would be an easy matter to force the price of wheat to at least $1 and could be done any time the board desired.

"The committee has not had a chance to consider and analyze evidence given us and I am giving you in brief my reaction to evidence submitted and as soon as I have a chance to give the matter more consideration will advise you more fully. Unless the board changes its attitude and represents the farmers directly, not other interests, I am sure it will be only a question of a very short time until the law is repealed and the board discharged.

"Mr. Legge laid the cause of wheat distress very largely to the door of Western Kansas farmers, who increased acreage despite appeals."

A Washington dispatch quotes Senator Thomas as saying that his letter Simpson gave out is authentic. Farm Board officials refused to comment.

NEW YORK'S 'WEALTHIEST MAGISTRATE' TO BE TRIED

Louis B. Brodsky Ordered to Defend Conduct on the Bench Before Appellate Division.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Louis B. Brodsky, known as New York's wealthiest magistrate, tonight was ordered by the Appellate division of the Supreme Court to appear before it next Friday to show cause why he should not be removed from office.

The court took the position that Brodsky should be given opportunity to reply to charges that his actions during his judicial service, as set forth in a report by Referee Samuel Seabury, constituted cause for his removal.

The charges against him were further, that during his official tenure he engaged in business in violation of law.

Cardinals to Play 13 Spring Games With Big League Clubs

FOUR CONTESTS WITH ATHLETICS SCHEDULED FOR FLORIDA TRIP

By J. Roy Stockton.

Thirteen games with major league clubs are on the Florida spring training schedule of the Cardinals, made public today by Secretary Clarence Lloyd. The usual abbreviated spring series will be played with the Browns at Sportsman's Park, April 11 and 12, so the Redbird batters will look at big-league pitching in 15 contests before the race for the pennant starts.

The Florida schedule includes four games with the world champion Athletics, two games with the Braves, Phillies, Yankees and Reds and a single game with the Brooklyn Robins.

According to tentative plans, the Cardinal pitchers and catchers will depart from St. Louis or their homes, Saturday, Feb. 21, reporting at Bradenton Monday, Feb. 23, for the first workout of the season. Whereas last year the Cardinals played a long series with the Rochester Redwings, the International League team is not on the schedule of the National League champions this spring. The reason for this is the fact that Rochester has shifted its training camp from Florida to Greensboro, N. C.

Wray's COLUMN

About Jim Bottomley

SUNNY JIM BOTTOMLEY'S baseball future has been batted around worse than a tennis ball in a Davis Cup final, since the close of the world series. Just to clarify the situation, it is pertinent to set forth the views of Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, as he talked about the affair of Sunny Jim yesterday. This, in substance, is what Rickey set forth:

"To begin with, Bottomley is not for sale and has not been. I mean by this that the ordinary bidding for this player would not concern us. All players are for sale if the price is abnormal. But in terms of normal quotations it can truthfully be said that Bottomley is not for sale.

"It is true that we negotiated with the Cubs, but not for cash. We wanted cash and players for so valuable an asset as Bottomley. But we failed to agree for one reason. The Cubs set too low a valuation on Bottomley. The Cardinal club offered a higher price for Cuyler individually and a higher price for English individually than the Cubs offered for Bottomley. Naturally, we could not do business.

Still Cards' First Baseman

"A GREAT injustice has been done to Bottomley by ill-timed gossip about his future position with the Cardinals. As I say, Bottomley is not for sale. He will go to training camp as the Cardinals' first base regular, and if he continues to play his fine quality of major league baseball, he will be at first base when the season opens. He is not going to training camp merely as a standby in case Collins does not make good. Bottomley will be our first baseman, unless Collins shows us that he is a most unusual ballplayer. It is Collins who must make the grade in order to get a look-in, not Bottomley.

"It's unfair to this great player to convey the impression that he is just a stop-gap, when as a matter of fact he is expected to be our main reliance at first base."

Since then New York writers have laid out the fight game with pennies on its eyelids and started chattering about the new king of indoor sports—wrestling.

Elizabeth Bolla Wins Third Time in Row at New Orleans Tracks

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 3.—Elizabeth Bolla, one of the most consistent thoroughbreds of the winter season, scored her third consecutive triumph today in carrying the Colgate Stable silks to victory in the $3000 Pontchartrain Handicap at the Fair Grounds here.

Although the five-year-old mare has faced the barrier seven times since the season opened, she has yet to finish out of the money.

Today she met the class of the sprinters at the track and won like a champion, covering the six furlongs in 1:12 3-5.

Under the guidance of Jockey A. Richard, Elizabeth Bolla kept close to the pace for the greater part of the journey, but finished strong to defeat D. Bentham's Martis by half a length, with Mrs. D. L. Keiffer's Ben Marshall III. The winner paid $9.40 in the mutuels and won $2590 for her owner.

Richard made it two winners in a row when he got home in front with Jack Haskel in the sixth race.

He also had a third with Lillian T. in the final event.

The longest price of the day was $16.20, paid on Aviator, winner in the second race.

THREE TEAMS TIE FOR GOLF LEAD AT SANTA MONICA

By the Associated Press.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 3.—Three teams tied for first place in the first day's play in Santa Monica's $1500 amateur-pro two-day 18-hole golf tournament today with best ball cards of 66, five under par.

The three fortunate twosomes able to hammer the new ball consistently despite a heavy wind were:

Fay Coleman, Los Angeles amateur, and Harold Long, Denver pro, with 31-35; Leo Diegel, pro, and Thurston Bowman, amateur, both Agua Caliente, 34-32, and V. E. Blalock, Culver City amateur, with Jack Forrester, Hackensack, N. J., pro, with 34-32. (Long formerly lived in St. Louis).

One stroke behind come Roland McKenzie, Washington, D. C., amateur, and Walter Hagen, Detroit; Chuck Harlow, Long Beach, Cal., amateur, and Mortie Dutra, Long Beach, pro, and Chuck Berdrow, amateur, and Dan Williams, pro, Culver City.

The remaining field of approximately 70 will tee off tomorrow.

Among the low-scoring pairs were Jim Fogertey, Kirkwood (Mo.) pro, and Norris Shicks, Santa Monica, who had 73, made up of 37 and 36.

YALE NOSES OUT PENN IN AN OVERTIME GAME

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—Yale nosed out Pennsylvania, 26 to 25, in an overtime basketball game here tonight, marking the opening of the Eastern Collegiate League season. The Bulldogs led the half, 14 to 10, but Penn tied the score near the finish of the regulation game, which ended 24 to 24. A field goal by Horwitz in the extra period was the winning shot.

World Records Fall at Track Meet—But It Is Discovered Measurements Were Wrong

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—World records were falling faster than English heavyweights in the American sprint series at the Columbus Council, K. of C. games here tonight until it was discovered a slight error of some 15 yards had been made in measuring the course.

Ira Singer, former New York school boy star, first stepped what was listed as the 60-meter race in 6 1-5 seconds, a full second faster than Bob McAllister's world mark and then stepped 80 meters in eight seconds, a full second ahead of that record.

The officials went into a huddle and discovered that the starting line, which was to have been moved back to compare with the finish line, so that the runners would not have to continue on through a brick wall, had not been moved back at all and that the runners were doing a distance that could only be estimated as around 60 and 80 yards.

The "60-meter" distance was measured and found to be just 58 yards, leaving Singer with an unquestioned world's record—it was undoubtedly the first time anyone had ever run that exact distance, either by accident or design.

There was no question about the measurements, for the Columbus "500," which was won by Eddie Blake of the Boston A. A.; in a fine closing sprint on the straightaway to the finish line. The time was 1:01 2-5, three seconds behind the record, but good for the track, which was not raised at the turns, and caused the runners to go skidding around the corners.

Singer again led the sprinters to the tape in the 100 meters, which was announced as at 100 yards, or thereabouts. He did it in 10 seconds flat with William Bruder, Newark A. C., second.

The three straight wins gave Singer the series with no arguments and Bruder's three second places won him second place.

$3,000,000 Drop In Football Gate, Survey Shows

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.

WITH a few notable exceptions, colleges throughout the country, large and small, will practice strict "economy programs" for 1931, the Associated Press survey of conditions disclosed today.

Replies from more than 150 representative institutions so far have indicated a falling-off averaging approximately 15 per cent in football gate receipts.

In round figures, for the colleges and universities involved, this is estimated to represent a decline of more than $3,000,000 at the "gate" for 1930.

BOB SHAWKEY SIGNS TO COACH JERSEY CITY TEAM IN 1931 SEASON

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 3.—Bob Shawkey, a famous figure in baseball last season as manager of the New York Yankees, today signed as coach for the Jersey City club in the International League. The Jerseys, who recently changed hands, finished last in 1930.

Shawkey, one of the game's best pitchers in his heyday, was unable to obtain a job at the major league baseball meetings here last month. After one year as pilot of the Yankees, he was succeeded by Joe McCarthy, former manager of the Chicago Cubs.

JOHN McBEATH, NOTED U. S. SCULLER, DIES

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—John McBeath, who shared the national pair sculling championship in 1877, died at his home in Dorchester today.

For three years he won the singles sculling championship of the Schuylkill Navy and was paired with Frank Henderson to win the national championship in Detroit. They set a record for the old one and one-half mile distance which stood until the course was shortened in 1900.

The "Ambling Alp" Hurdles Another Obstacle

Lew Raymond May Hold Boxing Show in February; Tippett Gets Jan. 16 Date

By W. J. McGoogan.

After an expensive New Year party, costly to the promoters at least, the boxing game will take a rest of at least two weeks and perhaps longer here. The next show on the program was announced yesterday by Jack Tippett, matchmaker for the Walter Hetzfeld Post, who was awarded the date of Jan. 16 by Seneca Taylor, Boxing Commissioner.

Tippett said he was dickering for the Coliseum and if he could get it had an option on the services of Eddie Shea, Eddie Anderson or Marty Fields, all under the management of Joe Glaser of Chicago.

Lew Raymond, matchmaker for the Jackson Johnson Post, who promoted the show at The Arena Friday night is still trying to figure out why the fine card he arranged failed to draw big money; but while he is counting the loss, running into important money, he declares that he will hold another show, also likely at The Arena probably the first week in February.

Raymond Undecided.

Raymond hasn't decided what matches to go after as he doesn't know what boxers will be available but he certainly learned a couple of lessons Friday which will be reflected in the next card. One being that 54 rounds consume too much time, to say nothing of the promotor's money and another is that great names don't attract here, apparently, unless the match means something.

But several of the boxers made such good impressions Friday that there will be a real reason to bring them back later. Jackie Brady, welterweight, looked good enough in his bout with Joey Medill to justify the belief that he would provide King Tut some excellent competition. As Tut promised to meet the winner of the Brady-Medill bout at the time he was forced to withdraw from the card in favor of Medill due to a badly cut eye, it is likely that he would be easy to obtain.

Then Sammy Offerman seems to be the answer to the promoters' prayer for a good local boxer. Sammy has had four fights here this winter and has won them all, looking better each time. He climaxed his quartet of triumphs with a defeat of Lou Terry, one of the victories Friday night which proved exceedingly popular with the crowd.

Pleasing Style.

Offerman's stalking, sharp shooting style is good to watch and if matched carefully, Sammy should win a number of matches. He has one fault which he would better correct and that is a tendency to hit low blows, not intentionally, but he may be the cause of having a bout stopped through a foul some night, an occurrence which is bad for the game as well as for the offending fighter.

Eddie Ran, Polish welterweight, has made himself a real favorite here. He has fought two bouts, winning one and losing one. He looked good on both occasions, the first time when he trouced Jackie Purvis and the next time when he lost to Tommy Grogan and Grogan also won himself popularity here with his fine exhibition of skill against Ran. St. Louis fans would welcome the chance to see more of both these men.

Davey Abad seems to have lost none of his appeal to the patrons and Bushy Graham, whose style is almost identical with Abad's, in defeating Davey proved that he would be as popular or more popular than the Panamanian.

CLEVELAND PRO, WITH 144, LEADS MIAMI OPEN

Rattlesnake An Added Hazard for Johnny Farrell

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.

JOHNNY FARRELL, former National champion, encountered an added hazard in a tiny rattle snake on the fairway as he approached the fourteenth hole in the Miami open golf tournament. The snake halted progress as it hissed at the gallery from a point in front of Farrell's ball. Striking, it barely missed the former open champion's trouser leg. A spectator killed it with Farrell's niblick and displayed its two rattlers to the crowd. Farrell finished with a 73 to give him 147 total for 36 holes.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.—Eddie William of Cleveland one-putted on nine of 18 greens and streaked into the clubhouse at Miami Springs golf course today with a sizzling score of 74-70—144 for a two-stroke lead at the halfway point in the 72-hole Miami open golf tournament.

The Cleveland professional's 36-34—70 was one under par, the first such accomplishment since the tourney opened Friday.

Two strokes behind him was Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., professional, who followed his 73 of yesterday with another 73 for 146.

Johnny Farrell, Mamaroneck, N. Y., evaded a rattlesnake hazard on the fourteenth fairway to tie with Heneri Ciuci, Stratford, Conn., at 147 for third place.

The professionals saw John Brown, Portland, Me., amateur, hang up a hole in one as a part of his day's accomplishment. The ace was made on the 225-yard seventh.

Play will be over 36 holes tomorrow to conclude the tournament, with 67 qualified entrants participating.

A purse of approximately $2000 will be split among the professional leaders.

GRANDONI STARS ON ATTACK FOR BILLIKENS

By Dent McSkimming.

Playing its second game against tough opposition in the space of three days, the St. Louis University basketball team last night scored its fourth victory of the season in turning back the Arkansas University five, 24 to 18.

Although the Billikens led at half time, 16-8, and were always in front, the visitors were never outclassed and when they put on a storm late in the second half it loked for a moment as though they might come out on top. After being as far as 10 points behind, the Razorbacks came to life suddenly and pulled up to 21-18. There Leo Grandoni, Billiken center, rose to the occasion and slipped through for a field basket which broke the back of the visitors' rally.

In fact, Grandoni was at all times the fellow who stabilized the Billiken attack and threw the Arkansas defense askew. He rarely missed a reasonable shot. He gathered three field goals and two free throws for eigth points. At center he outjumped Holt and Kendall to give St. Louis a very important advantage on the tip-off.

The Billikens showed improvement over their game with Brigham Young University, last Wednesday, especially in the matter of shooting. St. Louis scored only five field goals in the first half and three in the second, but they really didn't have much opportunity to score more. Arkansas' guards couldn't fathom the Billikens' "center feed" style of attack in the first half and Frank Kennedy and Grandoni whirled around them for three neat field goals. But in the second half they showed a better appreciation of the play and practically stopped it.

There was nothing especially spectacular about the game. Arkansas did not seem nearly so clever a team as Brigham Young. The Razorbacks missed enough shots from the foul line to win the game.

Only about 1000 persons gathered at the St. Louis U. gymnasium to watch the game.

TITLE-HOLDERS LACK CLASS TO DEFEND CROWNS WITH SUCCESS

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Lack of standout men in championship positions seems to indicate that the year 1931 will produce almost as many title changes as occurred last year when all except two divisions saw new gladiators crowned.

The weight divisions most likely to have new kings are the heavyweight, middleweight, welterweight, junior welterweight, lightweight and the flyweight.

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight king, may retain his crown because there is no upcoming candidate on the horizon today able to solve the slapstick methods of the roughhouse Hebrew. Mickey Walker, judged the best all around fighter of the year by a committee of fight experts, is the most formidable foe of Maxie; but Mickey's mighty blows would not be likely to find their mark in a limited round go with Rosenbloom. Maxie is about as easy to hit solidly as a will o' the wisp.

Benny Bass may retain his junior lightweight title, unless Kid Chocolate takes a notion to rest up and then desert the featherweight ranks for the junior lightweight. Chocolate would be stronger and better in this class, and he might outpoint Bass, if they met anywhere except in Philadelphia.

Al Brown, the bantamweight king, is another who may keep his N. B. A. title because of lack of sterling opponents.

Bad Outlook for Schmeling.

As for the other classes, it seems too bad for the titleholder of today. In the heavyweight division Max Schmeling seems certain to go down before one of several contenders. Max, for one thing, has not had enough fighting. He showed that in his struggle with Jack Sharkey. His layoff for another year will not help him.

In addition, Schmeling has some competition of a serious nature to face. He must fight at least twice, we take it—once in June and again in September.

The first bout we may reasonably assume will be with either Sharkey or Stribling. At this writing we would have to pick Schmeling to lose to either opponent.

It is probable that for the September event he will have to face the winner of a Stribling-Carnera fight if he survives the first battle. Again the chances appear unfavorable to Maxie.

There are other heavyweights in the offing but only an accident can bring them into the picture. The comparative novice Max Baer is one and Ernie Schaaf is another.

In the middleweight division one assumes that Mickey Walker will resign the title, as he may not be able to make the weight. If he does not retire from this class it is fairly certain that he will remain the title-holder at the end of the year. The crop of middleweights is ordinary.

Mickey Plays for Big Stakes.

Mickey is playing a peculiar game. While retaining the middleweight crown, he is trying to skip the lightheavyweight division and jump in among the heavies with a bid for the title. To this end he has been fighting big boys—and beating them. He trimmed Johnny Risko for one.

He wants a fight with Schmeling and such a battle might not be the huge joke it at first sight appears. Mickey always is ready to fight a buzzsaw and don't get the idea that the saw has a sure thing.

Schmeling is not clever enough to avoid Walker's powerful pistons and might conceivably be badly hurt before his weight advantage of 20 pounds could help him.

The welterweight class, next in line to Walker's kingdom, has Tommy Freeman as its head; but Tommy has only to take on any one of three opponents in a 15-round fight to lose his crown. Young Corbett, Young Jack Thompson and Jackie Fields all should be able to defeat Freeman. The next champion, therefore, seems likely to be the lucky one of the trio named—he who gets first chance! Young Corbett will, in all probability, eventually turn up on top of the heap.

Berg After Two Titles.

Jackie Berg is junior welter title holder at this time but if he has a title at the close of the year it probably will be the lightweight crown. If he boxes Jimmy McLarnin at the junior welter limit, McLarnin should win. Berg can't give away the weight and beat McLarnin. Then there's Billy Petrolle and King Tut in this class. They must be considered

Berg's proper place is in the lightweight class, however, and there he will probably turn up as the opponent of Tony Canzoneri, the unexpected champion of this division. Berg might have had this title today, but for his refusal to accept the terms offered for such a contest.

The featherweight ' a busy little class and Bat Battalino is confronted by too many possibilities to feel assured of retaining his crown. If he fights for his championship twice this year he will probably have to face Eddie Shea for one, and Fidel La Barba for the other.

The two midget classes merit little consideration. The bantams and flyweights have no Terry McGoverns and no Jimmy Wildes.

THE FIGHT GAME: Enter Big Money

The Boxer's Idea Today Is to "Knock Out the Dough" and Training Camps Have Lost Color.

By Daniel (Dumb Dan) Morgan.
Former Manager of Jack Britton, Battling Levinsky and Knockout Brown and Internationally Known Fight Authority.

BIG money has knocked all the fun out of boxing. All the romance, the drama, the humor—in fact, all the color has been driven from the game by the great destroyer of emotion, Heavy Dough! The fight, the glory of winning, the feeling that you can lick any man in the world don't mean a blamed thing to the young man in the boxing game today.

Take a look around in your gymnasium where you find hundreds of fighters training every day. What do you see? A lot of pasty-faced goofs with a hunted and a hunting look on their faces, going through a lot of motions that don't mean a thing.

Do you think these guys are thinking what they're doing? Not by a helluva sight they're not. They've got their mind's eye on the dough—how much money they can squeeze out of this racket. They remind me of hoboes peering into the gutter hoping to find a coin.

Or maybe it'd sound better if I said they're like a lot of prospectors hunting for gold mines. You see, they've been found, these gold mines in the fighting game, and just like a lot of ginks who never in their lives handled anything nearer a pick than a fork, will join the mad rush when gold is discovered in some new spot. Most of the so-called fighters of the present era have crowded into the fight racket. Some of 'em find .. nugget or two, and a very few of 'em wind up with less gold dust than you'd need to fill a tooth, but the great majority of 'em wind up with nothing but the dust, and it ain't gold, just dirty, powdered resin.

But that doesn't mean there's not a lot of dough in boxing. It's real big business.

The heavy dough is distributed among comparatively few fighters, compared to the thousands who are striving for a piece of it.

And in boxing today the object is money. Hence the old glamor and color all have left the ring and the training camps. Everything is business. There's no fun in the game any more.

Jack Dempsey Made Big Gates.

JACK DEMPSEY marked the turning point in boxing. He was the first big money shot among the boxers, and his was the last of the old-time boxing camps. And as he gradually went higher and higher in a financial way—I mean as he fought for bigger and bigger purses, so his training camp took on a more conservative atmosphere, until at the finish even Dempsey's camp was in the nature of being sort of a morgue.

Tunney went Jack one better by inaugurating the high-falutin' country-club idea in training camps. All this swell stuff is reserved only for the champions. But more and more the training camp has followed the general trend of the game, until now it too is on a strictly commercial basis. You go there and you pay your admission money to see the fighter go through his workout. Even the poor palookas and ham-and-beaners who train in the various gyms scattered throughout the city are put on exhibition by the proprietors of these gyms, and it costs the ordinary spectator anywhere from a quarter to half a buck to go in and watch the animals at work.

In the old days training was a lark. Out at Jimmy de Forest's place in Allenhurst, N. J., and even later at Long Branch, visitors always were welcome, the same as they were at Woodlawn Inn, Capt. Bond's, New Dorp and other places. But woe betide the unwary visitor who fell into the clutches of the sparring partners, the camp followers and the regulars, including sport writers and others who had business of a sort at the camp. For these tenderfeet were made the butts of practical jokes that kept not only the training fighter in good humor but supplied fun for everybody, even the victim of the joke in the long run.

But even in those days everything didn't run smoothly in camp unless there was a head to it.

A few years ago I had a bunch of fighters training at Stratford, Conn., and among them were Battling Levinsky, then light-heavyweight champ, and Al McCoy, current middleweight titleholder.

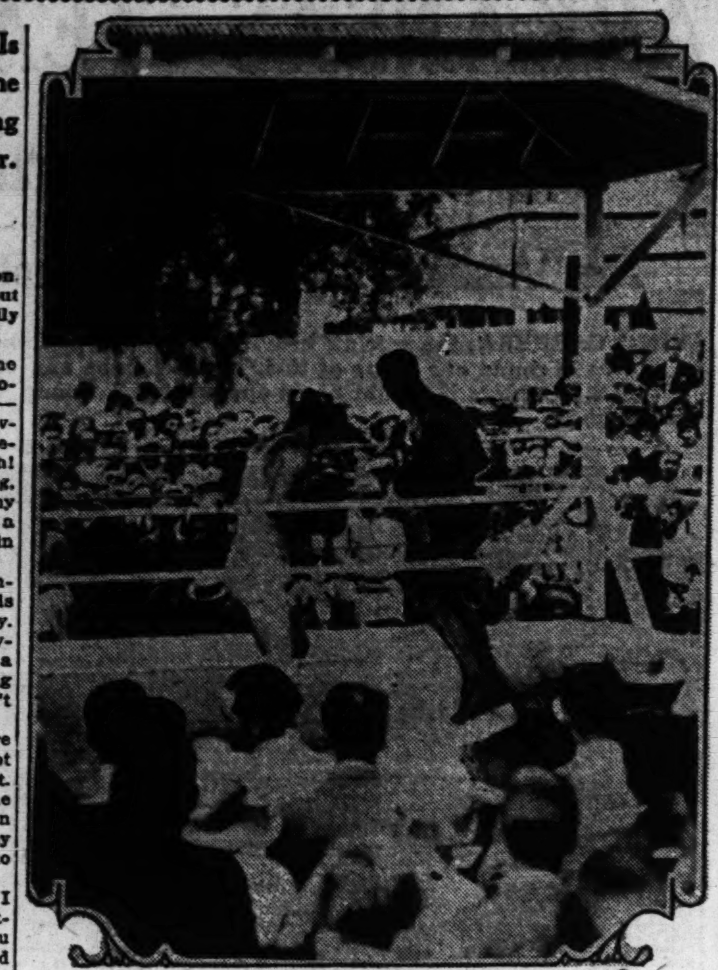
Two Hebrew champs. I kept 'em pretty busy, but I had to keep hustling for matches, so I couldn't afford to spend much time in the camp. Well, one day I'm in my office in New York, when I get a telephone call from one of the trainers, telling me to hustle up to the camp.

"They's hell to pay," sez he. "McCoy and Levinsky are sore on each other and they wanna fight. And without no GATE!"

So I grab a rattler and up I go. First one I meet is McCoy. He's waiting for me at the station.

"Dan," sez he, "I'm gonna crucify that big lil. I'm gonna lick him in a street fight, and it's gonna be with bare knuckles."

I look at him, thinkin' he's punch drunk or overstrained or something. But no, he just wants to battle.



Cedar Crest Country Club, where Tunney tuned up.

It's the same way when I meet Levinsky, for before I can say anything he pipes up:

"Dan, I must punch that sawed-off bonehead dizzy, and I'm gonna do it with bare knuckles."

I begin to think it's a kid or something, but I find there's really bad blood between 'em, and I'm in a fine pickle. An Irish manager trying to stop two Hebrew champs from fighting it out for nothing! So I say a silent prayer to St. Patrick to give the boys some sense, and I try to reason with 'em, but they insist on gettin' into one another's wool.

Now, I got several money matches for the two of 'em pending, and I also got a swell tip on a well-bred oat-chewer. So I tell 'em to sit down and listen to me, and not to say one word till I get through talking to 'em.

Well, sir, I got going and five hours later the two of 'em are sleeping soundly. The next day they agree to call off their fight rather than listen to me again.

Former Director of Fighters Says Tunney Originated "Country Club" Style of Training Camps.

HOWEVER, that was an exception. Usually, in the old days, everybody got along pretty well in the training camp, and there was plenty of fun. The boys used to work the old night snipe-hunting and badger trapping stunt on the innocents, and it was this that attached the saying, "left-holding the bag," to the fight game.

Jack Dempsey used to be the great guy around a camp. When he was training for his fight with Carpentier, he had fellows like Jack White, who later became one of the greatest comedians along Broadway, with him as his guests, and they used to keep things humming.

Yes, sir, in those days the boys played hard and they fought hard. Now they don't play at all and they fight the same way.

They're willing enough to go in and swap punches with anyone their weight, because they realize it's all a gamble, and if they make a hit with the crowd, they're pretty sure to be in demand by the matchmakers, and this will mean money for them. And with any kind of decent breaks they're liable to get up among the big dough guys.

I dunno. The fighters nowadays are all old men before they start, even. They lose their youth early. In fact, they don't seem ever to have had any. They're smarter, maybe; shrewder, I mean, and wiser, than the fighters of old. They're cagey, most of 'em, and when they get their license to fight, they're nearly always 21, no matter what the date on their true birth certificate might me.

Maybe it's because they're so well governed. Fighters today have to begin matching wits with older men right off the bat. But the main idea is money, money, money! The old gold is throwing a yaller tinge over the fight racket, and by cripes, the fighters themselves seem to be tinged that way, too!

THE ART OF SOCCER FOOTBALL No. 11

Secret of Power and Accuracy Lies In Swing of the Foot, Wilson Writes

Ideal Shot Is One That Does Not Go Up in Air, but Rising Ball Is Most Difficult to Save.

By Andy Wilson.
Of Scotland and Chelsea.
No. 11.

I have promised to go into some detail with regard to shooting, and this seems the best time to do it. I have already talked about the center forward position, and, because shooting most concerns the player in this role, I hope the two lessons will be taken together.

I have outlined the general idea—toe down and heel up. That, of course, is the first rule to master. The ideal shot is the one that does not go up in the air; but the rising shot is most difficult to save. To make the ball rise, yet prevent it from going over the cross bar, is, of course, no easy matter. The whole secret, however, lies in the swing of the foot.

The ball, I am presuming, is not "dead." You are running on to it. You have to aim, you have to get power, and you have to keep the ball low. First of all we will take power. With a ball that is not dead you cannot take your foot far back. In fact, in swinging you almost stab at the ball.

But, in stabbing, do not be content to stop your foot immediately it has connected with the ball. If you do, it is certain that, before your foot touches the ball, it will be stopping and you will lose power. Keep your foot going after it has hit the ball.

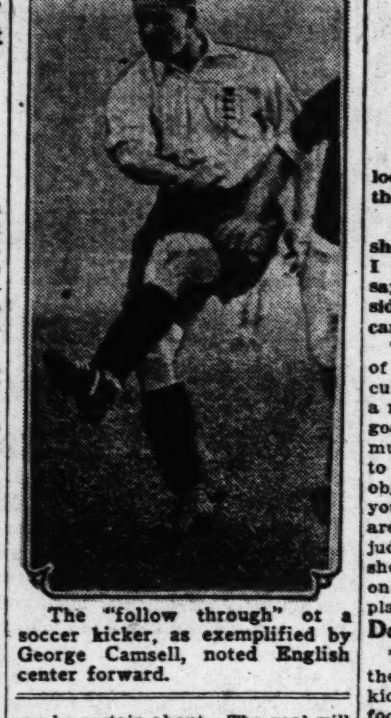
How to Get Power.

Now here is where the swing of the foot counts. Try two shots at goal with a moving ball. Take your first shot, and follow through with your foot, at the same time keeping the knee taut. In other words, you are shooting with the power of your whole leg. The ball will go up in the air. I care not how you keep your toe down and your heel up—if you can do it with a taut knee—the ball will travel upwards.

Now keep the knee loose and let the leg from the knee downwards do all the work. Hit the ball with the toe down, the heel up, the knee loose and, when you have finished the shot, your foot should be a foot from the ground, and your lower leg almost at right angles with your thigh.

This is what has happened. Your foot has traveled upwards, but your knee has acted as brake, and kept the upward travel in control. At the very most, the ball will no lift above head high.

So we come to aim. No man can look two ways at once, nor can a man shoot accurately if he does not first look to where he is shooting. But, as I have so often said, you must look at the ball when you are kicking. This much you can be certain about. The goal will not move, but the ball will. So most attention must be given to the ball.



The "follow through" of a soccer kicker, as exemplified by George Camsell, noted English center forward.

You see the ball coming. Now is the time to decide where you will shoot. I cannot tell you how to place your shot. I can only tell you that, in the second before you receive the ball and shoot, you must decide where to try and place the ball. Then you must concentrate upon the ball.

Secret of Placing.

The secret of good shooting, so far as placing is concerned, lies in the foot once again. If you hit the ball accurately with the instep, and follow through correctly, the toe of your boot will point to the exact place where the ball has gone. If your boot were loose, and came off, it would follow the flight of the ball.

I am trying to tell you that you must aim with your foot. If your eye and foot have perfect accord, and, of course, they must be for good shooting, your foot will travel towards the spot your eye has selected, and your foot will connect with the ball at that second when it is traveling fastest. In other words, when you are pressing into your foot all the shooting power of your leg, it stands to reason that your foot must travel a short distance before it reaches top power.

Never shoot with your toe end. You cannot get power, and you will most likely lift the ball up into the air. I am certain that you cannot shoot with your toe, and get any power, if the knee is loose, whilst, if the knee is taut, the ball must go up.

In Aiming, Give Most of Attention to Ball; It's the Thing That Moves, but the Goal Will Not Change Position.

Toe-enders often come when shooting with a dead ball. When I am shooting with a dead ball, say a penalty kick, I use the outside of my foot, and again I take care to keep my heel up.

The next shot is the volley. This, of course, is easily the most difficult to control. I do not blame a man who sends a volley over the goal or wide. You never have much time, and it is really difficult to get that fleeting glimpse of the objective, which is so essential. If you take your eye off the ball, you are almost certain slightly to misjudge it, and, therefore, slice your shot. Whereas keeping your eye on the ball means guesswork in placing your shot.

Don't Follow Through.

The great danger is lunging at the ball. Invariably you have to kick at the ball as it drops to your foot, and the very action of bringing your foot up to the ball makes it difficult to control. The best way of making this shot, if you have time, is to stab very distinctly at the ball without any follow through. You almost let the ball drop to your foot, and just give it enough power to change its direction. At the most do not let your foot travel above three inches. In addition, as you hit the ball, so you draw your foot back.

It sounds very difficult I know—it is difficult—and the best way to practice this shot is to take a ball out and throw it high against a wall and keep on shooting on the volley as it drops.

A better shot, of course, is the half volley. This is little more than a stab, except that you do not draw your foot back. You do follow through slightly. Your foot connects with the ball exactly the moment when it touches the ground. In fact, your toe and the ball touch the ground together. Again you keep the heel up. Do not, in any circumstances, spoon the ball up. If you hit the ball too soon or too late, before it reaches the ground or just when it bounces, you are sure to send the ball flying over the bar. Perfect timing is the secret of this shot.

My picture this week shows the body and leg position of George Camsell, the Middlesbrough and England center forward, after a shot. Note the loose knee of his left leg and the position of the foot, which clearly demonstrates how he has followed. The foot does not show the down pointed toe that is only to be seen at the actual impact; as he follows through, of course, the toe rises. In fact, he has slightly aided power of shooting by so raising his toe.

Two new players, one from Canada and another from Chicago will be given trials by the Ben Millers when that club meets the Hellrungs in the second game of the St. Louis Soccer League double-header at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. CATHERINE WINTHROP WINNER OF NATIONAL JUNIOR TENNIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Jan. 3.—Catherine Winthrop of Hamilton defeated Hilda Boehm of Malden, 6—3, 6—3, to win the national junior women's indoor singles tennis championship today. This year was the first in five that the championship has gone outside the Palfrey family of Brookline. Sarah Palfrey won the championship three out of the past four years.

Hilda Boehm gained some measure of redress for her defeat in the singles by pairing with her sister, Helen Boehm to win the doubles championship. They defeated Mary Cutter of Winchester, and Helen Fulton of Chicago, 6—4, 8—6.

STEELE WORKS OUT FOR DUSEK BOUT

Training workouts with Lloyd Burdick and Joe Sanderson on the mat at the National Gymnasium featured yesterday's conditioning activities of Roy Steele of Seattle, in preparation for his wrestling bout with Rudy Dusek of Omaha, Neb., Thursday night at the Coliseum.

Milo Steinborn will meet Kola Kwariani, Russian, in a one-fall finish tussle billed as the semi-windup of Thursday night's program. In a 30-inute prelim of last Tuesday night's card Steinborn and Kwariani wrestled to a draw.

George Tragos, local Greek heavyweight, meets John Katan of Vancouver, B. C., and Lloyd Burdick, former Illinois University athlete, matches grips with Andrew Zahranoff, a 235-pound Russian, in other prelim bouts, limited to 30 minutes.

ST. CHARLES SWAMPS CARLYLE FIVE, 40-24

St. Charles High School overwhelmed Carlyle (Ill.) High in their basketball game at St. Charles last night, 40 to 24, leading throughout the play.

After being held to three points in the first quarter, St. Charles ran its total to 17 at half time and was always far ahead thereafter.

Towers, right forward for St. Charles, made eight field goals and a free throw for 17 points, and Bacon, the other St. Charles forward, had 12 points. Hauskins, Carlyle center, with 10 points, led Coach Purnell's team, which last year won the Central Illinois district tournament.

Speaking of Parties.

Mr. Coolidge says our people are not "third-party minded." They are party minded all right, but their attitude is, the more the merrier

And the guy who can't make at least three parties on New Year's eve isn't much of a partisan

Of course there are parties and parties To one you belong and the other you go on

But whether they be Republican, Democratic or wild parties they all are apt to give you a headache

Besides a headache, the two former sometimes give you a pain in the neck

Ralph Greenleaf won his pocket billiard match with the "Masked Marvel." Indicating that the M. M. is no longer an unknown quantity.

He's in Again.

Among other impedimenta found on Art Shires when searched in a Hollywood police station was a pair of brass knucks.

BRASS knucks, when guys you want to hit,
Are mightier than the padded
mitt;
And so when found on "Whataman"
They promptly threw him in the can.

"Gets $12,000 for Buying Uncle Plug of Tobacco."

When out of bread cast a plug of tobacco on the water.

Between runs on the banks and runs in the Christmas silk stockings, everybody is getting a run for their money.

"Cubs Sign Hartnett as $20,000 Catcher."

In baseball's land of milk and honey,
"Gabby" talks and so does money.

"College Bodies to Talk Football."

Although the pigskin's on the table,
To talk about it still they're able.

What Do You Mean, Leading?

"Stribling Rated as Leading Heavy."

THOUGH Strib may be the leading heavy
Of whom, or which, there's quite a bevy,
Some say his caution is exceeding
And that he does but little leading.

Jack Dempsey expects to clean up $100,000 as guest referee in 30 fights. Indicating that the "guest referee" will get his whether he guessed right or not.

Of course, Jack used to get that much for one fight, but while a referee might get bawled out occasionally, he is never knocked out. And, as Tim Hurst once said, "The pay is good and you can't beat them hours."

Which recalls a little exchange of repartee between Johnny and the teacher, who was bawling him out because he couldn't count higher than 10.

"What do you expert to be when you grow up?" asked the teacher.

"A referee," said Johnny.

Knute Rockne's doctor has ordered him to cut out the public speaking. Indicating that in the future Knute will confine his remarks to the squad.

Which will be tough on the public, as Knute was almost as good an after-dinner wind-jammer as he is a coach.

McGraw Says Frankie Frisch Made the Outstanding Play of the World Series

Cardinal Star Dived for Cochrane's Drive and, Still on Ground, Threw Mack's Catcher Out at First.

This is the first of a series in which John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, will point out the inside of the most outstanding plays of the World Series between the Cardinals and the Philadelphia Athletics.

By John J. McGraw,

No. 1.—World Series Plays.

THERE were many important plays of greatness in the world series between the Athletics and the Cardinals—many that attracted world-wide attention because they were made at critical moments and had a definite bearing on the results. I will take these up in their turn. But for sheer artistry the outstanding play of the series, according to my way of thinking, was made by Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals in the sixth and last game at Philadelphia.

To those whose enthusiasm centered in the outcome, this brilliant piece of fielding is probably forgotten. It could not possibly have changed the result. In fact, the Athletics had just scored two runs on a home run by Jimmy Dykes that eventually proved to be the deciding hit of the game.

Taking Chances.

THE ability of a shortstop or second baseman depends largely on his alertness in watching the pitching signals and in studying the batter. As a rule he has made up his mind which way to move before the batter swings at the ball. A smart infielder doesn't often guess wrong, but if he does he is simply out of luck. Anyway, he must make up his mind and take the chance.

One of the beauties of this play was that it came just after the Athletics had driven a harpoon in the chances of the Cardinals with Dyke's home run. The fighting spirit of the Cardinals had not died, however, with the heavy-heartedness of the fans who were pulling for St. Louis.

Still, there was but one out at the time, and, but for Frisch's great play the Athletics might have continued the rally.

With the crowd still buzzing over the home run and the probable end of the series, Mickey Cochrane came to bat. All along he had been figured for one of the most dangerous hitters. As Sylvester Johnson, then pitching for St. Louis, wound up, Frisch evidently figured on the ball being "pulled."

Frisch's Dive.

AS COCHRANE swung, Frisch swung his body toward first base. But for that move he would never have made it. The ball was hit like a shot and started like a surely safe drive to right field. By keeping on his feet, Frisch could never have reached the ball. Realizing this, he continued his momentum with a headlong dive, his outstretched hand knocking down the ball.

Even then he still had to keep his wits. Completely off balance—on the ground, in fact—Frankie rolled over and over until his hand clutched the ball. He then came to his feet, or partly so, in position to throw, and made a perfect peg to Bottomley, getting his man by a hair. For sheer artistry, this was a stand-out play of the whole series. No man who ever played the infield could forget that one.

JEFF PFEFFER, FORMER PITCHER, TO UMPIRE IN AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Jeff Pfeffer, former Chicago, St. Louis and Brooklyn National League Pitcher, will serve on the umpire staff of the American Association next season. Pfeffer today was signed by President Thomas Jefferson Hickey to replace E. H. Osborn, who will umpire in the Three-Eye League.

BASKET TEAM GETS 132 POINTS IN TWO GAMES

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., Jan. 3.—The Caruthersville Junior College Jayhawks defeated Jonesboro, Ark., College here last night, 67 to 22, in a loosely-played basketball game. The Jayhawk five displayed form that was too much for the Arkansas College players.

Jones of the Jays led in scoring with 18 points, followed closely by Glenn with 16 and Hope with 12 points.

In two games this season the Jayhawks have scored 132 points to 44 for their opponents.

BIG TEN BASKET RACE GETS UNDER WAY THIS WEEK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Jan. 3.—With three months of workouts behind them, the basketball teams in the Big Ten Conference will enter the annual race for the championship next week and from present indications the title will be in doubt until near the close of the campaign. Wisconsin and Illinois will be the first to break the ice. Wisconsin playing on Illinois' floor Jan. 5. On the following night Purdue will play at Michigan and on Saturday night, Jan. 10, all teams will be in action, with Chicago at Indiana, Illinois at Purdue, Minnesota at Iowa, Wisconsin at Ohio State and Michigan at Northwestern. The season will close on March 9.

As in past years, many close games likely will be witnessed during the conference season and upsets probably will be plentiful. In practice games with non-conference teams, the majority of conference teams made favorable showings, winning the larger percentage of their games. These practice games gave the coaches an idea of the worth of their players and enabled them to correct the weak spots and to develop the best combinations.

Purdue, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Northwestern and Illinois appear as having the strongest quintets this season and should accordingly put in strong bids for the championship. Nevertheless, Chicago, Ohio State, Minnesota and Iowa may have something to say about the matter and may upset the dope bucket, something which has happened many times in previous years. Purdue won the championship a year ago by winning 10 games and dropping none, being the first year since 1919 the title was won by a team having a clean slate.

The Boilermakers will be without the services of three brilliant players, "Stretch" Murphy, Harmeson and Boots. However, Purdue has a wealth of material and they should play a speedy game. Indiana also lost a star in the graduation of Branch McCracken last June. Nevertheless there are plenty of other fast men on the squad this season.

RAY ZEIGLER AND SWEENEY TO BOWL GARAFOLA, ARPIANI

Ray Ziegler, young star of the International Greyhounds, and Morgan Sweeney of the Brennans will meet Sam Garafolo and Gus Arpiani, teammates on the Wellston Bottlers, in a five-game total pins bowling match at the Wellston Recreation alleys at 7 o'clock tonight.

Garafolo and Ziegler are on top in the averages of the Wellston Scratch League and their partners are only slightly behind them in the averages of the same league.

FIVE-MAN SWEEPSTAKE BOWLING TOURNAMENT

A five-man sweepstakes bowling tournament in which nearly all of the leading teams of the city will participate will be held next Saturday and Sunday at Vescovo's University City alleys.

Teams that have already filed their entries for the event include the International Greyhounds, Wooster Lamberts, Witter Razz, Congress Alleys, Schmitts, Meadow Golds, Sunshines, Melene Recreation, Clayton Recreation, Floriss Portsiders, Vescovo Recreations, Charlotte Florals, South Side Chevrolets, Herrmanns, Brennan Grocers, Volland Studios, Rogers, Floris Recreations, Fremder Electrics, Will Docters, Julians and the Shapco Shields.

The squads have been filled but for a few openings on the 7 and 9 o'clock shifts on Saturday and the 7 o'clock squad on Sunday.

CENTRALIA DEFEATS BELLEVILLE, 20-15

Belleville High School entertained Centralia (Ill.) High last night in a basketball game and met defeat by a 20-15 score when it failed in the final quarter, after being tied at the end of the half and again at the end of the third quarter.

Ehret of Belleville was high scorer with three field goals and two foul throws for eight points. Two of his teammates, Braun and Kane, had three points each. For Centralia, M. Mooney, center, had two field goals and two free tosses for six points, and his brother, W. Mooney, a guard, had three points. Spurgeon, with two field goals for four points, was third high in scoring.

not know what to make of it. Some treat the subject facetiously, others cynically, and a few take the revival at its face value.

Wrestling has been taboo in New York for so long that its gradual comeback in the last year has not been noticed. Now it has broken back into the Garden—and the fun is about to begin.

The fighters and their managers, plus the New York Commission, having dealt a stunning blow to the fight game, the wrestlers will have the box office to themselves, for a while.

Some "Expert" Comments.

SPEAKING of the surprising rise of wrestling, Joe Williams in the New York Telegram wrote in part:

"The customers have grown weary of prizefighters and have turned to the grunters and groaners who are much more skillful and painstaking in the broader phases of theatricalism. After some of the unsavory prize fights committed around here recently, a fine old uproarious rough - and - tumble wrestling show is a refreshing thing.

"It doesn't make any great difference whether the big fellows are leveling. At least the performance is always exciting, and that seems to be all that anybody cares about.

"In no other sport will you see so much physical torture or human suffering, or what passes for these. Eyes are gouged. Hair is pulled out in tufts. Arms and legs are twiste to what seems the breaking point. Occasionally a rousing haymaker is planted on the button. Some of the more eccentric artists affect the forthright mannerisms of mountain goats and drive their noodles into an opponent's abdomen.

"The emotional reactions of the customers are edifying, indeed. They love it. The more brutal it looks the greater the thrill. Nothing short of a bloodless pogrom ever satisfies."

"Perfect Dramatization."

W. O. McGEEHAN, a nationally known commentator on sports, is moved to a lengthy consideration of the subject, of which the following is a brief excerpt:

"The bouts were consummately well cast, and each and every one of them preserved what the boys call the unities of the drama, whatever those may be. Each bout had the rhythm of the conventional three-act play working up to the perfect climax where the tragedian or the villain of the bout was sent bouncing along the mat to his doom. Any student of Greek tragedy could pick the winner after the first few motions, because pachyderm drama (wrestling) essentially is ancient Greek.

"Of course, it would be of no financial benefit for one to pick the winner of a wrestling bout, for nobody bets on wrestling bouts. It would be like trying to get a bet down on the result of a motion picture version of the chariot race in 'Ben Hur.' There could be no law against betting with a friend or acquaintance, but it simply is not done.

"It is significant that the overemphasis of wrestling is simultaneous with the decline and flop of the cauliflower industry. Only a few years ago, Jack Curley had only one pachyderm, and the poor creature showed signs of being on short rations. Now Mr. Curley and an entire herd of pachyderms are eating regularly at Great Neck and the pachyderm performances are selling out at Madison Square Garden, while the customers are walking out on the fight racket."

Stole Sandow's Thunder.

THE real What-a-Man of all this is not Jack Curley, as New York seems to think. He is Christ Theophilos. Perhaps you know him better as Jimmy Londos.

Londos has been the power behind the scenes of the development of wrestling in several centers, notably St. Louis, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Memphis, Atlanta and other points.

It has been reported that Londos is a silent partner in some of these promotions although that has never been admitted by him or his associates. But it has been Londos who has held the wrestling spotlight in all these communities, with the possible exception of Los Angeles, which is a divided territory, both the Sandow and the Londos groups operating there, at times.

For years Billy Sandow, with Ed Lewis, Wayne Munn, Sonnenberg and now Ed George as his aces, controlled the big shots of wrestling with Chicago, Boston, Kansas City and the coast cities as his stamping ground. When Lewis faded it was Sonnenberg who whetted the jaded public appetite for wrestling with his flying tackle. That caught the popular fancy. The Sandow-Bowser wrestling alliance went big for a while.

Rise of the Spectacular.

SINCE that time Jim Londos and the group he works with saw the spectacular features of the flying tackle or butt and adopted that and other new features of the enemy group such as the airplane spin. Furthermore they put on an even better show than the Sandow wrestlers, to the end that they have crowded the Lewis combination out of first position.

Londos is rated a far superior wrestler to Sonnenberg and that type. Doubtless he could throw most of the present Sandow group of wrestlers in one evening. By keeping himself in condition displaying new holds and freak grips and putting on a good show everywhere he has stolen the show, even though Ed George can trace a better "paper" title than Londos himself.

Nobody can say what will happen to this new wrestling craze, which consists of plenty of showmanship, constant fouling and an unknown amount of competition. For the present it is pleasing the public. Sooner or later, with the public eye focussed on it, it will have to produce some real goods or suffer the experience it went through more than a decade ago.

Entries for the Greater St. Louis Bowling Association's annual handicap tourney, scheduled to begin at the Mid-City alleys, Jan. 24, close Saturday at midnight. Entry fee is $1 for each event and blanks can be had from Secretary Jerry Ameling, 4870 Margaretta avenue.

A handicap mixed doubles contest is scheduled for tonight on the Arway Recreation drives. Squads will bowl at 7 and 9 o'clock. Reservations can be made by calling PRospect 9931.

Bowlers from practically all of the Councils of the Knights of Columbus in St. Louis and vicinity will compete for a diamond medal and other prizes given by the St. Louis County K. of C. bowling league in their handicap sweepstakes at the Clayton alleys next Saturday and Sunday. On the following Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 17 and 18, the Goodfellowship sweepstakes will be rolled. The awards in this event will not be made on high scores, but through a medium of distribution which assures all participants an equal chance in the prize awards. Entry blanks for these events can be obtained from the officers of the different leagues or from Frank Sennewald, 6339 Derby avenue, St. Louis, an Fred W. Kiefer, 201 S. Kirkwood road, Kirkwood, Mo.

The Cinderella Recreation Five led the teams in the Cinderella Scratch League last week, rolling 2946 and winning two games from the South Side Leaders. The Cinderellas had a high single count of 1049. Frenger, 618, and Menke, 603, were high. Although Baker hit 630 and Eck 604, the Weicks dropped three games to the Falstaffs. The final game was won by three pins. Ulentrup rolled 625 for the Falstaffs. The Witter Oranges took two from the Schweiglers. R. Ballier, 626, and H. Bartels, 611, were high. In the other match the Waysides won two from the Cherokees.

G. Frank's 630 was high in the Cinderella Handicap League last week, but his team, the Schadys, dropped the odd game to the Rosenthals. Remmler rolled 609 to lead the winners. P. Ross shot 611 and O. Brader 601, but the Braders lost two to the Flash Motors. In the other matches the Propers won three from the D. and Z. Five, the Spuds won two from the Arrows and the Uniteds took two from the Kuennes.

16 STARS WILL START PLAY IN TENPIN LEAGUE

By Herman Wecke.

An individual bowling league, in which 16 of the leading bowlers of the city will compete, will open its season on the Washington alleys with eight matches today. A 15-weeks' schedule will be rolled and winners will be decided on the point system. The winner will be able to claim the individual championship of the city, inasmuch as the league rolling will be a far greater test of skill than competition in a tournament.

All matches will be eight games and will be rolled on the fourth-floor alleys, which have a seating capacity of 200 people, an admission charge of 50 cents being in effect. The major portion of the gate receipts will be given to the league to be placed in the prize fund, with the balance going to cover necessary expenses of the tournament. In addition to his monetary reward, the bowler winning the league championship will be presented with a diamond medal, donated by Otto Stein Jr., league sponsor.

The entrants in the league are: Lee Martin, "Buzz" Wilson, Freddie Krems, Cone Herrmann, Hank Summers, Oscar Whitehead, Harry Deen, Chris Sottrell, Frank Kastner, Ray Ziegler, Mitzi Weinstein, Herman Hahn, Ben Cohen, Roy Nelson, Ray Holmes and Sam Garafolo.

Young Stars Entered.

The competition will send several of St. Louis' younger bowling stars against veteran performers. Ziegler, Holmes, Garafolo and Weinstein have come to the fore in the past few seasons. Ziegler, with games of 278, 278 and 300 in a special doubles match, recently rolled the highest three-game total ever recorded in the city; Holmes only recently lost a 10 games match to Frank Kartheiser, Chicago star, by four pins; Garafolo is the present Missouri State all-events champion, while Weinstein has rolled well in league and special match competition.

Others in the circuit are well known. Summers is a former A. B. C. singles champion; Hahn finished second in the all-events of the recent Central States tournament, while Cohen paired with Groneck won the doubles championship.

Under the scoring system to be used it will be possible for a bowler to chalk up 12 points in a match. One point will be given for a victory in each game and one point for total pins in each two games.

Fine Opening Matches.

An individual league, along similar lines was conducted several years ago, and furnished some fine competition, although the class of tenpinners was not as high as the present entry list. Matches will be rolled every Sunday afternoon until the 15 weeks' schedule has been completed.

The opening schedule:

First Squad, 2 P. M.
Martin vs. Wilson.
Krem vs. Herrmann.
Summers vs. Whitehead.
Deen vs. Softrell.

Second Squad 3:30 P. M.
Kastner vs. Ziegler.
Weinstein vs. Hahn.
Holmes vs. Garafolo.
Cohen vs. Nelson.

The opening card should be productive of some fine bowling. Among the feature matches will be the Martin vs. Wilson; Kastner vs. Ziegler; Holmes vs. Garafolo and Cohen vs. Nelson contests. Some high scoring should result in each match, if the bowlers are going at top speed.

New Team in Superior Girls' Basket League

The Superior Girls Basketball League will resume activities at the Armory with two games scheduled for Wednesday evening. The league has announced the addition of a new team which is expected to add interest to the second half of the schedule. The new team will be known as Chappell's Aces and is composed of some of the best players in the city. They will be coached by Chappell, a newcomer in basketball circles in St. Louis. He has coached several championship teams in the South.

The schedule for Wednesday night brings together the leading Bly-Moss team and the Continentals at 8 o'clock, the latter being out to avenge their defeat by Bly-Moss in the first round.

In the second game Tom Graney's team will take the floor the first time this season with the entire squad in good physical concondition and should make things quite interesting for the fast Aquinas Club, runners-up in the first round.

The Aces will make their first appearance Jan. 14.

Wants Illinois to Legalize 15-Round Fights and Bar Individuals as Promoters

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The present Illinois boxing bill may be materially revised at the forthcoming session of the State Legislature if changes proposed by Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the State Boxing Commission, are approved by the State law-makers.

In conjunction with his annual report to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson for 1930, Gen. Clinnin proposes an amendment whereby only corporations, clubs or associations can be licensed as promoters of boxing and wrestling contests. The State boxing chief favors the abolition of licenses to individuals.

In explaining his attitude on this proposal today, Gen. Clinnin said: "Our experiences with licensed promoters leads us to believe that we can expect more stability of purposes and responsibility from clubs, associations and corporations. Individual promoters seem to lack the stability we would like them to have and we believe better co-operation can be obtained if licenses are granted only to responsible organizations."

Title Bouts of 15 Rounds.

Gen. Clinnin also proposes an amendment to permit 15-round bouts in Illinois when a world's championship is at stake. The present maximum number is 10 rounds, which was established when the boxing bill was formulated in 1926.

Adoption of the 15-round bill would enable Illinois to compete more successfully with other major boxing states, such as New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan, to secure championship contests, Gen. Clinnin declared. These states possess 15-round bills, with a resultant advantage to promoters in offering terms for outstanding champuionship matches. Gen. Clinnin cited that Illinois has had no championship contest in a period of nearly two years.

The Illinois chairman thinks the 15-round distance a more satisfactory test when a championship is involved. He does not favor more than 10 rounds for any bout other than a championship.

Would Regulate Amateurs.

The Illinois Commission is again asking a more definite range of authority in the amateur boxing field, Gen. Clinnin's report reveals. He has requested changes in the sections of the boxing bill pertaining to the amateur ranks and declared today that his proposals were recently advised and approved by representatives of the Central Amateur Athletic Union. Gen. Clinnin said:

"We are asking more definite authority as pertains to the amateurs. Points in mind are proper examination and regulation of principals and proper conduct of amateur bouts. The underlying purpose is to prevent professional promoters from prospecting the amateur field, for we feel that many youngsters now boxing as amateurs are being permitted, if not actually persuaded, to lose interest in school life and other fields which might be open to them for successful employment."

Schaefer Will Play St. Louis Amateur Stars

Jake Schaefer, world's 18.2 balkline champion, will be seen in exhibition matches at Peterson's parlors tomorrow and Tuesday afternoon and evening. Schaefer will oppose Ed Wills and Ed Gibbons, local amateur stars, in 18.2 matches his first day in this city. The chances are that Peterson, who rules as the fancy shot champion, will play the titleholder in one of Tuesday's games.

Peterson also announced that he would make an effort to have Schaefer show in short three-cushion matches during his stay in St. Louis.

EAST ST. LOUIS SOCCER LEAGUE CLUBS WILL RESUME PLAY TODAY

The two leading soccer teams in the East St. Louis Municipal League will attempt to strengthen their positions this afternoon at Jones' Park as the Dauers meet the Lansdowns in the opener at 2 o'clock, and the French Villagers play Fairmont at 3:15. The Dauers and the Villagers lead the second half of the split season, with one victory each, while Fairmont, which won the first-half title, has not won a game thus far.

The second half of the season began two weeks ago with the Dauers winning from Fairmont, 2-1, and the Villagers winning over the Lansdown outfit, 1-0, after the latter team left the field following a dispute with the referee.

The complaint of the Lansdowns was settled last Tuesday with the dismissal of Tom Yates, the official in question, and Jack O'Connell was chosen to work the remainder of the season.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Comple of readjustment and prepara for recovery, rather than any al increase in total building engineering volume, seem to the indicated 1931 program of construction industry as a le. Total 1931 construction vol may approximate that of 1930, some realignment of the sev classes of buildings that will e up the year's program, but recovery and expanding activ throughout the construction would now seem to be sched for 1932 and thereafter.

he one general class of build that may reasonably be ex ted to increase appreciably this is the residential class, includ one-family, two-family and tifamily houses; such increases this class of activity now seems promise are likely to be moder rather than very large, for it scarcely be said today that djustment of demand and sup of residential buildings has n completed, even though such djustment has advanced further n it has in other classes of lding.

mall house building of the apest grade has been on the de e since the end of 1925, parallel the declining movement of the ex number of real estate trans the residential class as a ole has been declining since the ddle of 1928 and reached in 1930 oint 60 per cent below the peak ume. In the spring and again the fall of 1930 there were hope indications of a residential re al, but in the main the trend a sidewise movement through 0.

Vacancy surveys reported by the tional Associations of Real Es e Boards at various times dur last year indicated the approach normal balance of demand and pply, without indicating the de lopment of any shortage or urg residential demand. However, djustment does not have to be mplete everywhere and in every d of residential building before mand for some kind of buildings some places can appear. Al dy in the fall of 1930 there was definite increase in contracts for artment buildings in New York; ring should bring some improve nt in small house building, and artment activity should increase mewhat through the coming ar.

Seen as Forerunner.

Residential building recovery is customary forerunner of an up rn in the cycle of general busi s; commercial and industrial ilding usually turn upward some onths after the turn in general siness. In the recent boom com rcial and industrial building both ached peak volume as late as 29. While activity in both classes s drastically curtailed in 1930 ommercial building contracts opped 22 per cent; industrial ilding contracts dropped 40 per nt), there remain at the present e sizable surpluses of both.

It seems more than likely that mmercial and industrial build will continue to decline in 31, without much likelihood of turn until late in the year, and at both may have smaller vol es for the year as a whole than 1930. In order that private ilding activity in 1931 may equal 30 it will be necessary for the obable residential building in ease to balance probable further clines in commercial and indus al building; such a result may possible, though the odds arcely seem to favor it at this e.

More Public Works.

With public building, public orks and public utilities the sit ation is somewhat different. The cent extended speculative boom s principally in private building tivity and largely concerned in pansion of our cities and towns. ch expansion has in many cases oceeded beyond the supply of cessary community services and nveniences. There are today rge accumulations of plans for ch projects representing definite mmunity needs. For many of em funds are available or can made available. NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Completion of readjustment and preparation for recovery, rather than any actual increase in total building and engineering volume, seem to be the indicated 1931 program of the construction industry as a whole. Total 1931 construction volume may approximate that of 1930, with some realignment of the several classes of buildings that will make up the year's program, but full recovery and expanding activity throughout the construction field would now seem to be scheduled for 1932 and thereafter.

The one general class of buildings that may reasonably be expected to increase appreciably this year is the residential class, including one-family, two-family and multifamily houses; such increases in this class of activity now seems to promise are likely to be moderate rather than very large, for it can scarcely be said today that readjustment of demand and supply of residential buildings has been completed, even though such readjustment has advanced further than it has in other classes of building.

A Sidewise Movement.

Small house building of the cheapest grade has been on the decline since the end of 1925, paralleling the declining movement of the index number of real estate transfers; the residential class as a whole has been declining since the middle of 1928 and reached in 1930 a point 60 per cent below the peak volume. In the spring and again in the fall of 1930 there were hopeful indications of a residential revival, but in the main the trend had a sidewise movement through 1930.

Already in the fall of 1930 there was a definite increase in contracts for apartment buildings in New York; spring should bring some improvement in small house building, and apartment activity should increase somewhat through the coming year.

Seen as Forerunner.

Residential building recovery is the customary forerunner of an upturn in the cycle of general business; commercial and industrial building usually turn upward some months after the turn in general business. In the recent boom commercial and industrial building both reached peak volume as late as 1929. While activity in both classes was drastically curtailed in 1930 (commercial building contracts dropped 32 per cent; industrial building contracts dropped 40 per cent), there remain at the present time sizable surpluses of both.

It seems more than likely that commercial and industrial building will continue to decline in 1931, without much likelihood of upturn until late in the year, and that both may have smaller volumes for the year as a whole than in 1930. In order that private building activity in 1931 may equal 1930 it will be necessary for the probable residential building increase to balance probable further declines in commercial and industrial building; such a result may be possible, though the odds scarcely seem to favor it at this time.

More Public Works.

With public building, public works and public utilities the situation is somewhat different. The recent extended speculative boom was principally in private building activity and largely concerned in expansion of our cities and towns. Such expansion has in many cases proceeded beyond the supply of necessary community services and conveniences. There are today large accumulations of plans for such projects representing definite community needs. For many of them funds are available or can be made available. The limitations in these classes of work are those pointed out by President Hoover, the limitations set by amounts that our communities can afford to spend out of taxes or to raise from bond issues.

Public and institutional buildings dropped only slightly in volume in 1930 and are likely to maintain aproximately equal volume in 1931. Public works and utilities projects (mainly civil engineering work) increased 15 per cent in 1930, reaching the largest total volume on record. The big let in the first half of the year on projects that had already been planned.

While there are still many planned prospects and many important needs to be served by increased activity of this sort, the reasonable expectation seems to be against another record-breaking volume in 1931. It must be said, however, that extraordinary vigor and speed on the part of public officials might conceivably give the country a public works program in 1931 equal to or even larger than that of 1930.

Beginnings of Recovery.

Even though the indications seem to point to total construction volume a little under that of 1930 or at best equal that of 1930, this analysis does indicate real beginnings of recovery and preparation for a wholesome period of expansion in 1932 and after. It is also possible, of course, that recovery may come a little faster than anticipated once it gets started.

For all kinds of building and engineering work, large and small, private and public, the American people spent approximately $70,000,000,000 in the decade 1920-1929. Population, community requirements, social and economic activities have continued to increase and will, so far as any one can tell, increase further in the decade 1930-1939. New industries, new forms of social and economic organizations are likely to arise, each of which will require some characteristic new types of structures. Building and engineering activity will revive, as they always have, and will continue to increase so long as America grows.

But if we look back at the amazing decade 1920-1929, we will see that only $27,000,000,000 of its $70,000,000,000 construction total was spent in the first half of the decade (1920-1924), when there was a shortage to be filled, and $43,000,000,000 were spent in the succeeding five years (1925-1929) after the actual shortage had been filled. So powerful was the credit stimulant that was administered to the building industry during the years 1925-1928, and so persistently successful were its results during those four years that practically every one accepted the theory that credit had enabled American prosperity to lift itself by its own bootstraps to permanent dizzy heights.

Two Years for Readjustment.

Under these circumstances it is not entirely surprising that two years (1930 and 1931) may be required for a complete readjustment of the building industry. Apparently it took all of 1930 to deflate several fallacies almost universally held at the opening of the year: (1) That the recession would be short lived, that recovery would come by the middle of 1930 and that boom activity could be reached again within a comparatively short time. (2) That various kinds of financial stimulants could revive the building business, prostrate from financial overstimulation. (3) That the Federal Government, generally considered by business men as unable to conduct business activities as efficiently as private enterprise, could by fiat, by conferences and by spending taxpayers' money, contribute leadership to the revival of an industry sick from speculative excesses.

It now becomes apparent that our recent building boom over-anticipated building-market requirements very considerably and that it may take until 1933 or 1934 to reach again a volume of construction equal to the average annual volume of the 1925-1928 era; that the building industry is another American industry that finds itself today with a considerably larger productive capacity than it can keep fully employed in the near future.

Realization Will Help.

Realization of these facts as 1931 opens and necessary readjustment of the building industry's ideas and methods on this new basis will constitute real progress.

Such realization will open up real opportunities—not opportunities to make money, but opportunities for unification of diverse interests within the industry, improved technology, economies in construction methods and uses of materials, in selling and financing, perhaps even some system of production control, some kind of voluntary regulation of speculative activities that may help to stabilize the business.

The new decade probably offers to the building industry bigger opportunities for achievement, for service to the American people, and for increased profits—than any previous era.

The opportunities of 1931 are the opportunities for the building industry to put its house in order, to modernize its processes through and through and prove its capacity to do a sounder construction job in the new decade than it did in the one recently closed.

NOMINATIONS CLOSE IN BUILDING CONTEST

Judges to Make Plans This Week for Inspection of 30 Structures.

With the closing last Wednesday of nominations in the competition for awards being offered by the Better Appearance Committee of the Chamber of Commerce Civic Development Bureau for the best buildings completed in St. Louis during 1930, the judges in the contest will this week make plans for the inspection of the buildings.

Over 30 buildings within the city limits have been nominated. One or more buildings may be selected from among the seven classifications for award. The owners of those buildings singled for award will receive bronze tablets, and certificates of merit will be awarded to the architects, engineers and contractors associated in their design and construction.

The judging will be done by a special Committee of Award, which is conducting the contest. Members of this committee are: Wilbur T. Trueblood, president of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, chairman; Prof. Gabriel Ferrand, head of the School of Architecture, Washington University; W. P. Pennell, president of the Engineers' Club of St. Louis; Meyric R. Rogers, director of the City Art Museum, and F. C. Woermann, past president of the Engineers' Club. At least a month will be required before the judges will be able to announce their decision.

This is the first year the Chamber has conducted a building contest in line with efforts it is making to stimulate the construction of buildings which will produce a good impression. The contest is expected to be an annual event. Due to the present building slump, it was not expected that nearly as many nominations as have been received would be made.

BUILDING AND LOAN ANNIVERSARY BANQUET

Dean Isidor Loeb Chief Speaker at City Club—Part of National Celebration.

A banquet commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of building and loan associations in the United States was held last night at the City Club in St. Louis. The meeting was under the auspices of the St. Louis League of Building and Loan Associations, whose membership is comprised of 27 building and loan associations located in St. Louis and immediate vicinity. About 250 were present.

As this is part of a national celebration, more than 1000 similar meetings were held generally throughout the United States at the same hour, being 100 years from the organization of the Oxford-Provident Building Association of Frankford, Pa., which was the first institution of this kind in the United States.

The resources of building and loan associations have now reached the amazing total of more than nine billions of dollars in 12,400 building and loan associations having a membership in excess of 12,000,000.

The first loan made by any building and loan association was on a residence on Oxford street, Philadelphia, which building is still standing and in use as a home.

The guest of honor last night was Dr. Isidor Loeb, Dean of the School of Business and Public Administration of Washington University, who spoke on the subject of "A Century of Building Loan." Dr. Loeb traced the development of the business, and also pointed out that the future of the business should be safeguarded by continuing the encouragement of systematic savings and the lending of funds principally on homes occupied by owners.

The activities of the Real Estate Exchange during 1930 embraced not only matters affecting the interests of the organization and its membership but matters of a public and community interest as well. Much of the time and efforts of the Exchange today are devoted to the advancement of real estate as a commodity.

Arbitration in Six Cases.

In the last 12 months the services of the Exchange's Arbitration Committee was called on in six cases involving commissions on real estate transaction in excess of several thousands of dollars. Decisions were rendered after due consideration on each side of the controvery. The awards in all of these cases were promptly settled, thereby preventing the carrying of controversies through the civil courts for settlement and the consequent embarrassment and ill-will and long-drawn out and lengthy and expensive procedures.

Five alleged breaches of ethics during the year have been handled by the Ethics Committee of the Exchange, and in each case the committee investigated the case and held formal hearings. No fines, expulsions or suspensions resulted from any of the cases.

The educational program sponsored by the Exchange has two very extensive courses conducted through the downtown Y. M. C. A. on the fundamentals of real estate business and real estate law. The class on the fundamentals of the business is supervised by M. J. Slonim, an active member of the Exchange and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, and consists of 30 lectures on the various phases of the real estate business given by prominent active members of the Exchange. The class on real estate law is under the supervision of McCune Gill, attorney.

Course on Real Estate.

The board of directors of the exchange indorsed a course on real estate that has been added to the curriculum of the extension department of St. Louis University, which class has an enrollment of 55 students. This class is in charge of Grover W. Devine.

The work of the Committee on Protection of Property during the year, in assisting in the maintenance of certain restrictions undertaken by neighborhood protection and improvement associations, has done much to stabilize realty values.

The annual banquet and installation of officers and directors was held the evening of Jan. 9, 1930, in the Italian room of Hotel Chase and the attendance numbered 350. The speakers were President Charles J. Daly and Gov. Caulfield, former counsel for the exchange.

A sales conference was held Feb. 17 and an appraisal conference on March 27, 1930, for active members of the exchange, which was attended by approximately 350 brokers and salesmen. These conferences were conducted by representatives of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, of which the St. Louis exchange is a charter member.

The brokers' division of the exchange was formed last year and now has a membership of 75. Weekly meetings are held in the exchange office, at which time an exchange of information on properties offered for sale, exchange and wanted are had among the members.

Among the recognition that has been accorded the exchange by the city administration and other civic and business organizations is representation on the supervisory committee of the bond issue, Board of Adjustment, as created under the St. Louis zoning ordinance, Board of Equalization, board of directors of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, St. Louis Publicity and Convention Bureau, Better Business Bureau and Bureau of Municipal Research. In addition, one active member of the exchange is a member of the Board of Aldermen, and several of the members hold membership in the senior and junior classes of the Industrial Club of St. Louis.

Recommendation of Exchange.

The Board of Directors of the Exchange adopted various resolutions throughout the year, included in which are the following:

Favoring appointment by the Circuit Court of St. Louis of a permanent commission to devote its entire time to handling condemnation proceedings.

Opposing replacing of poles and wires on widered Vandeventer avenue for a trackless trolley line.

Assisted in the preparation and sponsored the passage of the amendments to the Charter of the City of St. Louis so as to expedite condemnation proceedings.

Indorsed measure before the Board of Aldermen of the City of St. Louis authorizing the city to enter into a contract with Stifel-Nicolaus & Co., Inc., for the sale of benefit judgments in condemnation cases.

Opposed a measure before the Board of Aldermen regarding the temporary occupancy on highways of building materials.

Opposed a measure before the Board of Aldermen proposing a general revision upward of inspection fees in the office of the Building Commissioner.

Opposed at the Nov. 4 election a proposition designated as No. 6, to amend the State Constitution to provide for excess condemnation.

Urged the city administration to demolish the buildings acquired by the city in the Union Station and Memorialp lazas so as to relieve unemployment.

Favored proposition No. 5 at the Nov. 4 election, being an enabling act to make possible the amalgamation of the city and county.

Favored bringing into St. Louis natural gas for home consumption.

Urged the Board of Aldermen to re-enact an ordinance to submit to the voters of the city of St. Louis at the general election, April, 1931, of the nine amendments to the city charter, which were defeated at the general election of Nov. 4, 1930, all of which will materially expedite condemnation proceedings in the city.

Opposed the metering throughout the city water for home consumption.

Opposed formation of a Janitors' Union in St. Louis.

Opposed a measure before the Board of Aldermen to tax property owners an inspection fee of $1 for every individual heating plant and hot-water heater in every residence.

The Fifty-Sixth General Assembly of the State of Missouri will convene in Jefferson City, Jan. 7, 1931, and the Legislative Committee of the Exchange will meet daily in the Exchange headquarters to scrutinize all measures introduced in the Legislature.

SCOTT STORES TAKE LEASE AT 2706-10 CHEROKEE ST.

The Scott Stores will take possession when alterations are completed about March 1. This makes 102 stores to be leased by the Scott chain throughout the United States, and the third in St. Louis. William A. Federer of the Federer Realty Co., represented the owner in this transaction.

The Honig company also announces the closing of a lease with Louis Caporal for the storeroom at the northeast corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, which has been opened as a fruit store.

RABBI ISSERMAN URGES THAT U. S. RECOGNIZE SOVIET

Replying to S. A. R. Resolution He Cites 12-Year Stability of Government — Quotes Borah.

Replying to a recent resolution of the St. Louis Chapter of the Missouri Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman gave an address Friday evening at Temple Israel, expounding his reasons for favoring recognition of the Soviet Government of Russia by the United States.

The resolution of the Sons of the Revolution, adopted Dec. 20, petitioned the President to refuse recognition of Soviet Russia, condemned that country's overthrow of religion, its communistic policies and particularly its revolutionary propaganda in America directed against the United States Government, and sounded a warning against college professors and ministers who have advocated recognition.

Rabbi Isserman acknowledged himself as one of the ministers in the group against which the public was warned, and in turn charged the Sons of the Revolution with having departed from the principles of Washington and Jefferson. He cited acts and utterances of these and other American statesmen in support of recognition and quoted a letter he had received from Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, giving seven reasons for the Senator's stand in favor of recognition.

No Sympathy With Ideas.

Having no sympathy with the governmental, social, and economic theories of the communistic state of Soviet Russia, the Rabbi, nevertheless, regarded the question of recognition as something apart from these considerations. He viewed the form of government, economic policies, educational methods, religious teaching or lack of it, as internal affairs of the people. It was his opinion the principal prerequisite for recognition by other nations is a stable government, and he thought this had been demonstrated in its 12 years of existence.

The position of the Sons of the Revolution shows a lack of faith in the American doctrines of Government and a fear that they cannot survive in the arena of spiritual and intellectual combat, the rabbi said, and added: "I cannot agree with them. I do not believe that any materialistic philosophy can long service (and communism is a materialistic philosophy), because it fails to meet the needs of men. I believe that even in Russia the materialistic elements in the communistic philosophy will some day be abandoned."

Again Rabbi Isserman said: "No religious teacher can indorse the philosphy of communism, based as it is on a materialistic interpretation of history. No lover of democracy can indorse the absence of civil liberty that exist in Russia today, nor the intellectual despotism that prevails."

Washington and Jefferson.

He said that George Washington as President saw fit to recognize France "when her rulers were engaging in the propaganda of international anarchism at a time when America was young," and quoted the message of Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State, to the American Minister in France, on March 12, 1793: "We surely cannot deny to any nation that right whereon our own Government is founded—that everyone may govern itself according to whatever form it pleases—and change these forms at its own will, and that it may transact its business with foreign nations through whatever organ it thinks proper, whether King, convention, assembly, committee, President, or anything else it may choose. The will of the nation is the only thing essential to be regarded."

One of the reasons raised against recognition in the resolution was the alleged repudiation of the national debts incurred by the old government of the Czars, including the debt to America. Rabbi Isserman argued that recognition would not of itself constitute acceptance of the Russian position on that question, but would leave it open to further negotiation, would in fact facilitate direct negotiation, and recalled that Russia, in response to a suggestion of President Coolidge about recognition, had stated a willingness to negotiate the matter.

Probably the greatest obstacle to recognition, Rabbi Isserman said, is the revolutionary activity carried on in this and other countries by Soviet agents. He believed, however, that this propaganda would affect insignificantly few persons in this country and would be no more effective after recognition than now.

Economic Advantage Cited.

He said this activity is due to the enthusiasm of the Russian people for their new doctrines and likened it to the activities of Christian missionaries in nations whose state regilion is something other than Christianity.

Rabbi Isserman said the business relations of the two countries would be greatly facilitated by recognition of Russia, calling attention to the fact that Russia is one of the greatest consuming nations and probably would take vastly increased quantities of goods from the United States.

Concluding his address, Rabbi Isserman quoted from the letter he had received from Senator Borah, as follows:

"I favor the recognition of Russia, first, because the present government has been in existence for 12 years and there is every indication it will continue in existence for an indefinite length of time. Second, there are 150,000,000 people striving to work out under most adverse circumstances their own salvation. I am in favor of accepting them in the family of nations. Third, there will never be any real economic solidarity or security in Europe until the Russian problem is settled. And recognition by the United States will go far toward settling it. Fourth, there can be no real permanent peace in Europe until the Russian problem is settled. Fifth, in my opinion, the more thoroughly the capitalistic theory comes in contact with the communistic theory, the more thoroughly the communistic theory will disappear or be modified. Sixth, through recognition, we could double or treble our trade with Russia. Russia now buys about five times as much as she sells to the United States. It is the greatest undeveloped market in the world, and it is ours if we have the courage and the vision to seize it. And now we certainly need it. Seventh, the recognition of a government in no sense indorses or approves the form of government. In my opinion such propaganda as Russia sends, or could send, into this country will not affect one-half of 1 per cent of our people. The greatest security against such teachings and such propaganda is the people themselves. These officials who feel that they must zealously guard and protect the minds of the people against being tainted with such literature have very little faith either in the intelligence of our people or the strength of our free institutions."

$3,000,000 STEEL UNION DAMAGE VERDICT UPHELD

Suit Based on Violation of Agreement by Contractors' Board of Trade.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Supreme Court today ratified an agreement designed to guard the steel industry against labor tie-ups by which it has been hampered intermittently in the last quarter-century. The agreement, designed to cause a 10-year armistice in structural steel labor disputes, was upheld by Justices William Harman Black in the $3,500,000 damage suit brought by the International Association of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers against the Structural Steel Board of Trade, Inc., compromising engineering and contracting firms. The court held with the union that the agreement, drawn up after a two weeks' strike by workers of the Empire State Building last spring, had been broken by the board.

The agreement provides that all members of the board employ union labor in the metropolitan district of New York, Northern New Jersey, Western Long Island, Southern New York State and Fairfield County in Connecticut. The Board, after authorizing its chairman, Charles L. Eidlitz, to negotiate with the union for an agreement, refused formally to ratify the one envolved on the ground that it failed to provide for an immediate improvement in labor conditions in Northern New Jersey, which were described as bad.

Student Flyer Killed in Crash.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 3. — Harry F. Baugher, 37 years old, student flyer, was killed late today when the airplane he was piloting went into a tailspin and crashed from an altitude of 3000 feet on a farm near here.

JURY FAILS TO INDICT SON OF MINISTER IN GIRL'S DEATH

Robert L. Williams, 19, Said He Found His Former Fiancee

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Jan. 3.—The District grand jury today failed to indict Robert L. Williams, 19 years old, University of Texas student and minister's son in connection with the fatal shooting in Port Arthur a week ago of Elizabeth Johnson, 16, his former fiancee.

Miss Johnson was found dead in Williams' automobile. Williams reported he found the body when he returned to the car, parked by the first Methodist Church, South, in Port Arthur, after an attempt to see the pastor, the Rev. Glenn Flinn, in hope the minister would try to effect a reconciliation after a quarrel between Williams and the girl.

A .22 caliber rifle, sawed down by Williams to almost pistol size, which he said he had placed in the side pocket of his car, was found with one chamber fired. The bullet resulting in the death of the girl entered her breast, ranging downward. Williams expressed the belief she had committed suicide. The youth had been held under $10,000 bond awaiting action by the grand jury.

CHARGES AGAINST ST. LOUISAN IN MINNEAPOLIS DROPPED

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 3.—An indictment charging James E. Fox, St. Louis, and Henry Blim, Chicago, with presenting a fraudulent claim to city officials was nolle prossed in County District Court today. This was the last charge against Fox, two others having been nolle prossed a week ago.

The charges grew out of road oil transactions with the city.

BOMB EXPLOSION IS HEARD ALL OVER PARIS, NO ONE HURT

Detonation on Champs Elysees Causes Great Excitement in Theater; Restaurant Damaged.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—A bomb exploded tonight on the Champs Elysees beside the famous restaurant Des Ambassadeurs, making a terrific detonation that was heard all over Paris, but injuring no one.

A large hole was made in the wall of the restaurant, which was closed, and much glass was shattered.

Crowds in a theater next door where George Milton, famous French comedian, was playing in "Miami," became greatly excited. The Saturday night throng which collected outside added to the confusion.

Police could advance no motive for the placing of the bomb, except that someone with criminal intent wished to get rid of it before it exploded in his hands, presumably having intended originally to place it elsewhere. Bits of shell were found nearby and some theories were heard that the explosive had been constructed from such a missle.

FORMAL CONDEMNATION ORDER FOR FEDERAL BUILDING SITE

Federal Judge Faris yesterday formally entered judgment for the Government, in the suit to condemn the Twelfth, Market, Walnut and Eleventh street block, facing the Memorial Plaza, as the site for the new Federal building.

The payment to the property owners represented in the block, a total of $1,069,027.32, was allotted by the Court as follows: Pepper heirs and Oren E. Scott, now in litigation over the major portion of the block, $898,105; Griesedieck heirs, $86,860; Dyer interests, $50,100; Grone heirs, $33,250; Western Union Telegraph Co., $356.17; Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., $356.15. The awards to the Western Union and Bell were for damages to conduits.

Formalities remaining, before the Government takes actual possession and begins clearing the site, are the approval of the deeds to the various properties, which have been forwarded to the Attorney General, and payment into court of the money.

700 ST. LOUIS 'CUBS' HOLD NEW YEAR PARTY AND REVIEW

Boys of 9, 10 and 11, Organized Into Packs and Dens, Hope to Become Boy Scouts.

About 700 St. Louis Cubs, boys 9, 10 and 11 years of age who hope to become Boy Scouts some day, held their first New Year's party and official review yesterday at Howard Gymnasium of the Principia, Page boulevard and Belt avenue.

The program included a review of marching cubs by the executive board of the St. Louis Council of the Boy Scouts of America, stunts by members of Pack No. 1, and mass games. The boys were entertained by comedians, a magician and the Pueblo Indian dancers.

Cub packs, each having several dens, have been formed in various churches and schools. Each pack has a cubmaster and each den a den chief and a den mother. Meetings are held in the homes of various cubs.

TOLEDO CATHOLIC CATHEDRAL SWEPT BY FIRE; LOSS $75,000

Priceless Artworks Damaged or Destroyed Together With Documents and Vestments.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 3. — St. Francis de Sales Catholic Cathedral was swept tonight by fire which left little standing, except the walls and which destroyed or damaged beyond repair priceless acquisitions of its more than 60 years of existence.

Several persons including Mgr. John T. O'Connell, pastor for the last 30 years, weer menaced by smoke, fire and falling embers, but no one was injured seriously. Firemen estimated the loss at $75,000.

In the structure were Catholic documents, expensive and irreplaceable vestments, and three gothic altars which were 75 years old and duplicated in no Catholic edifice in America. The building was completed in 1869, but its parish was organized 30 years earlier.

FIVE KILLED IN OHIO MINE EXPLOSION; 15 OTHERS ESCAPE

Bodies of Victims Taken from Shaft Near Midvale Eight Hours After Blast.

By the Associated Press.

MIDVALE, O., Jan. 3.—The bodies of five men killed in an explosion in No. 4 Mine of the Midvale Coal Co. this morning were recovered by rescue workers tonight, nine hours after the explosion.

The victims apparently were killed outright, for the explosion seemed to have centered where their bodies were found in a tunnel, about three and one-half miles from the entrance of the drift mine, rescuers said. Fifteen other men in the mine when the explosion occurred, about 10:30 a. m., escaped without injury.

Dog of Byrd's Party Killed.

MUNROE, La., Jan. 14.—"Unalaska," lead huskie of the Byrd expedition to the South Pole, was killed today by an automobile while being exercised by C. B. Foster, a member of Byrd's party. Foster, who was conducting an Antarctic exhibition here, took two of the dogs to Forsythe Park and "Unalaska" ran across the street in front of the car.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

FOR SALE, EXCHANGE OR INVESTMENT
$230,000 STATE OF TENNESSEE COUNTY DRAINAGE BONDS
$170,000 INTEREST COUPONS FOR SAME.
TOTALS ABOUT $400,000.
EXPLANATION:

We exclusively represent the owners of the above 6 per cent Drainage Bonds, covered by about 15,000 acres of very rich lands in West Tennessee. Traversed by two main trunk line railroads, two Federal Highways, and several gravel State and County roads. No better farm lands in the country than some of these lands and a very fine lot of growing timber located thereon. The Western part of these lands abound in fine fishing and hunting grounds, and can be reached in a few hours by rail or auto from St. Louis, Memphis, Nashville and Louisville, being less than 100 miles from Memphis by automobile.

OIL WELLS DRILLING NEAR DISTRICT

An oil well is drilling now on the western line of this land covered by their bonds, and with fine prospects for a large flow of either gas or oil, and we can lease the entire lands any day for about $1 per acre per year if we care to lease, which the present owners will not consider. With a strike in this well these lands will sell quickly for $5 to $1000 per acre, being in line of the development.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

The owners will take up to $100,000 cash, and balance in stock of some good life or accident company, either going or to be formed, and this will give this company a working capital of about $400,000 for an investment of $100,000 and these bonds are quick collateral with the Insurance Dept. of most any states, and a large life insurance company is now holding same for a loan, which must be paid in cash, on any deal.

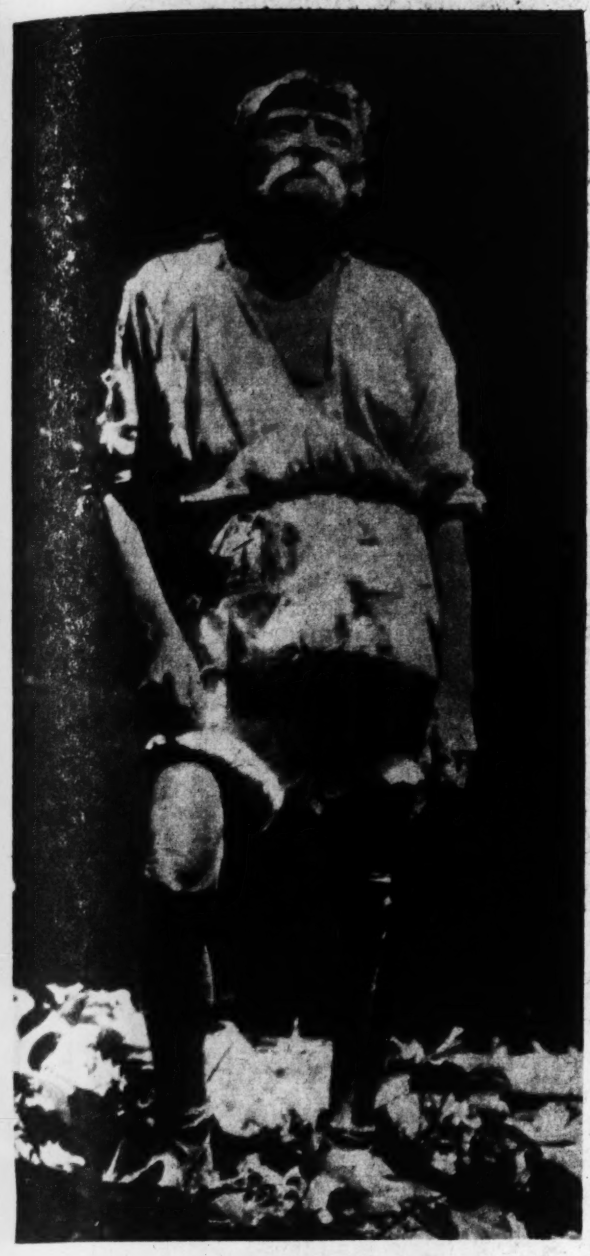
A Human Mole Discovered in a Mexican Cave

How an American Scientist, Lost for Five Hours Underground, Came Upon an Ancient Indian Who Had Lived a Subterranean Life for So Many Years He Was Nearly Blind.



The hermit of the caves.

Robert Stacy-Judd.

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

A Member of the Willard Expedition

WHEN the T. A. Willard 1930 expedition to Yucatan went exploring for new knowledge of the ancient Mayan cities which lie half-hidden in the Central American jungles, one of the members of the expedition made a hair-raising discovery that wasn't in the cards at all.

Lost for five hours in an endless labyrinth of lightless caves, hundreds of feet below the heart of the jungles, with only three Mayan natives as companions! That was the plight of Robert Stacy-Judd, and it took an even more eerie adventure to get him out of it.

Stacy-Judd decided to visit alone the caverns of Loltun, vast halls carved out by nature beneath the jungle near Tabi. They had been entered before, but little had been learned of them, and still less of mysterious writings believed to be inscribed on the fantastic walls of the cave. So Stacy-Judd took three native Mayans and set out to cut his way through the jungle paths which are called roads in the interior of Yucatan. In the intense heat and the exertion of travel, their water was soon gone, and he was about exhausted when the entrance to the caves appeared. But let Stacy-Judd tell the story himself:

"For six long miles we had cut our way through tangled undergrowth, walking all the way and with little or no shade overhead, while not a breath of air had stirred to temper the stagnant heat of approximately 110 degrees. Having stumbled over burning, slippery rocks, decaying tree trunks and entangling vines, while our throats were parched with thirst, the welcome sight of the cave entrance was like the discovery of an oasis in the desert.

"We descended through a steep, narrow crevice to a ledge partially covered by an overhanging rock. This led into a wide passage and thence into an enormous cavern. We were now more than 100 feet below the ground. The vista was startling. I stood there, utterly fascinated, even my intense thirst forgotten for the moment!

"Before us spread a vast, sloping floor of various levels that finally sank into a black void beyond. All about were strewn massive boulders and queer shaped rocks. The walls of this cathedral-like nave were pierced with innumerable openings having tracery-like arches. From the irregular ceiling depended numerous stalactites of every size and shape. From the floor arose glistening stalagmites, as if in an effort to meet them. Some had met, forming columns of curious shapes.

"At the far end of the cavern, under a series of lower arched caves, we found water. I got busy at making photographs, some with the aid of flashlights. I was amazed at the innumerable chambers in every direction, the conglomeration of column and grotto-like openings, the black holes fringed with lacy-edged arches at every turn.

"WE STORED our equipment upon a safe ledge, lighted our torches and descended into a blackness that was almost tangible. Very soon we discovered that the ceiling of the best-known passage—one described in detail by previous explorers—had fallen in and that we must seek a new shaft for descending to a lower level.

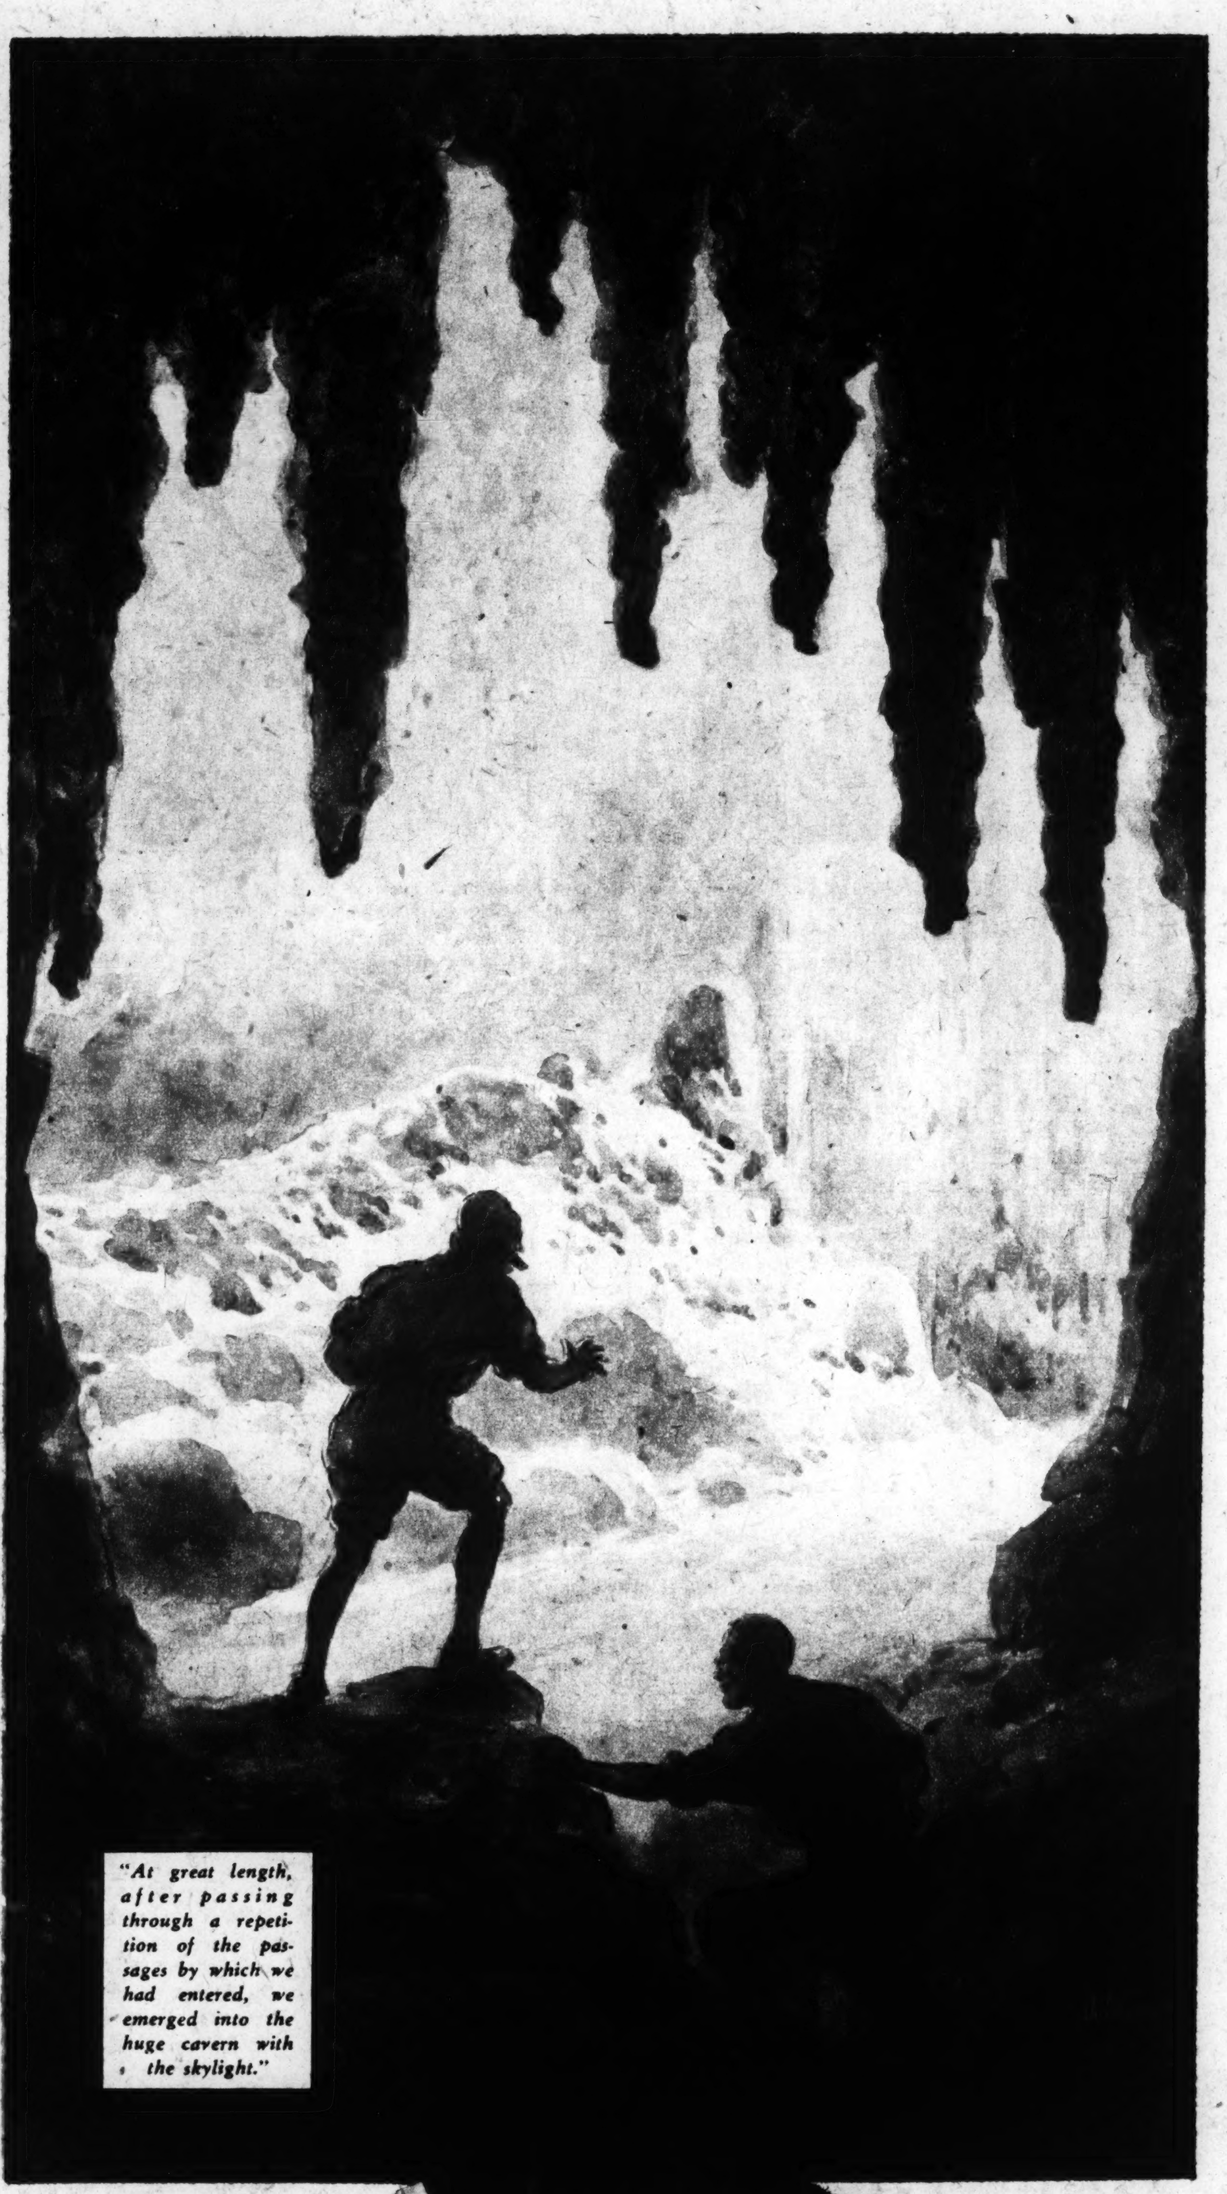
"We crawled through a long tunnel on our hands and knees, sometimes lying flat and squirming through the narrow passage, and finally emerged into another large cavern that resembled the nave of a large cathedral.

"Suddenly I realized the danger of going farther without a system of checking our trail, so I called a halt. Each of us carried a light; one of the Mayans used burning rushes that he had cut above ground from dead, wild henequin; the other two natives carried candles and I an electric flashlight.

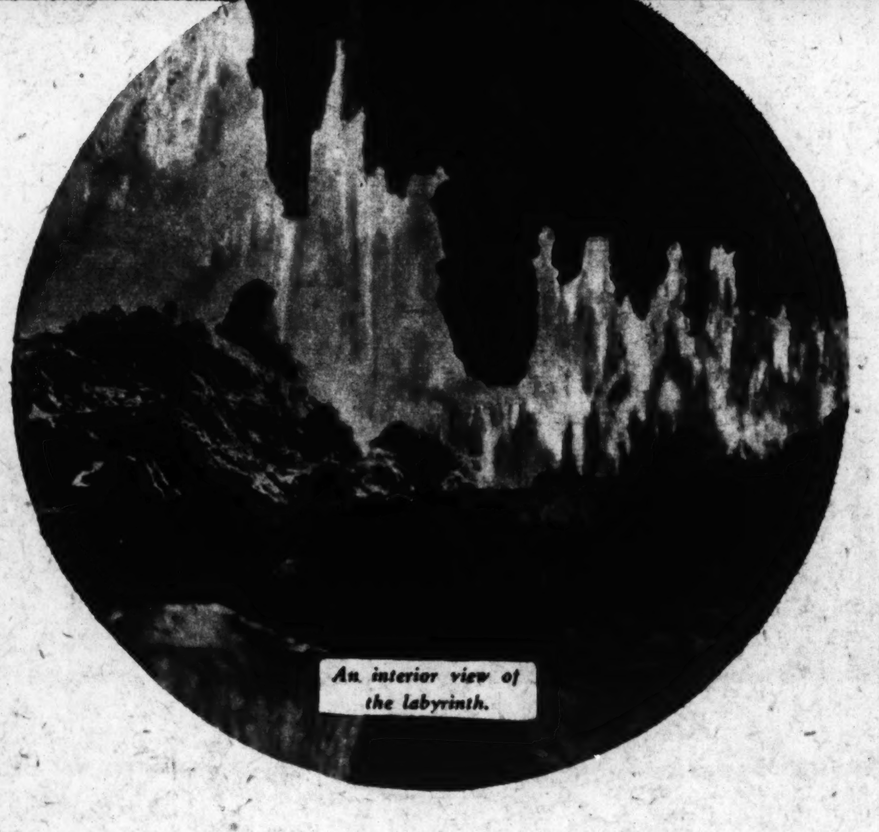
"With considerable gesturing, I explained to the first one that he was to stand at the opening through which we had just crawled from the first chamber, and that he was not to move, whatever might happen.

"Slowly we wandered on through the caverns, large and small; grottos that were vaulted even beyond the torch rays; through low, damp tunnels on hands and knees; over dangerous ledges, bordering abysmal blackness; sliding down steep slopes or crossing over slippery trails where a false step would have proved fatal. From time to time I called back to the guide whom I had first stationed, and later I stationed a second one with similar instructions, and continued on with the last guide.

"After another 10 minutes of slow progress, I had stopped to rest and inspect my surroundings, turning the light of my flash in all directions. Of course, I expected to find one man behind me, but—to my utter amazement—I found all three guides there. They had misunderstood and followed me after all. I immediately realized the seriousness of the situation. It was practically impossible to hope that we could retrace our steps through the innumerable twists and turns, with opening after opening that defied recognition.



"At great length, after passing through a repetition of the passages by which we had entered, we emerged into the huge cavern with the skylight."



An interior view of the labyrinth.

"I first extinguished the candles and again commanded the two Mayans to stay together with the rush torches.

"Our limited light equipment must be conserved. The third man I took with me, trying to retrace our steps and to recognize some familiar form or mark.

"Finally, when I had recognized nothing for some distance and knew not which way to turn, I had to admit defeat.

"In many places we found evidences of ceilings having fallen in, some of them recently, and often great boulders quite filled a cavern. Once, having crawled through a narrow tunnel with difficulty, we stepped out into a large cavern like a vast baronial hall.

"I WAS about to cross this room and had actually placed three stones at the opening as a marker, when a sense of impending danger held me back. My companion and I turned about and started to crawl back through the tunnel by which we had reached the immense cavern, and had gone about half-way when there was a terrific crash. We felt the earth tremble beneath us, together with a violent rush of air.

"I crawled backward to the opening and found that a large portion of the ceiling of that cavern had dropped; in fact, the exact spot where we had stood was heaped with fallen stones that partially blocked the opening.

"Now we could scarcely hear the voices of the two men we had left behind, so I stationed my companion with a candle where his voice would reach the other two, and started out alone, humbly hoping that they would all obey my instructions.

"Reaching a very difficult ledge, I crouched low for safety and crawled cautiously over a rocky floor. My feeble light illumined the vault above but when I turned it down over the ledge it pierced an endless blackness. The narrow crevice appeared bottomless in its feeble light.

"But just then, I glanced ahead—and paused in petrified amazement!

"What I saw was not there 10 seconds before—that I could swear. Yet there, some two or three hundred feet ahead of me, flickered and glowed a tiny light, casting weird shadows in every direction. Common sense told me that it could not belong to any human being. We four were the only humans in the jungle for miles about. Yet, here in the very bowels of the earth, in defiance of the impossible, was a light! I almost slid off the edge into that abysmal depth. I shouted to my nearest guide to follow me and started forward. My amazement increased. For there arose from the solid rocks, apparently, a human head. Just a head—and it appeared to be shaved. Then, inch by inch, the body emerged into view. I was speechless with wonnder when finally there stood before me in the arc of my flashlight, a very old man.

"BUT his dark, wrinkled face showed absolutely no expression of surprise at my presence. He stood still, with a peculiar tilt to his figure, as I approached him, an uncanny light gleamed in his deep-sunken eyes, a half-smile twisted his lips. He had a scraggly gray mustache, but was beardless, by which feature I knew him to be a pure-blood Mayan.

"What I had at first supposed was a shaved head proved to be a thin half-gourd that he wore as an improvised skullcap, from beneath the edges of which flared a thatch of coarse, iron-gray hair. Heavy white eyebrows stood out beneath the gourd. He wore a clean, white, shapeless garment that was secured about his spare figure by a twisted vine, with the back of it gathered up loosely between his legs and fastened to the belt made by the vine.

"His bare, shrunken legs had a series of heavy wrinkles beneath the bony knees; and the claw-like hands, gnarled and heavily veined, hung loosely at his sides. He wore sandals with thongs laced criss-cross around his legs, exactly as pictured by the ancient Mayans in the bas reliefs on the walls of ruined buildings.

"It was the weirdest experience of my life. Visualize this old man in these unearthly surroundings, illumined by the flickering lights of a candle and two smoke-trailing torches.

"I waited patiently while my guides conversed with the strange character and I learned with relief that he had agreed to guide us out of the caves.

"By signs they told me that he was 1000 years old. I was willing to admit that he might be over 100. They also said that he was an ancient Maya Hol-

"The Man Who Made Radio Possible" Begins to Wonder

Dr. Lee De Forest Believed Wireless Would Uplift Humanity; Now He Fears "Greed Will Sap Its Life-Blood."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

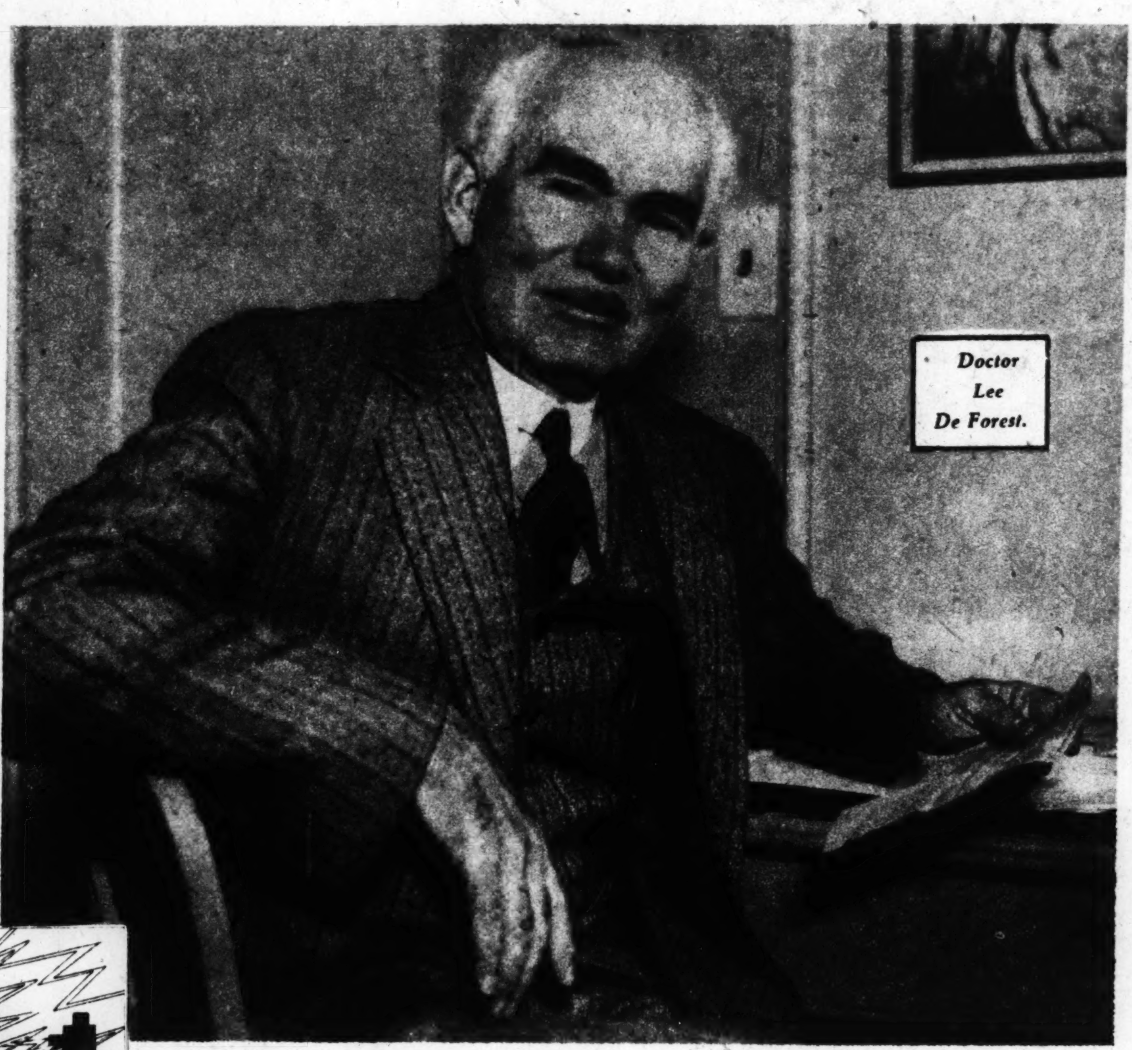
NEW YORK.

DOCTOR LEE DE FOREST—remember, he is "the man who made radio possible"—sits in his Tudor City penthouse and listens to Station XYZ announcing Mrs. Miriam Helsinfors who is about to tell him of "An Important New Girdle for Miss 1931." If it bores him into a slow frenzy, he can turn the dial of his set and catch the jokes of a couple of minstrels. Or he can learn how to fix up a quick Sunday supper for six people. Of course, there is music. But altogether, the home radio which De Forest hoped would stimulate thought and create conversation has become a first-rate means of dispensing with conversation. In a word, it is a noise.

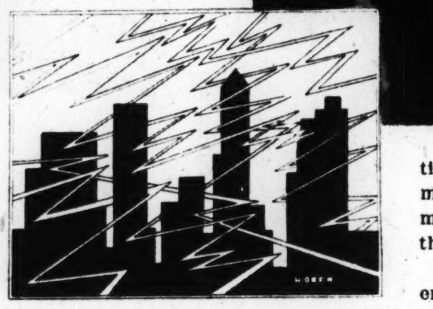
And the irony of it sometimes moves the inventor to cry out in despair.

For Lee De Forest once believed that he was engaged in a great and noble adventure. Radio would knit the entire world in a huge network. It would cost nothing, yet it was bound to educate and uplift humanity by bringing to every man a daily supply of new impressions of broader scope than any yet dreamed of. The very word "radio" was to Doctor De Forest a symbol of speed and worldwide activity. Other men walk down a street and see only a street filled with people. He saw a different picture: Into the bodies of tall buildings, down through empty halls and crowded halls, through stone and mortar and steel framework, on out again into the street where men and women were walking, through their clothes and their flesh, through traffic so thick not a taxicab can move an inch, past thousands of signals, words and sounds at a rate of speed too swift for the human mind to contemplate. It is the architecture of space, built by the scientists and engineers of the past half century.

On the night when Lee De Forest was made president of the Institute of Radio Engineers, his inaugural address contained a few ideas that caught the attention of the press. De Forest declared that "the present all too marked tendency of the broadcast chains and of many individual stations to lower their bars to the greed of direct advertising will rapidly sap the life-blood of this magnificent new means of contact which we engineers have so laboriously toiled to upbuild and perfect." Where, he wanted to know, was that practical realization of the dream that had inspired himself and many another engineer and scientist to devote his life to radio? Where was that "Parliament of Man" that radio might bring appreciably nearer to reality?



Doctor Lee De Forest.



Just sixteen days later came the answer to De Forest's question in the form of well-nigh perfect transmission of the opening ceremonies of the London Naval Conference to every part of the United States. It was much more than a feat of radio broadcasting. It was also a great public service, rendered freely and for its own sake—a service which brought the nations of the world closer together and furthered the cause of universal peace. Those who rose early one morning in January of last year, and listened to voices of the King of England, the Premiers of Britain and France, the American Secretary of State, the representative of Italy and a former Premier of Japan, coming all the way from the House of Lords in London, felt a certain eerie sense of being in on a drama of international scope, of being there to listen as the four corners of the earth drew closer together.

It is interesting to know that this Parliament of Man made its first practical appearance before the multitudes of the world not through the strategies of statesmen but through the quiet work of the scientist in the form of small tubes hidden in your radio receiving sets, the "audions" of Lee De Forest.

FOR if these sets that brought in the voice of King George from far out in the world could have been opened it would have been possible to watch a series of tiny tubes, delicately built and fragile, "acting upon" the King's words exactly as the microscope acts upon solid matter. In the case of the microscope we look through and see what, a minute ago, was not there to see; in the case of the audion we listen and hear sounds where all before was silent. Doctor De Forest, listening to the clear concise words of the King of England, felt that his contribution to radio had been used to the purpose for which he intended it.

And all in the space of 50 years. De Forest himself is only fifty-six years old, yet when he was born, 1874, America was, scientifically speaking, a stiff, dead land. The small town of his childhood, Talladega, Alabama, had a kind of fierce monotony. It had bleak houses lighted with gas jets; dark rooms fitted with horsehair furniture, and vases of rose leaves saved from some favorite funeral. Outside lay crooked streets of mud or cobblestone. A child, thirsting for excitement, could go and look at the Bingham steam saw mill, the municipal water pumping plant, the cotton gin and press, or await the daily arrival of the train at the railway station. Then there were prayers and bed, and the day was done.

De Forest traces his interest in invention to a kind of feverish longing for things to do, excitement, toys. It was impossible to buy a manufactured toy in Talladega. Those possessed by the children of the walthy had to be shipped on from the East, a costly business, and the De Forest family could have been the originals of that expression, "poor as church mice." It was impossible to buy even a manufactured motor. De Forest and his playmates, the Negro boys of Talladega, whom his father, the Reverend Henry De Forest, had come down from the East to educate, had a few nails and old barrels, and for their workroom the long cold parlor of the house. De Forest had even to make his own motors. It was hard work, but it was impossible for any imaginative boy to live long in the dull little world of Talladega. The boy began slowly, painfully, to create a world of his own in the room designed for funerals. The toys in the parlor began to move. As he grew older they became less actual toys and more mature expressions of the ideas that flooded his brain.

He was an ugly lop-eared little boy, lonely and tough. The outside world frightened him. No wonder. There were only two high lights in the whole of his childhood in Talladega. Once his father took him down to a newspaper office where a kind man who smiled at him seemed to be turning a crank on a little machine. His father held a tube or ear trumpet in Lee's ear and as the kind man turned the crank a queer kind of a voice spoke to the child. He was deeply impressed. No there was not a man concealed beneath the table. The voice came from the machine. It was a replica of the first Edison tinfoil phonograph, and the excitement of having seen and heard it made bearable the long rainy days that were to come.

The other high light came at the end of his life in Talladega. For days the clergyman had been arguing with his stubborn young son, who wanted of all the things in the world to study electricity, and to become—he dared not say "inventor"—an electrical engineer. His father argued, and rightly, that electricity was not an exact science. The American colleges of the eighties could not even boast a course in electricity. It was several years later, at Yale, that De Forest himself had the great good fortune to take the first course in electricity installed in any American college.

THE boy explained to his father that the fundamental natural laws of electricity had been discovered by Faraday and Maxwell and other great investigators in the realm of pure physics and mathematics. He had read about them. He himself hoped to learn all there was to learn of this fascinating giant, electricity, and perhaps some day to invent a machine for controlling its uncanny power. It was the word "invent" that ended the conversation. If De Forest intended to do anything so absurd, his father had nothing further to say. Lee would have to go his own way, and suffer accordingly.

One week later young Lee De Forest, a crude country lad of fifteen years, rode through the little town of Talladega beside his silent father. He was on his way to Mt. Herman preparatory school, where it was believed that two years' rigorous study would prepare him for the difficult examinations he would have to pass before he could enter Sheffield at Yale. It was his last sight of the muddy sidewalks of Talladega. There were brick pavements in the downtown section. Through the streets, more evenly cobblestoned than before, came ox-team after ox-team, for it was market day. Past the "tall" buildings of the business section, the elder De Forest drove silently, and on out through the rich farm lands. A mile or so up the road Lee's attention was suddenly caught at sight of a new type of farm gate. It had two long arms extending out into the roadway for the use of the driver, and it closed automatically upon entrance.

It was exactly the same as the one he had designed with his mechanical scroll saw, and that with great pains he had mounted on a piece of mahogany so it would stand upright. Reluctantly, his father admitted the owner of the farm, one of the wealthiest landowners of Talladega, had seen the toy on the lawn of the De Forest house, and thought it a good working model for a gate. The farmer had borrowed the model for a few days. It was cheaper to copy this than to send east for a manufactured gate. The boy smiled. Of course, the rich farmer had given him no credit, and not a word of thanks, but what did that matter? The incident brought home the deep secret knowledge of his own power. He was an inventor. He had already proved it to himself.

He did not know that at Sheffield he would take the first course in electricity to be installed in any American college, and that he would begin there to pay the price of all pioneers of science. The laboratory itself was not sufficiently well equipped for successful experimentation. It was not until his senior year that De Forest came to understand what actually was meant by "electrical waves." The minute he did understand, the idea of using these waves to serve humanity was to him to most fascinating thing he had ever heard of. He could think of nothing else. His habits of eating and sleeping were completely upset. He could not even find relaxation in music, the one compensation of his difficult existence. The letter he wrote to his father at the completion of his post-graduate work at Yale explains something of his state of mind.

"You condemn me for having chosen an impossible career," he wrote. "I have not chosen anything. It has been chosen for me. I go on to Chicago from here without money or connections, to find some kind of a job in a laboratory. I have become obsessed with the idea of communication without wires. I further believe that I have an idea for a wireless receiver. All I ask is the use of a laboratory in which to set up my experiment. Someone must give it to me—or I will make it myself. I know it all sounds absurd and impossible to you, but it is my life's work and I shall pay for it gladly with all the hardship that awaits me."

The dreaming young man of 23 who went on to Chicago from Yale University was indeed like one who has seen a vision. He was a thin, shabby, undernourished young man with the capable hands and quick, easy manner of speaking that betrayed his lively imagination. Alone in his hall bedroom of an evening, listening to the sounds of the city, he longed, not for love nor money nor even for companionship, but only for room enough to set up his experiment. No wonder! The bed in his tiny room extended from the door to a certain small table that occupied the space beneath the window. In order to walk to the door De Forest had to turn sidewise and scrape the whitewashed wall with his coat. And in this very room, which was not even large enough to accommodate one person, he developed on the table beneath the window the ideas that had to do with the conquest of space, with the sending and receiving of human intelligence across billions of miles.

What were these ideas? The first was for a detector for wireless signals. Up to 1896 electric waves had been sent out into the ether and "seen" by special "eyes" or detectors, but no one realized that waves in the ether might be used to send intelligible messages over a great distance.

In 1896, Guglielmo Marconi, then but 22, received his first patent. This patent covered an apparatus for receiving wireless signals, and proved for the first time the practicability of signaling through space. By the end of 1897 Marconi was signaling nine and ten miles, but his reception was by no means perfect.

Along came De Forest to enter the race for a better receiver for wireless signals. De Forest's first patent covered a wireless receiver that instantly made him a close competitor of Marconi. Other inventions in wireless detection soon pushed him to the front of the wireless field.

BUT the second idea, from which evolved the audion, is an invention perhaps as great as that of radio communication itself.

What is the audion? It is a little vacuum tube that magnifies signals of sound just as the microscope magnifies objects of sight. It can magnify the ticking of a watch until it sounds like a trip-hammer. The audion made it possible to telephone from New York to San Francisco, to telegraph half-way round the world. Radio broadcasting is only one of the feats made possible by this little tube.

De Forest happened upon his idea for the audion quite by accident. The idea of using the ether to carry the human voice had often engaged his attention, but wireless telegraphy was much more immediate. One night while working on his wireless detector in his hall bedroom in Chicago under a solitary gas mantle, he discovered that the room grew dark whenever he approached the coil that generated electric waves. What was the connection between the "matter" around the gas mantle and the sounds and hidden vibrations in ether waves? If this "matter" were concentrated, would it be enough to pick words out of space?

But it was not until years later that De Forest found time to experiment with this discovery. When he did begin to experiment he soon found that his hunch was right. He invented a "hot gas detector" which led to the audion in 1905 and 1906.

De Forest and Marconi became open competitors at the international yacht races held off Sandy Hook when they were authorized by different news services to report the races by wireless telegraphy. Both De Forest and Marconi failed, because wireless messages from the two tugs jammed each other out. The weary young man went alone to his favorite lunch wagon, where he could dine upon well-browned hamburger, rolls and milk for 25 cents. He did not know that in the years to come his own inventions in the field of wireless telegraphy—long distance telephony, radio broadcasting and talking pictures (he is the inventor of the Phonofilm, the original talking picture device), would be valued at upwards of $25,000,000.

WHAT has Doctor De Forest got out of it? One situation, immediately following his invention of the audion, may answer that question. De Forest had made every effort to sell his patents on the "audion amplifier," a form of the audion that made possible telephony over any distance, to a big company. He was told that he would shortly receive an answer. Many months went by, but no answer was forthcoming. Meantime, his own wireless telegraph company had declined, leaving him penniless and desperate.

One day a strange man came to call upon him. The man claimed to be an attorney for a certain company, and offered at the company's authorization the sum of $50,000 for patent rights on the audion amplifier. De Forest promptly accepted the offer, and received a check for $50,000. Later he learned the board of directors of the company had voted $500,000 for the purchase of his invention. About this time De Forest was opening a new laboratory, rented and equipped with the $50,000, in which he took great pride. Weary of the harsh financial ups and downs of an inventor's life, he was all too eager to get back to his experiments.

Even today the restless eagerness in his eyes, the apparent youth and vitality that emanates from him, mark him as one who believes indeed there are more important things in the world than money. There is, for instance, a fight to be waged against the use of the ether for dreary dollar chasing. Today, in his Tudor City penthouse, amazed and horrified at the "entertainment" coming in nightly over his radio, De Forest devotes much of his time to speeches and writing that flay the broadcasting programs.

NE of the strangest dramas ever enacted before the bar of justice is being concluded here in the Chancery Court, where each of 13 men has been trying to prove that he is the long-lost heir to the $325,000 fortune left by the late William E. Emery. The drama of the situation, however, is not furnished by the fact that 13 men have appeared to establish their identity as Emery's missing grandson. There have been other will cases in which more claimants than that have appeared. What makes the Emery case remarkable, and at the same time preposterous and tragic, is the story that explains why the grandson should have been missing in the first place and why there was need for such a legal contest at all. It is a story which begins back in the nineties and reveals all those exaggerated and distorted conceptions of morality and conduct condemned today under the label of Victorian.

In 1895 William Emery, having made $6,000,000 out of a Kansas City department store, decided to retire from business and make his home at his birthplace in the little town of Flemington, New Jersey, not far from Newark. There he built Rose Lodge, an imposing mansion surrounded by formal gardens, which became the show place of the vicinity. He was the first citizen of the town, its richest inhabitant, a man widely respected and deferred to. His family consisted of Mrs. Emery and two daughters, the older named May, the younger Florence. The two daughters were much sought after and courted, and if their photographs do them justice, they deserved to be, although their father's wealth probably in nowise lessened their attractiveness.

The circumstances under which Florence met Francis "Fritz" Georger are not known, but we do know that he sang tenor in the Yale University Glee Club and seems to have had a way about him, at least as far as Florence was concerned, as later events showed. Their meeting must have developed into a deeper emotional relationship, for they were married in Brooklyn on July 15, 1895. But all was not well, for they married secretly and under assumed names, she as Florence Baker and he as Fred Gray.

THAT marriage was kept a secret from everyone, including the father. Georger continued to call at Rose Lodge as a suitor and when the already married Florence asked her father's consent to marry the young man, the old millionaire yielded. Thus, two months after the secret wedding in Brooklyn, there was another ceremony performed at Flemington, this time with all the display and elegance that befitted the nuptials of the town's richest man. The first wedding was still kept a secret and Mr. and Mrs. Georger set up an establishment of their own in Flemington, not far from Rose Lodge.

A few months later, in January, 1896, the Georgers left home for a visit to Washington, D. C. They were at the capital for about three weeks. When they returned Mrs. Georger was seen to be in poor health, but a few months of nursing and rest restored her. The visit to Washington was soon forgotten and she and Georger settled down to their comfortable life together. Years passed, but apparently all was not well between the Georgers, for in 1910 they were divorced, and later Mrs. Georger married a Henry Billings, a New York jeweler. In the meantime the older sister, May, had married an Englishman named

ONE of the strangest dramas ever enacted before the bar of justice is being concluded here in the Chancery Court, where each of 13 men has been trying to prove that he is the long-lost heir to the $325,000 fortune left by the late William E. Emery. The drama of the situation, however, is not furnished by the fact that 13 men have appeared to establish their identity as Emery's missing grandson. There have been other will cases in which more claimants than that have appeared. What makes the Emery case remarkable, and at the same time preposterous and tragic, is the story that explains why the grandson should have been missing in the first place and why there was need for such a legal contest at all. It is a story which begins back in the nineties and reveals all those exaggerated and distorted conceptions of morality and conduct condemned today under the label of Victorian.

In 1895 William Emery, having made $6,000,000 out of a Kansas City department store, decided to retire from business and make his home at his birthplace in the little town of Flemington, New Jersey, not far from Newark. There he built Rose Lodge, an imposing mansion surrounded by formal gardens, which became the show place of the vicinity. He was the first citizen of the town, its richest inhabitant, a man widely respected and deferred to. His family consisted of Mrs. Emery and two daughters, the older named May, the younger Florence. The two daughters were much sought after and courted, and if their photographs do them justice, they deserved to be, although their father's wealth probably in nowise lessened their attractiveness.

The circumstances under which Florence met Francis "Fritz" Georger are not known, but we do know that he sang tenor in the Yale University Glee Club and seems to have had a way about him, at least as far as Florence was concerned, as later events showed. Their meeting must have developed into a deeper emotional relationship, for they were married in Brooklyn on July 15, 1895. But all was not well, for they married secretly and under assumed names, she as Florence Baker and he as Fred Gray.

THAT marriage was kept a secret from everyone, including the father. Georger continued to call at Rose Lodge as a suitor and when the already married Florence asked her father's consent to marry the young man, the old millionaire yielded. Thus, two months after the secret wedding in Brooklyn, there was another ceremony performed at Flemington, this time with all the display and elegance that befitted the nuptials of the town's richest man. The first wedding was still kept a secret and Mr. and Mrs. Georger set up an establishment of their own in Flemington, not far from Rose Lodge.

A few months later, in January, 1896, the Georgers left home for a visit to Washington, D. C. They were at the capital for about three weeks. When they returned Mrs. Georger was seen to be in poor health, but a few months of nursing and rest restored her. The visit to Washington was soon forgotten and she and Georger settled down to their comfortable life together. Years passed, but apparently all was not well between the Georgers, for in 1910 they were divorced, and later Mrs. Georger married a Henry Billings, a New York jeweler. In the meantime the older sister, May, had married an Englishman named Cornelius and with him had settled down in England and had an only child, a son named Vivian Cornelius.

In 1912, two years after Florence had divorced Georger, old Mr. Emery died, leaving a fortune of $3,000,000. Of this money he set aside $650,000 as a trust fund. The interest from this fund was to be divided between his two daughters as long as they lived. On their deaths the principal was to be divided, and half, or $325,000, was to go to the children, if any, of May, and the other half to the children, if any, of Florence. May Emery Cornelius, the older of the two sisters, was the first to die and the $325,000 went to her only child, Vivian. In 1926 Florence Emery Georger, now Mrs. Billings, was alive and receiving the interest from her half of the trust fund. However, she must have had premonitions of her approaching end, for she summoned her lawyer and to him made a strange confession, one that made that early visit to Washington with Frank Georger an event of considerable significance. For on that trip to Washington, she confessed, she had given birth to a boy.

IT SEEMS that when she and Georger realized that she was to have a child so soon after their second marriage they became terrified at the prospect of her father's anger. That, at least, was her ruling emotion, while Georger was afraid that the old man's wrath and disapproval would result in Mrs. Georger's being cut off in her father's will. In seeking a way out of their dilemma Georger persuaded her that it wasn't necessary that her father should ever know. He convinced her that they could go to Washington, where the birth of the child could be concealed and that there they could dispose of the child so that its existence would never be suspected by Emery. Remember that in those days parental wrath was something to fear; and for a a woman to have a child so soon after her wedding was to expose herself to condemnation and disgrace. Frantic, Mrs. Georger consented to her husband's proposals.

When the couple got to Washington they registered at the Shoreham Hotel as Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gray. A week or two later she was removed to a private hospital and there, about February 11, 1896, she gave birth to a boy. The baby was hardly six hours old when Georger appeared at the hospital with a woman named Sophie Landgraf. He told Mrs. Georger that everything had been settled. Then he gave the baby to Sophie Landgraf, with instructions to lose it somewhere, either in a foundling asylum or by adoption, but never to reveal the circumstances under which she came into possession of the child. And with that understanding Sophie Landgraf left the hospital with the unnamed Georger infant. Neither father nor mother ever saw the child again.

When Mrs. Georger (then Mrs. Billings) told this story to her lawyer an effort was immediately made to locate the missing grandson of William Emery. The search was made by the Bankers Trust Company of New York as trustee. Vivian Cornelius, son of May Emery Cornelius, had already received one-half of the $650,000 fund and he would also inherit the other half if Florence Emery Georger died without issue. The trust company then began to advertise for the missing heir to give him the money if located. The Chancery Court was then petitioned to decide if any of the claimants had established their identity; otherwise the court would award the money to Vivian Cornelius as the sole surviving grandchild of William Emery.

Mrs. Florence Georger died two years after she had revealed her terrible secret and one can easily imagine what a relief death must have been to her after years of remorse and conscience torture. But the task of locating the missing heir proved to be an almost hopeless undertaking. Mrs. Georger had not the faintest notion of what had become of Sophie Landgraf or the child. When she made her confession Georger himself was dead and could therefore lend no help. The private sanitarium at which the baby had been born had gone out of business, and its records had been destroyed, and the doctor who is believed to have delivered the child was also dead.

Newspaper notices advertising for the lost heir brought more than 100 replies and eventually 13 men, each apparently honestly motivated, appeared as claimants. The sincerity of their motives was further emphasized by the fact that 10 of them quickly withdrew their claims as soon as they learned that the requirements of the case were not fully met by their evidence. Thus only three men presented evidence which, they hoped, might identify each as the grandson of the deceased William Emery. The three men are Leo Sova of Milwaukee, Albert Childers of Los Angeles and James Nicholson of Baltimore.

SOVA testified that he was a painter and had lived in Milwaukee for nine years. He couldn't say how old he was because he couldn't remember further back than 1902, when "he found himself" in Wilson, Michigan, living on a farm with a family named Sova, who "made no bones" about telling him he was adopted. He had read in a paper of the search conducted for the missing Emery heir, had investigated the circumstances of his own babyhood and had discovered that he "came from the New York Foundling Asylum," to which he believes Sophie Landgraf took him. Sova appears to be much older than 34 years, the age of the missing son, if alive. Proof of his claim is generally regarded as insufficient.

Childers' story is more pathetic and also more convincing, but still far from conclusive. He had spent his life peddling papers and living in poor circumstances when he saw the advertisement of the trustees. For some reason he had always doubted that Mr. and Mrs. Childers were his parents, and when he saw the ad he questioned them and they admitted he was adopted and told him under what circumstances. They told him that in 1890 his foster-father, Robert Childers, married a chambermaid in a Boston hotel. Six years later the couple passed through Washington and there met Sophie Landgraf, who had also been a chambermaid at the Boston hotel. To her they bemoaned the fact that they were childless, whereupon Sophie offered them a baby which she had in her charge. The Childerses took the infant and went to Los Angeles.

Childers also presented a photograph purporting to be that of Sophie Landgraf, which he said had been given to his foster-mother by Sophie in Boston in 1885. Expert photographers, however, testified that the paper on which the photograph was printed didn't come into use in this country until 1890, although another expert testified it might have been imported from Germany prior to that date. Childers' story, although sincere and plausible, is also regarded as failing to establish conclusive proof of his claim.

The one claimant whose story is by far the most convincing is James Nicholson, an awning manufacturer of Baltimore. He testified that in 1916 an aunt told him that the Nicholsons were not his real parents, that he was the son of a rich woman and that some day he would inherit money—statements which the Nicholsons ridiculed and denied. But in 1918, when Nicholson enlisted in the Marines, the Nicholsons, unable to give him a birth certificate, admitted his adoption.

Nicholson's evidence was impressive. One witness is a Mrs. Mary Erhardt. She testified that a Sophie Landgraf brought a male baby to the Erhardt home in Washington just before St. Valentine's Day, 1896, with the request that Mrs. Erhardt nurse the child. The meeting took place through Mrs. Erhardt's mother-in-law, who was a midwife. Mrs. Erhardt testified that Sophie Landgraf had told her the baby had been born February 11 that year. Mrs. Erhardt said the dates had become fixed in her mind because a serious quarrel with her mother-in-law developed out of her refusal to nurse the child. Mrs. Erhardt also testified that later her mother-in-law told her Sophie Landgraf had placed the baby in the Washington Foundling Home, the only one in Washington at that time. It was from this home that the Nicholsons took the baby registered as James Marsden. A daughter of the former matron of the home testified that Nicholson was received there as James Marsden in March, 1896. However, the records of the home state that James Marsden was registered there as born January 21, 1896, three weeks before the Georger baby was born. Evidence was introduced to show that the matron was lax in keeping her records and that a wrong date might have been given by Sophie Landgraf, assuming she placed the child.

Mrs. Florence Georger Billings, when she made her confession, said that her husband had found Sophie Landgraf through a certain Mrs. Grace Wolfe, who then lived in New York and was a close friend of a man Georger knew. Grace Wolfe is also dead now, but Nicholson's attorneys learned that she had a sister now living in Milwaukee. The sister's name is Miss Louise Reis. Nicholson's attorney took Mrs. Erhardt—the woman who had refused to nurse the baby Sophie Landgraf brought to her house—to Milwaukee and there Mrs. Erhardt, without hesitation, identified Louise Reis as Sophie Landgraf.

ON THE other hand, Miss Reis, who is in business in Milwaukee, emphatically denies that she was ever known as Sophie Landgraf, although she does admit that Grace Wolfe was her sister and that she was living in New York with Mrs. Wolfe at about the time the Georger baby was born. Her deposition was read in court, for she refused to come to Washington to testify. If Louise Reis admitted she was Sophie Landgraf and could corroborate Mrs. Erhardt's identification, Nicholson's claims would very probably be regarded as proven, for Nicholson also introduced other testimony to show that he had inherited many of Georger's characteristics. He has a tenor voice and double-jointed thumbs, such as Georger had, which is a heritable characteristic. A former gardner at Rose Lodge testified to the similarity in certain physical features between Nicholson and Georger, while others testified to physical peculiarities common to Nicholson and Mrs. Georger.

Such, then, are the claims that Chancellor Backes must weigh in deciding which of the above three men, if any, is William Emery's grandson. Since none of them has presented irrefutable proof of identity, legal experts believe he will be compelled to decide none of them has established the necessary identity. In that case the remaining half of the $650,000 fund will go to Cornelius, who is a member of the British Diplomatic Service and who recently married the former Jessica Brown, once an American show girl. The money will not go to Cornelius outright. He will have to hold it in trust for six years. If, then, no claimant has established his identity as the missing heir, the money will become Cornelius', and the curtain will come down on a sad and preposterous drama of human blundering.

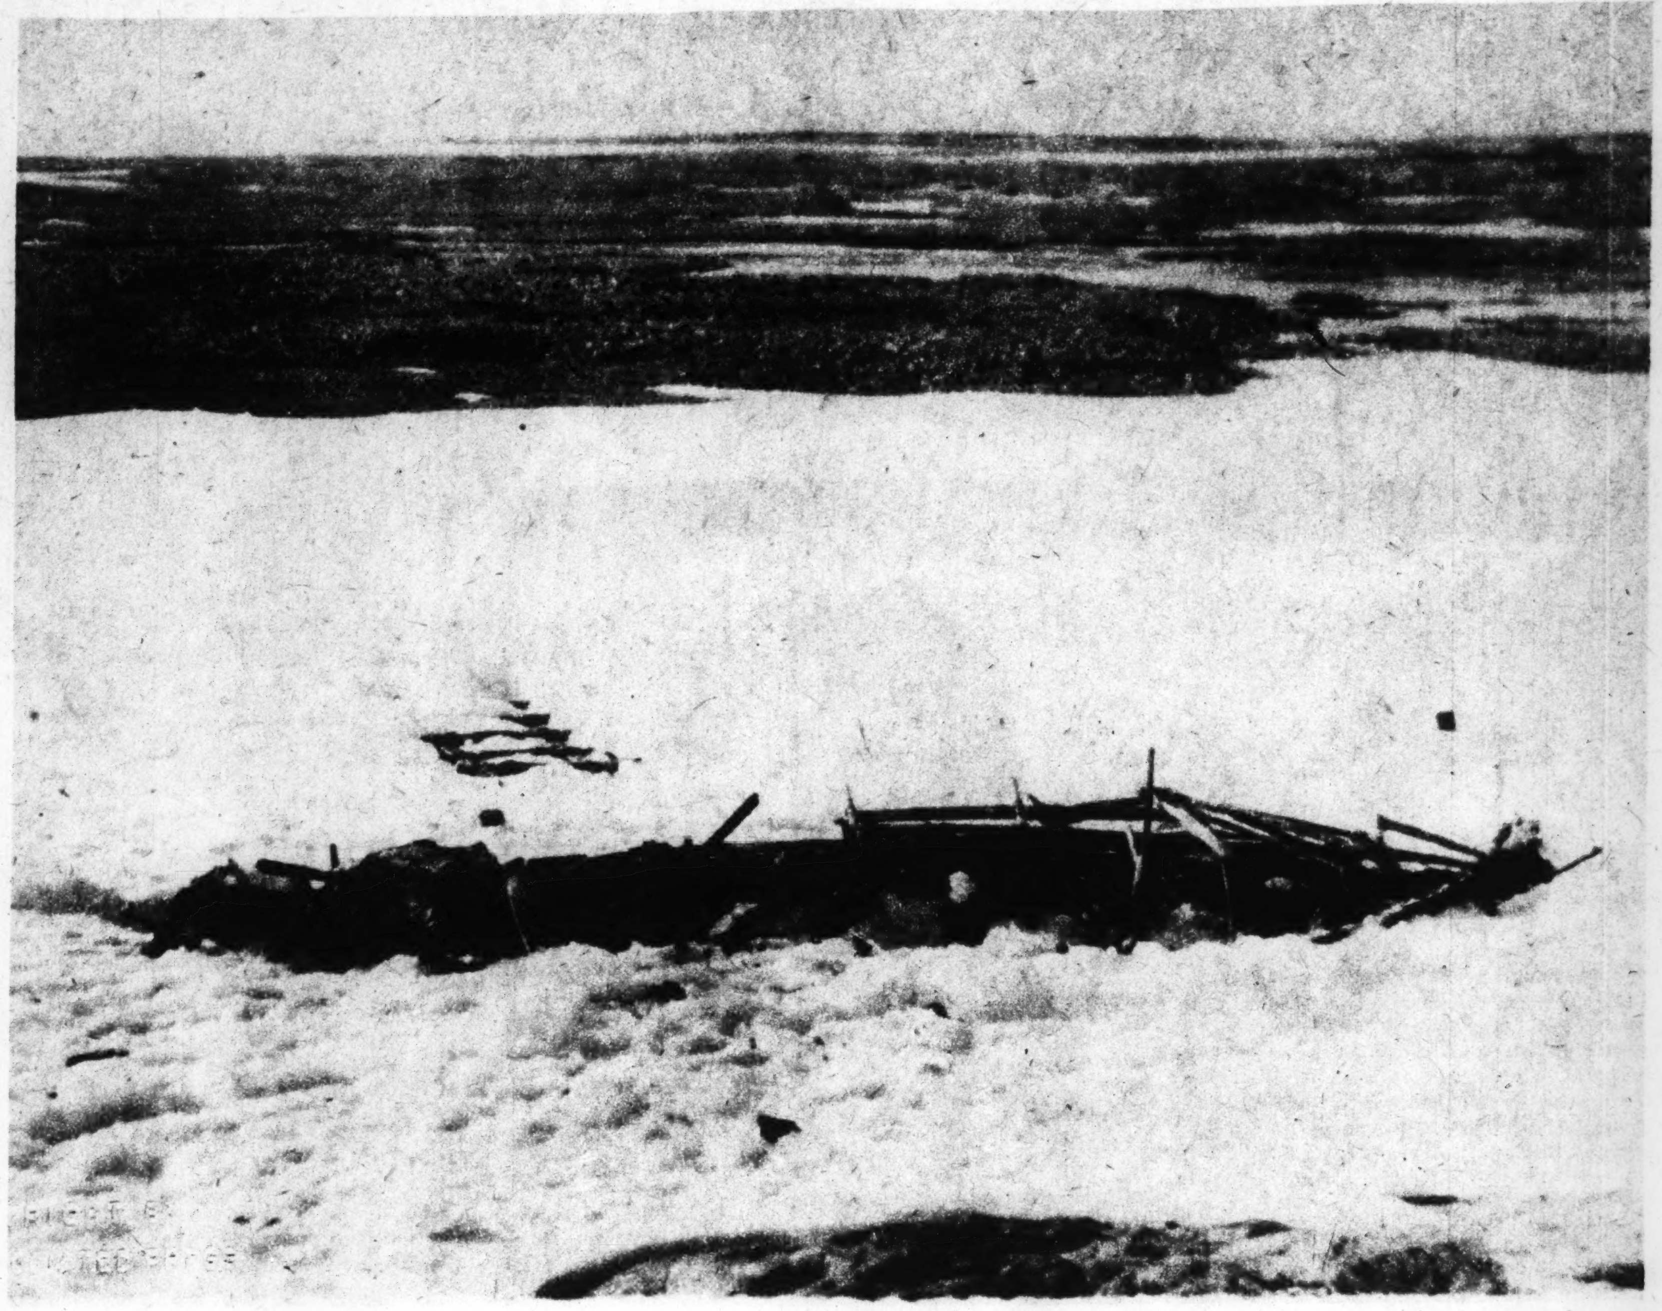
THE LOST EXPEDITION

The Tragedy of Andree's Fatal Polar Exploit as Seen From the Inside.

Land in the Distance—It Proves to Be an Ice Hummock

This is the seventh installment of the official story of Andree and his associates, Strindberg and Fraenkel, who perished in the first attempt to reach the North Pole by air.

A Narrative Reconstructed From the Diaries of S. A. Andree and Nils Strindberg by Professor Hans W. Ahlmann, Professor of Geography, University of Stockholm.



One of the expedition's sledges found on White Island last August.

AFTER the decision that determined the future of the expedition, which came during the night between the 3rd and 4th of August, Andree and his companions rose about 1:30 p. m., after enjoying a most necessary sleep.

Now the expedition stands face to face with a new phase of its existence.

Half an hour after rising, the party breakfasts on bear beef, hard bread, lactoserin-cocoa and biscuits. Then they break camp, for the first time directing their steps towards the Seven Islands, the course lying S. 40 degrees W.

This day, too, is a bad one. Andree makes a number of notes respecting the thickness of the ice, which is given as 3.46 feet and he takes a sample of algae from the foot of the ice. The members of the expedition also notice that the easiest crossings over the leads are by the highest hummocks, the edges of the lead there being nearest to each other.

Naturally, these bridges are fearful, says Andree, but still, they are bridges. Broad channels without an ice floe but with heaped-up edges are the worst, and they are mentioned in connection with a hearty expletive. But if there is no fog, they can manage.

After six hours' march the three men take a plain dinner of biscuits, butter and cheese, besides snow water. For a further six hours they battle onward, then pitch camp and take supper. It is 4 a. m. on August 5th.

After this poor meal a complete inventory is made of the provisions they still have left.

"The result of the stock taking shows," writes Andree, "that we must be careful, especially with the bread."

During the day the temperature has fallen to 28.1 F. "The temperature is falling still lower, and each degree makes us creep deeper down into the sleeping sack," wrote Andree.

IT IS evening of the same day. Fog prevails when the men creep out of the tent. They take breakfast: mixed bear meat (ribs, chops, kidney), bread (¼ piece), coffee and biscuits.

The start is 8:30 p. m., with the same course as the former day. Some drops of rain fall.

During the early part of the night the expedition makes its way among greatly divided ice. The pools of fresh water and leads are numerous. After the low temperature of the night, new ice seems to have been formed on the former. "Glassee ice flop," Andree calls them.

Difficulties are great in this cruising among the floes and all this water. On some occasions they have to creep "on all fours today as in the spring of our youth."

Because of the ice being scattered and of the great amount of water, animal life is fairly rich. Large seals have crept up onto the ice, where, too, there are many bear tracks, fulmars and a Ross gull.

Eight hours after the start they take a dinner which is as Spartan as that of the day before, being only biscuit, butter and bread in very scanty quantities.

The most remarkable thing during the day, however, was probably their four hours' long rafting across a lead about one mile wide. After this exertion of strength, the bold men are rewarded by having better ice and, toward the morning of August 6th, excellent ice.

"Paradise," writes Andree, "large, level ice floes with fresh water pools full of syrup and water, with here and there a young Polar bear with tender meat."

On August 6th, at 9 o'clock and after 15 hours' labor, supper is taken with approximately the same bill of fare as that for the preceding day—then comes rest.

Toward the evening of August 6th they are afoot once more. Fraenkel takes his meteorological observations. The sky is covered with clouds, and it is mild, 34.1 F. The wind has unfortunately swung round from northerly to the south-southwest. At 9 o'clock breakfast is served. After a couple more hours everything is ready, and they set off with the sledges.

THE ice is excellent, with large level floes and many but easy crossings. "What joy when the needle pointed across a level of some hundred yards," Andree notes. The snow on the ice is troublesome, however, for it is granulated like sugar, their feet glide and they easily slip, while the sledges cut deep into the snow.

But they are not altogether spared hummocks, for one large one, at least, running northwest has to be crossed. When the sledges make dreadful somersaults here, Fraenkel remarks that "the journey could not be called altogether hop-e-less."

A new difficulty arises, too, by the leads altering while the expedition is crossing them. Two Ross gulls show themselves during the day, but they are shy. They only once come near the party and then fly away.

Dinner—if one may give that name to the small rations of bread, biscuits, butter and water, which are regularly eaten after the first six hours' wandering, is enjoyed at 5 a. m., August 7th. The chief meal of the day, supper, consisting of 2.2 pounds bear's meat, pea puree (Stauffer), bread and biscuits, is served at 11 o'clock.

Andree considers that they have traveled the longest distance hitherto covered, probably not less than about 3.5 miles, "but," he adds, "the wind is right against us and has probably driven us just as far back." They are very tired when they go to their berths at 1 a. m.

At 2:30 p. m. they awake quite refreshed. Fog still prevails, the wind has freshened, but has swung round more to the west and the temperature has fallen to about 31 F.

It is not until one hour after midnight on August 8th, that breakfast is ready: bear cutlets of two pounds each, with two pieces of bread, lactoserin-cocoa and six biscuits each.

"A little reindeer-hair in the food is recommended, for while taking it out one is prevented from eating too quickly and greedily," observes Andree. This hair came from the sleeping sack.

At 2 a. m. they break camp. It is warm work pulling the sledges, and Andree wishes he had a summer jacket. Andree himself does not use snow-spectacles except in strong sunshine. He presses his eyes together instead. The wind is right against them, "but if it does what it has hitherto done, i. e., presses together the leads, then it can keep on for a week or two," writes Andree.

A couple of auks, with a sound that Andree has never heard before, are seen in a lead; two Ross gulls also appear. A little later the expedition comes for a change into a dreadful "country," "where the fresh water pools are often more difficult to pass than the salt water channels, for their edges are eaten away below, and the depths are so small that the boat cannot be used."

A photograph is taken of this region of ice and water, and Fraenkel "who otherwise complains of the want of change, did not like what was offered him." In consequence of a permanent catarrh, the noses of all three are bothered.

At last, a little before midnight, they allow themselves a proper meal, with nine pounds of bear's meat and two pieces of bread per man, gruel and biscuits.

THE next day, August 9th, before they break camp, Andree makes a sketch of the ice stratification and remarks that "the ice sludge, it is true, looks like old ice but that one must not allow one's self to be fooled by the like."

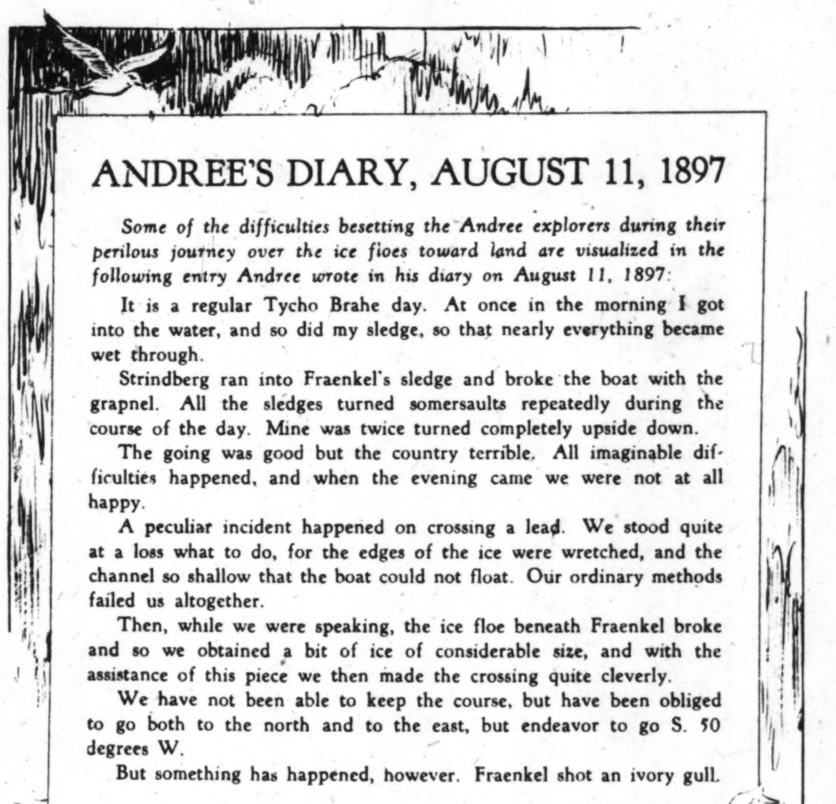
The going is dreadful and the "country" consists of large, uneven fields full of brown ice, new and old, large and small walls of hummocks between which is an alternation of snowdrifts, collections of water soaked snow and pools of melted snow water but not many large leads. It is extremely fatiguing for the pullers; the snow, especially, is difficult but "for the sledges the going is not difficult, for the snow supports them and the sweet water leads were often not so very sweet to cross."

Fraenkel is attacked by diarrhea for the second time and is depressed both in body and soul. Andree gives him opium, and both Andree himself and Strindberg are tired out.

A skva was visible, and a "fine, beautiful bear approached us, but fled before we had a chance to shoot. This was a great grief for us and a pity, too, for soon we shall have no more bear's meat left. Strindberg and Fraenkel went after him, but in vain."

Strindberg's gun was out of order, and they had several hours' work getting it right again. "Its mechanism is dreadfully, carelessly constructed," remarks Andree.

They have been awake and at work for eighteen hours when, at 7 p. m., they creep into their sleeping sacks.



ANDREE'S DIARY, AUGUST 11, 1897

Some of the difficulties besetting the Andree explorers during their perilous journey over the ice floes toward land are visualized in the following entry Andree wrote in his diary on August 11, 1897:

It is a regular Tycho Brahe day. At once in the morning I got into the water, and so did my sledge, so that nearly everything became wet through.

Strindberg ran into Fraenkel's sledge and broke the boat with the grapnel. All the sledges turned somersaults repeatedly during the course of the day. Mine was twice turned completely upside down.

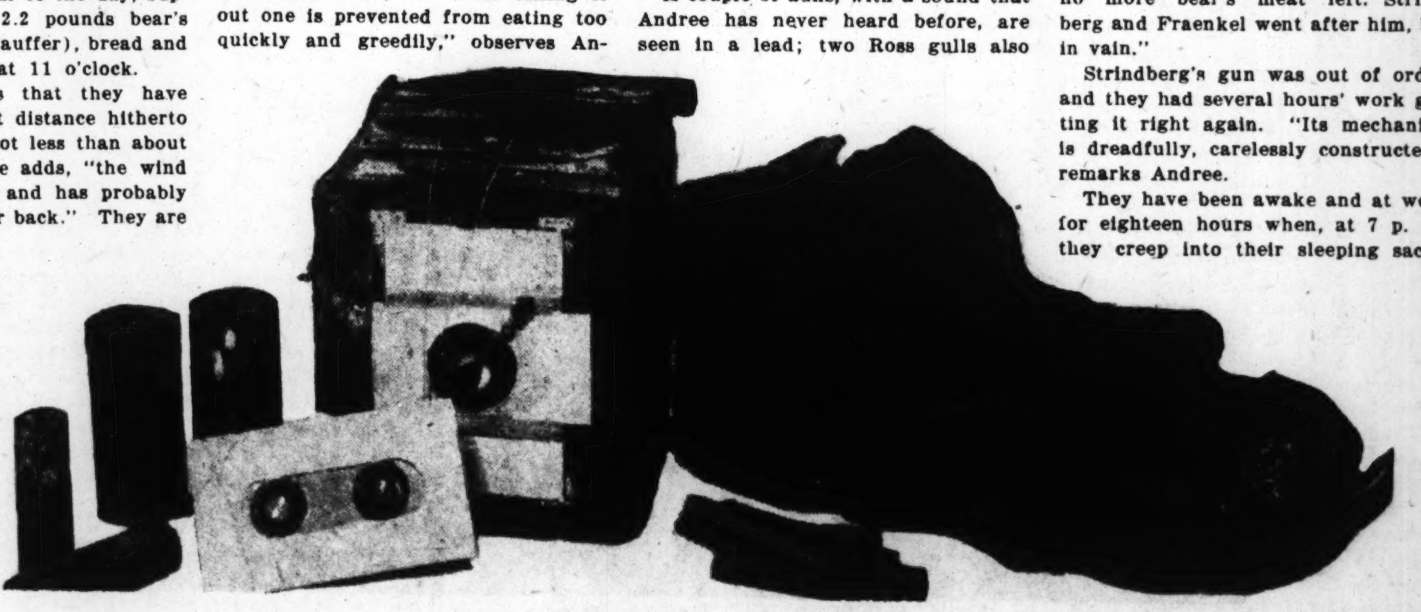
The going was good but the country terrible. All imaginable difficulties happened, and when the evening came we were not at all happy.

A peculiar incident happened on crossing a lead. We stood quite at a loss what to do, for the edges of the ice were wretched, and the channel so shallow that the boat could not float. Our ordinary methods failed us altogether.

Then, while we were speaking, the ice floe beneath Fraenkel broke and so we obtained a bit of ice of considerable size, and with the assistance of this piece we then made the crossing quite cleverly.

We have not been able to keep the course, but have been obliged to go both to the north and to the east, but endeavor to go S. 50 degrees W.

But something has happened, however. Fraenkel shot an ivory gull.



Part of the expedition's photographic equipment. In the cylinders, to the left, were discovered the films made by the explorers. Reproductions of the resultant photographs have appeared in the Post-Dispatch.

A Month Has Passed Since the Explorers Boarded Their Balloon and the Arctic Is Still Their Host.

That evening they had no bear beef either, but contented themselves with meat-powder, chocolate and bread, biscuits and butter.

On August 10th breakfast was taken at 8 o'clock. Then they made a complete list of the loads of the three sledges. As before, Andree enters in his diary his own and Fraenkel's lists, while Strindberg writes down his load in the log-book. The main part of the articles put down in these lists form part of the find at White Island.

Strindberg also takes an astronomical place determination, which gives the result: 81:56:5 N. Lat. and 29:5 E. Long. Grw. "It is remarkable," writes Andree, "that we have traveled so far in latitude, in spite of the wind having been right against us for several days." It is not until about 2 p. m. that they start with their course S. 50 degrees W.

TODAY, the "country" is extremely difficult, even if the going is good. They encounter absolutely untrafficable water consisting of broad channels filled with lumps of ice and snow, so that neither sledge nor boat can be used.

Strindberg's observations having shown that the expedition has come south of latitude 82, they are given for dinner that day at 4 o'clock, in addition to the usual hard bread, biscuits, butter and cheese, some sardines. Then it begins to drizzle and, toward the evening, to snow.

Andree is greatly interested by a find on the ice of small stones and leaves, etc. He describes the place in detail and takes samples.

"This find should make it possible," says Andree, "to determine where this great amount of brown and hard ice which we constantly see has its place of origin. Before this find, I have not found anything on the brown-yellow ice other than fine clay, and now I find on the same ice a whole sending (lot) of plants, sand, small stones, etc."

After seven hours' terribly tiring march the expedition pitched camp. "Now Strindberg is sitting mending trousers in the seat, and Fraenkel is oiling guns. Fraenkel's stomach pains are now over." So end Andree's notes for August 10th.

After having made some observations in the afternoon of August 11th respecting the structure of the ice and taken a sample at the edge of a melting ice hole, Andree notes that Strindberg's place determinations show that they are in 81:57:7 N. Lat. and 30 Long.

AGAIN they think they see Gillis Island, for Fraenkel believes he has caught sight of land. It seems so much like land that they turn their course in its direction, but then it is found to be merely a large and peculiarly shaped ice hummock.

Since the start toward Seven Islands the expedition has come thirty miles toward the south southwest instead of southwest, although they had held the latter direction the whole time. It is also remarkable that during these last few days—between August 4th and 6th—they have been at about the same place where the balloon Eagle was between 1:30 and 3 o'clock on the morning of July 12th.

In the evening the thermometer had fallen to 17.6 F., the lowest temperature hitherto noted during the expedition's journey. The wind has also swung around to the northwest. It is not until about 2 a. m. of August 12th that supper is ready. It consists of bear's meat (1.65 lbs.) and cocoa.

The distance they made that day had not, according to Andree's calculations, exceeded 2.1 miles. A month has now passed since Andree and his comrades went aboard the Eagle for the start of the balloon flight from Dane's Island.

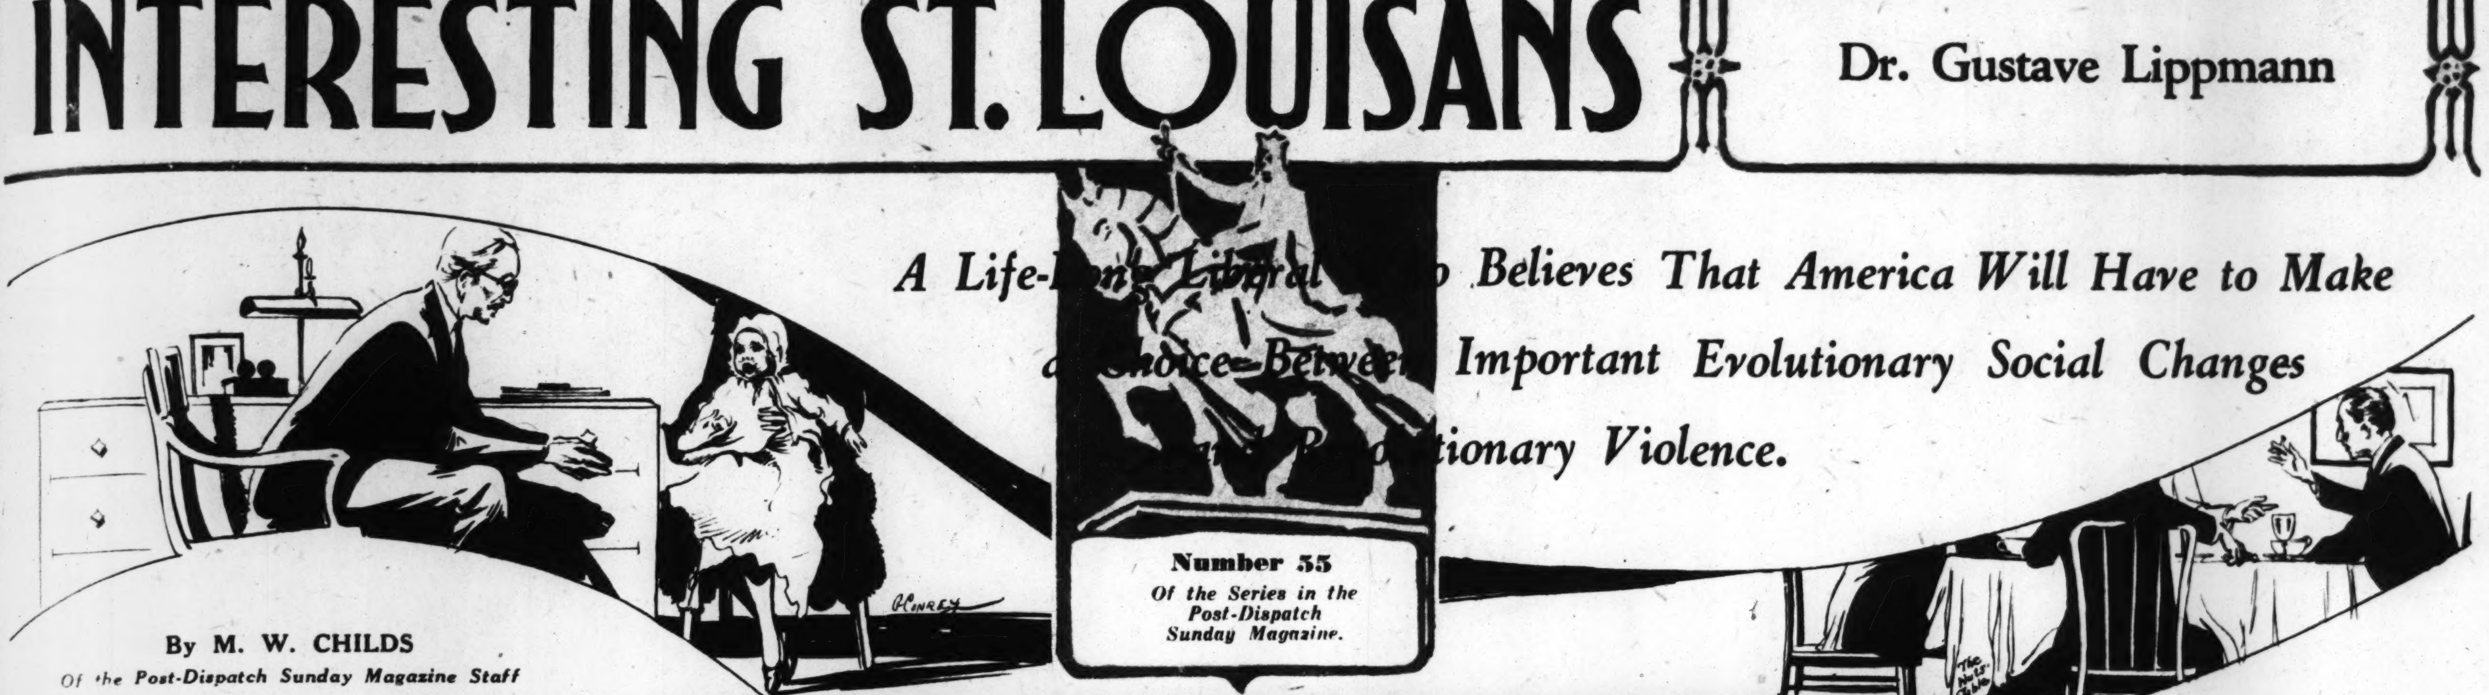
INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Dr. Gustave Lippmann



A Life-Long Liberal Who Believes That America Will Have to Make a Choice Between Important Evolutionary Social Changes and Revolutionary Violence.

Number 55
Of the Series in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

By M. W. CHILDS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

ALL his life Dr. Gustave Lippmann has been fighting on an extended battlefront. He has been a liberal—the conservative-minded would call him a radical. A prophet of lost causes, a disciple of forgotten faiths, a tilter at windmills—that perhaps would be the judgment of the average citizen.

But as he talks, one central belief emerges that is the motive for all his work in behalf of liberal causes. Nothing stands still, nothing is static, neither kings nor governments, nor institutions, nor races, nor people. That belief is the motif of Dr. Lippmann's life, the design that runs through the whole pattern. It is fundamentally an understanding of the law of physical change, of growth, of progress. Above all, of progress. For Dr. Lippmann's thought is not colored by pessimism. "There can be," he says, "no recession, no going back."

"If, 200 years ago," he says, "you had told a King that there would be a time when there would be no more respect for kings, he would have used very bad language to you, and possibly have ordered your head cut off. If you say to a capitalist today that there will be a time when there will no longer be a capitalist system" . . .

Smiling, he lets the listener finish the sentence, and adds: "The King was wrong. So is the capitalist."

As Dr. Lippmann views the country of his adoption today from the perspective of 30 years on the social-political front, America is faced with a choice between evolution and revolution. On the one hand an approach by peaceful, intelligent means to the new order that must inevitably come and, on the other, revolution, a violent overthrow brought about because the leaders of society refuse to accept the certainty of change, because they set themselves against it like the Bourbons—learning nothing and forgetting nothing, turning their backs stubbornly upon the whole stream of history and its meaning.

Here, too, his viewpoint is an optimistic one. He has hope that America will achieve this gradual, evolutionary process of change. Although, he is quick to point out, it has never happened before in the history of the world. He doubts that a general revolutionary uprising is possible in this country.

"We are too literate a people for that. You cannot compare America and Russia. Russia is Asia—60, 80, 90 per cent, perhaps, of illiteracy. And here we have no proletariat, no class-conscious group that has been reared with the idea that they must overthrow the owning class to secure justice.

"That is why the Communist party is so small? Yes. It's why there is no Communist party at all. Foreigners in the first generation, perhaps, but after that they drop away from all ideas centering around class-consciousness."

IN THIS discussion Dr. Lippmann forever raises an "if"—one that he would write in enormous letters—IF the conservatives do not stiffen completely and become so hard-shelled that they admit nothing new. IF they do not impose themselves like molluscs in the path of relentless change.

"We have done so little in this country after all," he says. "I was in Denmark last summer and there I studied somewhat the co-operative movement, there and in Sweden. And in Vienna! What they have done in Vienna is simply amazing. And with no money, virtually no money. Houses for working families, handsome, beautifully designed, attractively arranged apartment houses containing nurseries and kindergartens for the children, swimming pools and recreation rooms, and these buildings are built around garden courts and play areas.

"And what they have done in the way of child welfare is splendid," says Dr. Lippmann, who is a child specialist and who for many years has had a large practice among the very rich and the very poor.

"So often in this country we make a gesture and think the fact is accomplished. A little gesture on the surface and we have the pleasant illusion that the problem is solved. I am afraid that the Hoover Child Welfare Conference was little more than a gesture. The root of the problem is economic. It is so obvious, so plain. It is so plain here in St. Louis. "We have done so little," he repeats. "And that is why any experiments we have undertaken should be encouraged, any tentative ventures into municipal ownership. They are examples, they point the way to future possibilities. They have their place in the great work of education which is the first task we have."

Dr. Lippmann believes that a physician who has a real awareness of the conditions under which he practices must of necessity become a liberal, a socialist, in theory at least, if not actually a party worker. The physician, above all other classes, has the economic problem and its significance thrust before him, Dr. Lippmann says.

THAT has been his experience throughout his own life. He came to St. Louis in 1894, at the age of 24, from the universities of Berlin and Bonn, at the latter of which he had received his degree. It was a period of depression—but not so severe as the present, in Dr. Lippmann's opinion. He started a general practice at Eighth and Carr streets, one of the poorest quarters in the city. All around him was poverty and misery. But it was not surprising, not new. This young man had not expected America to be a paradise.

"Try to crowd as much into the 24 hours as is possible. We have so little time to live." It was on this principle that the young doctor began his life's work. One of the first things he did after he got a practice of a sort was to work for the establishment of child welfare stations, a function that the city has long since taken over. Outside his profession his interests branched out in a dozen different directions.

Dr. Lippmann became identified with a group within the City Club that within a few years achieved a name that was nationwide. These men—the group included Flint Garrison, Harlan Eugene Read, E. M. Grossman, Dwight Davis for a time—had lunch together. The table at which they sat was called "The nuts' table." This name gradually became a familiar usage around the club, which was then in the Board of Education Building. The group at "the nuts' table" talked furiously and fast at luncheon. They talked about everything under the sun No idea was too bizarre or too radical to frighten the "nuts," and usually the new and startling idea found a champion if only for the sake of an argument.

These men rarely agreed on anything. For the most part, they spoke from dissimilar points of view—Garrison was a single-taxer, Read a champion of the reform of capitalism through a doctrine of individualism, Lippmann a socialist. They disagreed on principle and in practice. But it was all very friendly and once in a while in their talk, extended endlessly over coffee and cigarettes, one of those rare things would happen when whatever they claimed to be discussing was illumined objectively so that it was seen more or less in its true light, apart from partisan persuasion.

EVERY distinguished or interesting or unusual person who came to St. Louis had luncheon at "The nuts' table." Soon the name was widely known. The City Club at that time arranged the most varied and diverse programs. One week it was Emma Goldman, followed by President Roosevelt, followed by Sir Wilfred Grenfell. They sat at the nuts' table and talked with the nuts. Dr. Lippmann got to know a great many of these visitors very well, so that when he would go to New York or Europe he would see them. They would come to his house when visiting St. Louis. Wherever he has been he has drawn around him stimulating and unusual people. "Why not!" he says. "In the few years that you have to live, you might as well have that kind."

The war came and knocked nearly everything in Dr. Lippmann's world awry. He is a pacifist and of German origin. At once he was suspect. The motive of each Power involved was imperialistic, dubious, in Dr. Lippmann's opinion. He talked freely, as he had before. Even upon America's entry he held to his own view. After a time he simply stopped talking, except among his closest friends. It seems to him now, glancing back, that almost everyone he knew was obsessed with a kind of mania. Dr. Lippmann tried to use logic, particularly on his colleagues. But he found that logical, clear thinking, the quality he has always admired most, was altogether ignored, scorned. Suddenly he found reasonable people who were willing to believe the most preposterous tales.

One of the most disillusioning experiences for Dr. Lippmann was to see so many of his formerly liberal and radical friends turning tail. Very few of the Doctor's friends stayed by their beliefs during the war. They became the mania's victims; it possessed them.

"At the Public Questions Club, of which I have been a member for many years, I thought they were going to put me against the wall and shoot me." He laughs and the delicate web of wrinkles about his eyes tightens so that he looks more than ever like a very wise Chinese mandarin. "It was the only place where I spoke my mind and, as I say, even there sometimes I felt in danger of bodily injury."

If Dr. Lippmann is a pacifist he is a disillusioned one, thoroughly disillusioned. "If there were to be a war now, I think there is scarcely a government in Europe that would survive. The threat of Communism is very real there, and a declaration of war would be a signal to the radical elements. No, we must wait until another generation has grown up, one that has not experienced war."

THE post-war world he finds entirely changed. He was abroad in 1912 and again shortly after the war. "We had no visas then. No nonsense or bother of that sort. We went freely from country to country. There is so much more suspicion now."

Dr. Lippmann has an interesting theory of his own to explain the political impotence displayed in the election of such a man as Mayor Thompson of Chicago. He holds that in part at least it is due to the fact that men today no longer exchange ideas or opinions. And this is so, in his theory, because their social contacts are so largely dictated by women, their wives. The women, in his opinion, are much better informed than the men, because they have time, or at any rate they take time, during the day, at clubs and lectures, for discussion, and to hear the views of others.

"We have a League of Women Voters. Why not a League of Men Voters? But you can't imagine such a thing. In the evening husband and wife have a social life together. They play bridge, or something of the sort. But the friends are customarily those selected by the wife and the gathering is purely social. It has occurred to me that the saloon, the better type of saloon, served, in a sense, as a place where men could exchange ideas and opinions. In the evening, at 10 o'clock or so, the man would go down to the saloon for a glass of beer, and there he would meet a friend or two and they would discuss candidates and issues. The political ring dominates so easily now because no one has any opinion or any information."

EVEN a brief talk with Dr. Lippmann brings out a great many of his theories, the play of his mind as it focuses on the contemporary scene. And it discloses how many causes he has championed: the Birth Control League, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Committee of 48 for a third party, of which he was a member. And they have not all been by any means, in the familiar phrase, lost causes. The birth control issue is an interesting example. In 1916 he was one of a group of determined St. Louisans who brought Mrs. Margaret Sanger, birth control advocate, to St. Louis for a lecture. A locked hall, a near riot and police action followed the protests of those who objected to her appearance here. Last spring she addressed a large audience at the Y. M. H. A. forum, brought by a committee of which Dr. Lippmann is a member. In 14 years opinion had so changed that this controversial question could at least be peacefully heard.

Consistently, Dr. Lippmann applies his views to his own profession. "The socialization of medicine is inevitable," he says, "in spite of all the opposition to it."

"The state educates the citizen," he contends, "regulates his morals, protects him, then why should it not

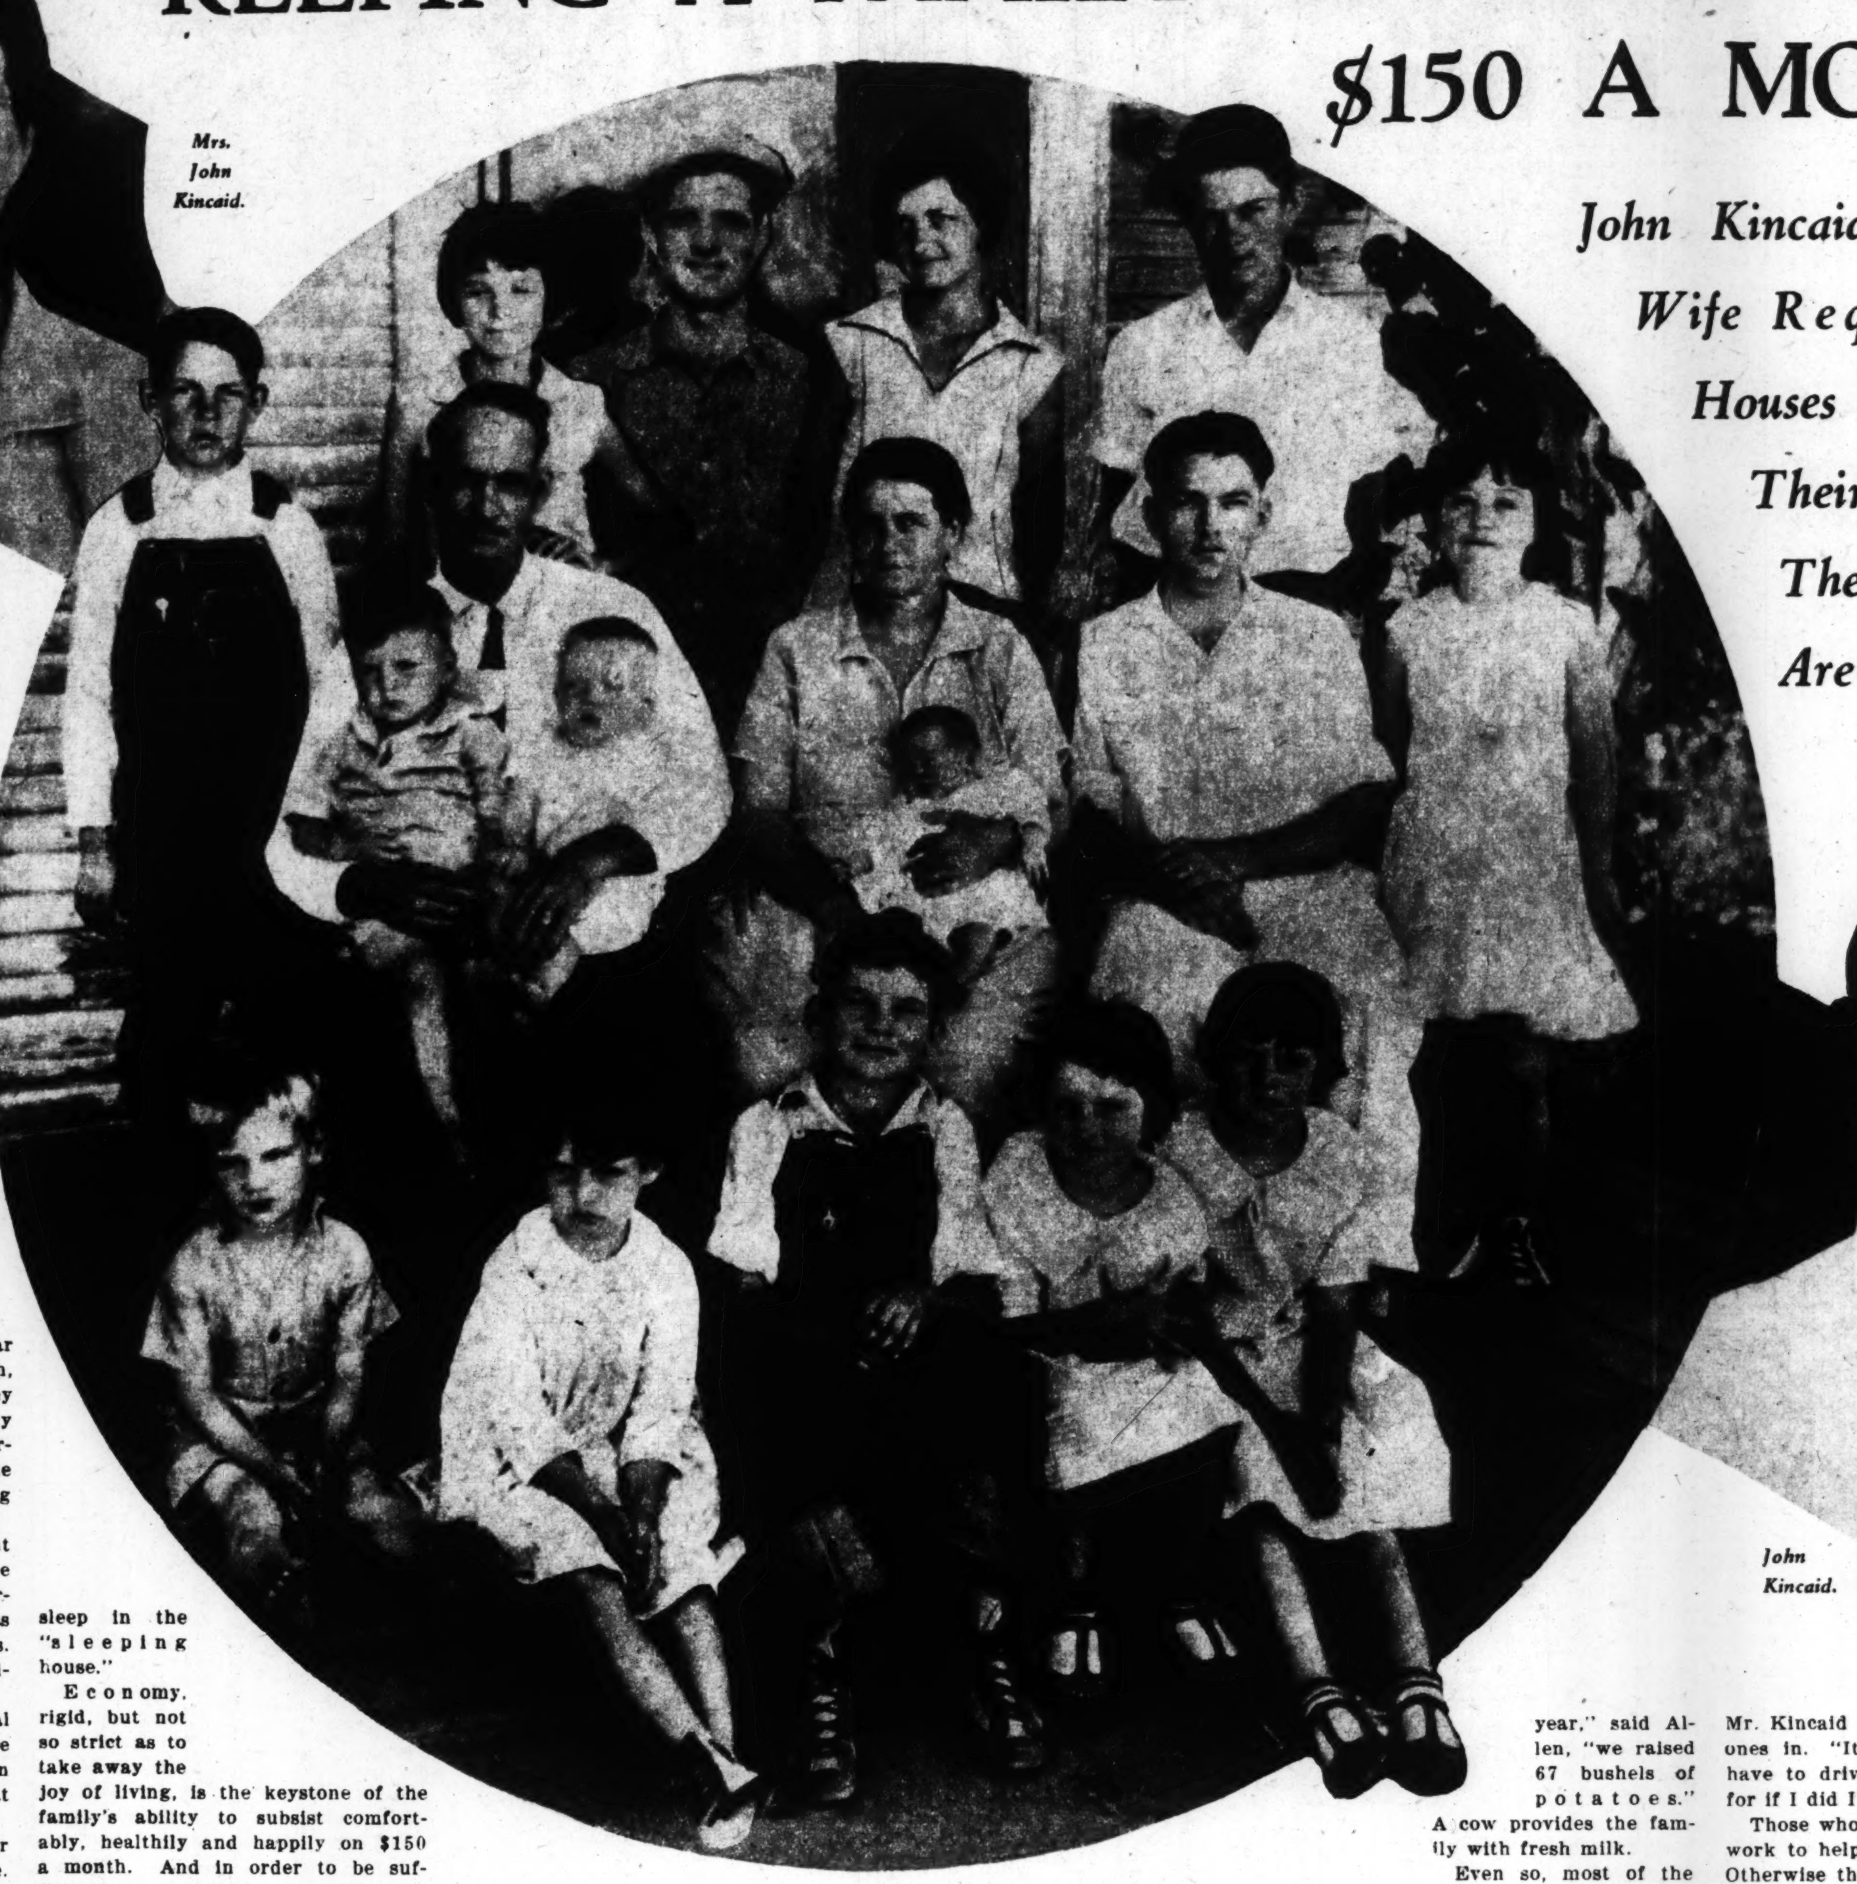
KEEPING A FAMILY OF SIXTEEN ON $150 A MONTH

John Kincaid and His Wife Require Two Houses to Shelter Their Clan but Their Finances Are Solvent.

Mrs. John Kincaid.



The Kincaid family assembled. Garland Kincaid, the young man in the top row wearing a cap, who is the oldest of the children, is married and has two children of his own.

John Kincaid.

BROKEN ARROW, Oklahoma.

MASS production of children, as well as mass production of automobiles and other industrial products, has its advantages, and chief among them are: lower cost per "unit," wider distribution, greater efficiency, more self-reliance and happiness for all the family.

Such, at least, is the experience of Mr. and Mrs. John Kincaid of Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, who have 15 lively, healthy children, all of those of proper age attending school and living as happily as average children do.

The support of this mass production family comes solely from the $150 monthly salary of the father, who is employed as a power house attendant by an oil company.

Ordinarily a family of 16 (the oldest child is married) would live far from comfortably on $150 a month, but the Kincaids are an exception They determined to live both comfortably and happily; and, having so determined, conceived and adopted a unique and interesting system for rearing their children.

Their chief problem, in carrying out this determination, was to lower the cost of living per child without hindering the normal growth and happiness of their children. This Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid have succeeded in doing almost to perfection.

Just as mass production industrial goods should cost less and are more widely distributed, so mass production children have their advantages—at least, according to the Kincaids.

Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid find their large family a delightful adventure.

Both father and mother are intensely proud of their children and strive to give them the best possible chance in life. This, no doubt, is one of the chief reasons why the Kincaids have been so successful in the task of rearing a large family.

Of the 15 Kincaid children, eight are boys and seven are girls. Garland, a son, who is 24, is the married one, and has two children of his own. The youngest child, Ona Mildred, a daughter, was born on July 8 of last year. The others are as follows: Otto, 21; Enid, 18; Allen, 17; Kate, 15; Velma, 13; Robert 11; Eugene, 10; Maxine, 9; Caroline, 7; Martha Belle, 6; Richard, 4; Joe, 2, and Eddie, 1. At present all of the children but Garland live with their parents. Garland's two children are Gene, 2, and Marceline, 1.

In all, the Kincaids have had 18 children, but three of them died when young, one when a year old, another when 18 months old and a third at birth. Out of the entire 18 only one set of twins appeared. Thelma, Velma's twin, was one of the three who died.

FATHERING and mothering so many children would be, to most people, a novel experience, but not to Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid. Both had been members of large families before their marriage.

Mrs. Kincaid is one of 17 brothers and sisters, and Mr. Kincaid is one of a family of 15 children. The lifelong experience of the Kincaids with large families is still another reason for their achievements as parents of 15 robust children.

Mr. Kincaid was born in Flint District, Indian Territory, in what is now Adair County, Oklahoma, 45 years ago. His mother, Mrs. J. R. Kincaid, is still living, as are three of his brothers and eight of his sisters. His father died in 1901. Mrs. Kincaid was born in Washington County, Arkansas. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Nickell, now live in California. Of the 17 Nickell children, 15 are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid were married at Stillwell, Oklahoma, August 25, 1905.

Today the Kincaids live on a pumping lease belonging to an oil company. The family occupies two houses, one used almost exclusively for sleeping and for washing and ironing. All of the children but the four smallest ones sleep in the "sleeping house."

Economy, rigid, but not so strict as to take away the joy of living, is the keystone of the family's ability to subsist comfortably, healthily and happily on $150 a month. And in order to be sufficiently economical, the Kincaids have developed an interesting and marvelously efficient system of living, based on individual self-reliance, mutual co-operation, specialization and strict discipline.

"It is especially necessary," said Mrs. Kincaid, "that we teach the children self-reliance. Since each child receives only a minimum amount of attention (due to so much competition from his 13 brothers and sisters) he simply must learn how to take care of himself, even in infancy."

THE teaching of self-reliance, Mrs. Kincaid believes, is one advantage that her children have over ordinary children with only two or three brothers and sisters. "Many parents pamper their children and do too much for them," she said, "but Mr. Kincaid and I haven't time for that. Children who are not pampered, but who must learn to take care of themselves, are just so much better off."

A glance at the daily duties of the Kincaid children shows how they have learned to do things for themselves. The girls, for instance, know how to cook, how to wash and iron, and how to make their own clothes—knowledge in which most modern girls are lacking, according to Mrs. Kincaid. Enid, the oldest of the girls, is, next to her mother, chief chef for the family. Kate and Velma, next in line, "do the dishes" and clean house. Enid also washes the clothes with an automatic washer. All of the girls, including Maxine, Caroline and Martha, join in ironing the clothes. The girls are supervised in this work by their mother.

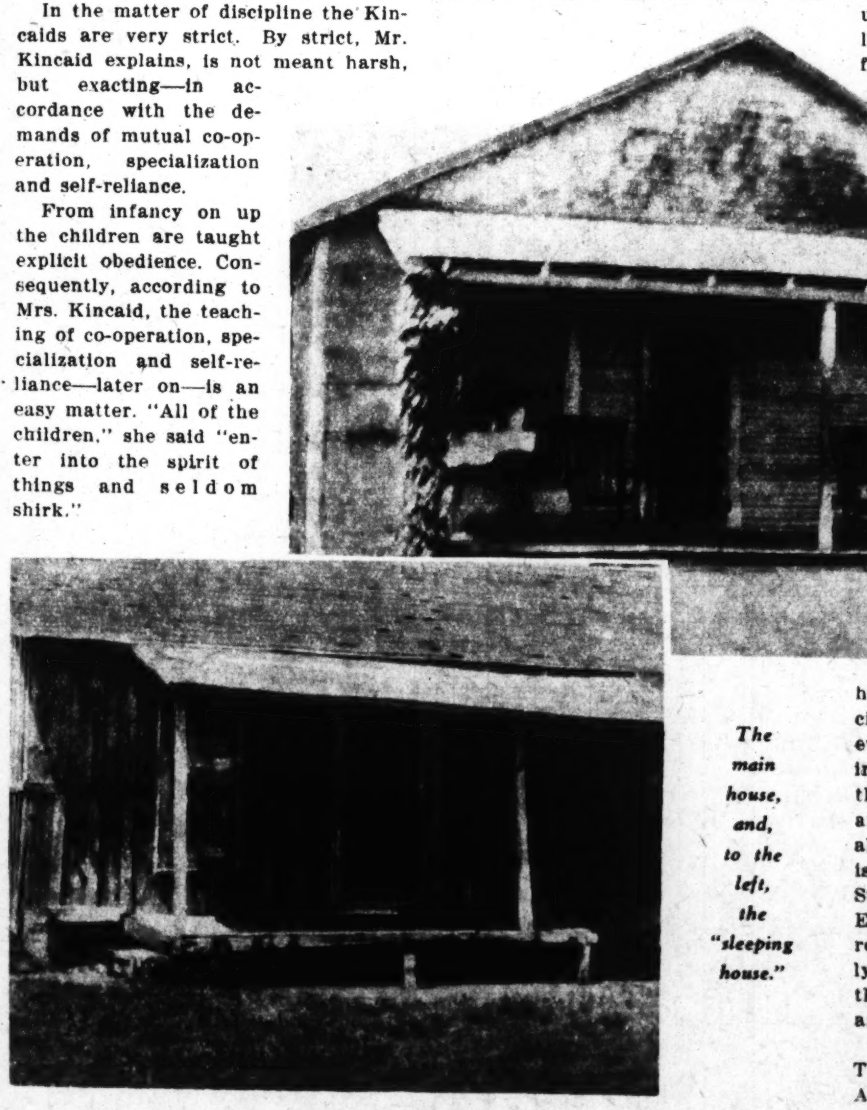
The Kincaid boys also know how to do things. Allen, with some help from his father, takes care of the family garden, which yields potatoes, tomatoes, lettuce and other vegetables. Allen also tends to the family livestock, consisting of a cow and three pigs. Gene is master of poultry, and a mighty fine crop of chickens it is that he raises every year. The other boys, Robert and Richard, also have definite duties, such as keeping the yard clean and taking care of the family car.

"Each child," said Mr. Kincaid, "has definite duties to perform—duties not to be shirked. In this way the necessary work—and there is plenty of it—can be done most efficiently. Of course, we try to apportion the work as equally as possible."

Just as modern civilization teaches each individual to specialize in what he is best fitted for, so the Kincaids teach specialization to their children. "It's all a matter of common sense," said Mr. Kincaid. "If we mixed the kids' work up all the time, and had one to do this today and that tomorrow, we'd never get anything done."

In the matter of discipline the Kincaids are very strict. By strict, Mr. Kincaid explains, is not meant harsh, but exacting—in accordance with the demands of mutual co-operation, specialization and self-reliance.

From infancy on up the children are taught explicit obedience. Consequently, according to Mrs. Kincaid, the teaching of co-operation, specialization and self-reliance—later on—is an easy matter. "All of the children," she said "enter into the spirit of things and seldom shirk."



The main house, and, to the left, the "sleeping house."

However, it takes more than obedience, self-reliance and specialization to enable a family of 16 to live on $150 a month. It also takes economy in food, clothing and shelter. But here, as elsewhere, the Kincaids have been most successful.

During the gardening season much of the family's vegetable requirements are raised at home. Potatoes, tomatoes and lettuce may be found growing under the careful direction of Allen, the official horticulturist. "Last year," said Allen, "we raised 67 bushels of potatoes."

A cow provides the family with fresh milk.

Even so, most of the family's food must be purchased at Broken Arrow. And such purchases! Sugar is bought in 100-pound lots, apples by the bushel, and bread by the "many loaves." "With 40 biscuits consumed every morning," said Mr. Kincaid, "I purchase flour in two large sacks." Soap, he explained, is bought in 110-bar lots, and other supplies proportionately.

Last summer Enid and her sisters, with their mother's help, put up 400 quarts of fruit. Of this, more than 100 pounds were consumed in a recent month. Pies for the family are cooked in a pan which ordinary folks would use for roasting turkeys. Nevertheless, according to Mrs. Kincaid, the official pie maker, there is seldom anything left in the pan after a meal.

Not only do the Kincaid's grow as much of their food as possible, but they also make as many of their clothes as possible. Mrs. Kincaid, Enid, Kate and Velma are the family's official tailors. With the exception of trousers, coats, shoes and special Sunday-go-to-meeting costumes, most of the clothes are made at home. Nevertheless, it is no small bill to pay for 16 pairs of shoes every year and new suits for the boys when school starts in the fall.

Despite the expense of clothes, food, two houses, a car and various other incidentals, the Kincaids are educating every one of their children, even sending some of them to college. With the exception of Richard, Joe, Eddie and Ona Mildred, the four youngest, all of the children attend school. Otto is a student at the East Oklahoma State Teachers' College at Tahlequah. Enid, who graduated from Broken Arrow High School last June, will shortly become the second college student in the family. Allen, Kate and Velma are now in high school.

The others attend grade schools. Those in high school go to Broken Arrow every morning by bus, but Mr. Kincaid has to drive the younger ones in. "It's a good thing I don't have to drive them all in," he said, for if I did I'd need a truck."

Those who attend college must find work to help pay their own expenses. Otherwise there would be too great a drain upon the family resources. Otto is now working part time and Enid intends to do so when she goes to college. Otto is specializing in mathematics; Enid plans to become a teacher, and Allen wants to study agriculture and become a farmer. So far the other children haven't chosen their life's work.

ONE might think it a relief to Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid when school starts in the fall and the children no longer stay around home all day. But such is not the case.

"We really seem to enjoy life more in the summer when the whole family is together," said Mrs. Kincaid. "When the children are away at school during the day, it's rather lonesome for John and me."

In the summer the children usually finish their daily duties by noon and devote the rest of the day to play. Although neighbors live nearby, the Kincaid children generally play by themselves, especially since there are enough in the gang for almost any game. And, strange to say, the children never seem to tire of one another. They quarrel but rarely, their mother said.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid firmly believe that a large family is no harder to rear than a small family. "You simply have to be stricter, more economical and more efficient," said Mrs. Kincaid.

Neither she nor her husband is burdened by the job of fathering and mothering 15 children. Neither appears careworn, as you might expect. Neither is irritable or cross, as are some fathers and mothers of large families. And what is more, both find time for outside activities. Mr Kincaid is an active member of the Masonic lodge at Broken Arrow, and Mrs. Kincaid is a member of the Eastern Star. Mr. Kincaid is also active in the Royal Arch Chapter of Masons.

Outside of whooping cough and measles the children have enjoyed almost perfect health. Sickness is a rare occurrence in the Kincaid home.

While neither Mr. nor Mrs. Kincaid insists that all families should be as large as theirs, both believe that, all things considered, they have the edge on ordinary parents.

THIS dignified capital broke into a grin a short time ago when Mme. Alexandra Kollontay, Russian Soviet Minister to Sweden, was received by King Gustav V and rode to the palace in the royal coach behind four black Arabian horses. There was nothing particularly amusing in this circumstance alone. It was the memory it recalled. Once before, Mme. Kollontay got a free ride in Stockholm, but it wasn't in the royal coach. It was in the Police Department's "Black Maria." She was suspected of revolutionary activities and they called the "wagon" to hustle her down to headquarters.

That, of course, was before Mme. Kollontay was Minister to Sweden or any other country. It happened many years ago, when she was just a plain agitator. When Stockholm grinned; she grinned, too. When somebody remarked to her afterward that it was unusual to find a woman who had ridden both in the "Black Maria" and the King's coach she agreed that it was at least unusual to ride them in that order.

Neither Stockholm's grins nor Madame Kollontay's means that the lady is definitely situated in her ministerial post. Already word has come from the Baltic intimating that Madame Kollontay's stay at Stockholm is over. She has been summoned to Moscow—and why? One Swedish newspaper hints that it means her recall, that her life at Stockholm is lived in "too bourgeios" a manner to suit the Soviet, and that until now only Stalin's support has protected her from criticism.

When digging up memories of her revolutionary activities, Mme. STOCKHOLM, Sweden.

THIS dignified capital broke into a grin a short time ago when Mme. Alexandra Kollontay, Russian Soviet Minister to Sweden, was received by King Gustav V and rode to the palace in the royal coach behind four black Arabian horses. There was nothing particularly amusing in this circumstance alone. It was the memory it recalled. Once before, Mme. Kollontay got a free ride in Stockholm, but it wasn't in the royal coach. It was in the Police Department's "Black Maria." She was suspected of revolutionary activities and they called the "wagon" to hustle her down to headquarters.

That, of course, was before Mme. Kollontay was Minister to Sweden or any other country. It happened many years ago, when she was just a plain agitator. When Stockholm grinned; she grinned, too. When somebody remarked to her afterward that it was unusual to find a woman who had ridden both in the "Black Maria" and the King's coach she agreed that it was at least unusual to ride them in that order.

Neither Stockholm's grins nor Madame Kollontay's means that the lady is definitely situated in her ministerial post. Already word has come from the Baltic intimating that Madame Kollontay's stay at Stockholm is over. She has been summoned to Moscow—and why? One Swedish newspaper hints that it means her recall, that her life at Stockholm is lived in "too bourgeios" a manner to suit the Soviet, and that until now only Stalin's support has protected her from criticism.

When digging up memories of her revolutionary activities, Mme. Kollontay talks about episodes of her arrests, trials and imprisonments with much less drama than the average housewife displays in telling about baby's tumble down the front steps. Those experiences are all a part of any revolutionist's career, and Mme. Kollontay's career has been a long one. She has been identified with the revolutionary movement in Russia since 1898. It was in that year that she published her first works and became known as a socialist and loyal supporter and member of that progressive party.

Within eight years she was in prison, for in 1906 she had to face trial on two charges and was sentenced on both —her Socialistic pamphlet on Finland and her work in organizing workers of the textile industry. Two years later she was forced to leave Russia, and between 1908 and 1917 lived abroad as a political exile. With the Russian Revolution of 1917 she hurried back to her own country, where, under the new Soviet regime, she received the post of Minister of Social Welfare. Since that time she has been a high figure in the Soviet Government's affairs, with four appointments as Minister to foreign capitals. Twice she was sent as Minister to Norway—in 1924 and 1928. In 1926 she was appointed Ambassador to Mexico, and last fall she was appointed Minister to Sweden. And she is still the only woman ambassador in the world.

It may be said that Mme. Kollontay's course did not always run smoothly in other countries. When she was Minister to Norway she got in some trouble with her own Government by ordering 50 Paris gowns in one year and paying for them out of the Soviet embassay's budget. Then she got in trouble with a rival faction of the Soviet administration. It was said that this faction virtually forced her retirement by sending her secretaries with whom she could not get along. Anyway, she retired at her own request, to do social work among the Russian poor.

In Mexico she got in trouble with the Mexican authorities before she had been there a year. She went home in the summer of 1927 and it was reported that President Calles had asked for her recall because of her propaganda activities. She said she went home to present reports of her work in Mexico. Whatever the facts, she did not go back. But she did go back to Norway for a year. Then Sweden.

"I have never been conscious of any opposition to the appointment of a woman to this position from my fellow countrymen," she told the correspondent recently. "Quite the contrary is true. In the Soviet Republic the position of women is constantly improving. A bright generation of girls is growing up and their influence will soon be felt. Naturally, they will not fit into all public posts, but after much experimentation women are now recognizing their real capacities as well as their limitations.

"In the last analysis," Mme. Kollontay continued, "I should not care to go so far as to say that women do better work than men, but I will say that they do their work more conscientiously than men and try to do it better. Consequently, this tells in the results. In the past women have demonstrated that they are the better housekeepers, and in such community housekeeping as state economy and education it is likely that their finest contribution will be made. In many other fields women have demonstrated their superiority."

As to the problems the Soviet Republic will face in 1931, Mme. Kollontay is convinced of this: Popular dissatisfaction with the "five-year economic plan" will not be one of them. All energies and all activity, she declares, are concentrated upon seeing that it is carried through successfully. The year 1931 will mark the third year of the experiment. She scoffs at suggestions by the foreign press that enthusiasm is waning.

"If there is less external manifestation of interest—and I am not even sure that this is true—it merely means that the determination is more deeply rooted and that the enthusiasm has a firmer footing. Our strength lies in the co-operation of all workers for the common cause of the country. Individual competition is practically nonexistent. The competition that exists is the competition of groups in doing the best work. The returns are not profit in the economic sense. 'The returns are satisfaction in the recognition given to good work.

NOMINALLY there is now no unemployment. The latest figure places the number at 600,000, which is relatively insignificant. There is work for all. No one lives in fear of being out of work.

"There is a minority group, of course, for whom the present system operates as a handicap. That group is composed of those who once belonged to the old aristocracy and those who still cling to the ideals of the old order. For them life is not easy. But for the vast majority of Russians there is contentment."

Pop, or "master of ceremonies," and that he had been a member of the bodyguard of Maximilian. He told my guides that he was guarding Mayan gold and sacred relics, and that he was a hermit who had lived in the depths of the caves, alohe, for a lifetime.

"We followed him in the weirdest procession I have ever joined. Instead of ascending he led us down into the narrow, almost vertical shaft from which I had watched him rise—and thence into a low tunnel. At great length, after passing through a repetition of the passages by which we had entered, we emerged into the huge cavern with the skylight, and, to my great relief, I saw my cameras just where I had left them. I looked at my watch. We had been lost for five hours!

"After many cautious maneuvers and gestures I succeeded in posing the old hermit for a picture, and as he stood there in the bright sunlight that streamed through the opening as though a cathedral window, the queer light in his eyes was explained. He was almost blind.

"Before we parted, I placed in his bony hand a few coins, at which he smiled simply. As money, the coins were valueless to him; but they were not meaningless. He recognized the gift as an expression of my gratitude for his having saved our lives.

"In farewell he gazed earnestly into my face, then reached out his hand and timidly touched my arm. With that he turned and moved away.

"On the edge of the blackness beyond he stopped—a diminutive figure at that distance. I watched him as one hypnotized. Then he faced us and raised both hands above his head in a parting gesture.

"Then the hermit of the caves vanished as mysteriously as he had appeared."

Piccolo Pete—A Monkey With a Past

Piccolo Pete looking over the business.

THE sprightly career of Piccolo Pete must cause thinking people to wonder a bit if, after all, the old doctrine "Be good and you'll be happy" is quite true. Pete is a monkey, and a bad one, but he leads a joyous life. And his present pleasant situation is a result of one of his most outrageous sins.

But first let us delve into Pete's lineage. Once, before the dreary prohibition days, there was a group of monkeys which one Jake Hanneman kept for the edification of his customers in his saloon at East Grand boulevard and North Broadway. There were other animals there, too, and the saloon zoo was justly popular. If an unduly assiduous patron suddenly began to see red mice ornamented with green polka dots and ears of Valenciennes lace, he could quiet his perturbation by assuming that Jake had merely acquired a new member for his menagerie.

When one of Hanneman's bartenders opened a saloon of his own, he obtained some of Hanneman's monkeys for his place. And to this group was added Pete. Two years ago Pete was the only simian left. Consequently, he couldn't share his guilt with anyone when the owner found him sitting amid the wreckage of the saloon after he had had the place to himself for an hour or so one night. Pete had obviously yielded to his lower, or throwing nature, and broken just about everything breakable in the establishment. That was Piccolo Pete's swan song as far as that phase of his life was concerned. His master unceremoniously kicked him out.

The outcast roosted in a tree the rest of that night. The next day a tailor gave him shelter. After keeping him a week, the tailor sold him to a grocer for $5. The grocer sold the monkey to its present owner, Anthony F. Merkel, proprietor of an automobile repair shop and filling station at North Broadway and College avenue. And as mascot of the station Pete, for his sins, past and continuing, leads the life of Riley.

Pete is the pet not only of Merkel's family but of part of North St. Louis. The youngsters, particularly, make much of him despite his high-handed behavior toward them. He steals their marbles and sweetmeats, and on one occasion, at least, employed a confidence game to get away with a schoolboy's lunch; he put his arm chummily around the unfortunate boy's shoulder, and when the child, delighted at the attention, was competely off guard, Pete snatched the lunch from his hand, ran up a pole and then ate it before the eyes of his victim.

Pete will steal almost anything he can. He will even pick his master's pockets, taking eggs and other delicacies put there for that purpose. When he filches something that is not recovered, Merkel cheerfully pays the owner for it.

Usually Pete is kept on a long chain which allows him considerable liberty. But occasionally he gets loose, and then A. B. Mason is the only one who can cajole him back to bondage. Mason is proprietor of a laundry across the street from the monkey's headquarters and is Pete's particular friend. Pete will do anything for him except behave.

Interesting St. Louisans–Dr. Lippmann

also provide the means of health?"

The fact that he has championed so many causes not in accord with majority opinion has in no way turned him against the world or against people. The prevailing impression is one of vast enjoyment of the human comedy. As a spectacle, he finds it an unfailing source of fascination. But without cynicism, without bitterness or distrust.

"I have a collection of letters, or, rather, the envelopes that letters were sent in at the time of the enormous inflation of currency in Europe," he says. "It is just a curiosity, of course, something amusing. What astonishing evidence of the incalculable stupidity of the human species. It is a little sad, really. There is one envelope literally covered with stamps—eight trillion marks in stamps it took to send the letter from Germany to America. Think of it."

At his office and in his home the human qualities are most evident. The waiting room of the office is furnished in children's furniture, painted in brigt colors. There are children there, with nurses or their mothers. Dr. Lippmann moves like a kindly genie from one to the other, a benevolent giant in a Lilliputian world.

The home at 6307 Alexander drive is not large, consisting principally of a living room nearly two stories in height, with a mezzanine. There is ample space for books, pictures —many of which were done by friends—small objects in ivory and bronze. It is, above all, a comfortable house, which it should be, since it was designed by Mr. and Mrs. Lippmann. The two children, Albert and Margaret, live in New York. Here in this pleasant room, or in summer on the dining terrace that looks out over the trees of Forsythe boulevard, there is much talk of many things, usually friends there in the evening and often visitors from away.

Dr. Lippmann's life is rounded by a diversity of interests. He and Mrs. Lippmann never miss a symphony concert. They are at every art exhibit and every good play that come to St. Louis. In his tastes in art, Dr. Lippmann is again consistent. He favors the more advanced forms.

"One must have a rounded life," he says. "Particularly the physician. One must have interests outside one's profession. And the emotional side cannot be neglected at the expense of other phases. So many young doctors today single out one narrow specialty and go directly into it before they know anything about human beings really. I prefer to be a child specialist because at least one has the whole child. You do not treat the child's liver or his skin. But I suppose it will not be long before they partition the child up among us. I do not like this tendency."

"There is no justification for the philosophy of pessimism," Dr. Lippmann says finally. "There never has been. First there was the age of slavery, then feudalism and then wage slavery, in which period we still are. It's better, unquestionably better.

"And the next phase will be an improvement, although I shall not live to see it, nor is it probable that you will. At present we are in a very unhappy time. The depression seems to me to be not merely another spasm in a chronic illness but a profound malady, world-wide. And if it means that the next phase of civilization is to have its development in the genius of another nation, another people, Russia, say, or India, we cannot mourn that too greatly. No one race has been permanently endowed with the responsibility and privilege of world leadership.

"Certainly our age is an interesting one. An age of swift transition, even though everyone will not recognize it."

FABLES IN SLANG

The Two Wives Who Talked About Their Husbands.

A CERTAIN Mrs. A. had a way of reading the Riot Act to the Other Half of the Domestic Sketch. She was constantly rebuking him for making Bad Breaks. When he bought Striped Shirts of the Georgia Minstrel Pattern she told him that he had the Sartorial Instincts of a Crap Shooter. She asked him why he wore his Hat on one side of his Head just like a Common Rough. She toasted him on both sides.

It seemed to him that he had made more Errors and fewer Hits than any player in the Matrimonial League. His percentage was about .023.

But this same Mrs. A., when she talked to her Friends, said that although Will might be Thoughtless now and then, the same as all Men, he had a Heart too Big for his Body and one of the Sweetest Natures that ever came down the Pike. She said that if other Men were as reliable as her Will there would be no demand for Private Detective Agencies. She said that Will had a Disposition that it was a Comfort to tie to, and it was a Great Blessing for any Woman with Nerves to be anchored to a Steady Man who never flew off the Handle. She said that she was glad of the Chance to play Clinging Vine to his Sturdy Oak, and she didn't care who knew it. When Mrs. A. fell to Cracking Up her Husband she talked like a Press Agent.

Mrs. B. was different. When she and the Wage Earner were by themselves she would Fondle him and make him Declare that he still Loved her, whether it came Natural or not. She would hold him by the Hand and call him her Handsome Boy.

An Hour later, while talking Confidentially with a roomful of Women, she would say that she had a Secret Sorrow. She said her Husband lacked Soul and Feeling and Imagination and a few other Items.

Her Wings and His Wings were not Mates. When she wanted to Soar in the Rarefied Realm of Sentiment and cut Didoes among the Clouds, he would haul her back to the Plowed Ground by some allusion to a New England Boiled Dinner.

Although she had tried to grow Pinions on him and encouraged him to do her kind of Swoops, he preferred to be of the Earth Earthly. Consequently her Life was as Empty as a Bass Drum. In attempting to get an Affinity she had made a Miscue and was up against it.

Under the Circumstances, she would have to make the best of a Bad Bargain and hide her Grief from the World unless someone should ask her about it.

It came about that one Evening Mr. and Mrs. A. went to call on Mr. and Mrs. B. The two men were in B.'s Room, silently comparing some Old Bindings, when Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. came into the Room adjoining and began to compare Husbands, little recking that the Men could eavesdrop.

When A. heard Mrs. A. catalogue his Virtues and say that he was One in a Thousand, he was surprised but Pleased. When B. heard Mrs. B. say that she was condemned to a mere Existence, with a Sordid Money-Grubber, he also was Surprised, but not Pleased.

The two Men walked softly out of the Room and went for their Hats.

"My wife is stuck on me, after all," said A. "'In a Case of this Kind there is only One Thing to be done. Come with me and I will open a Keg of Nails."

"I am with you," said B. gloomily. "I must Drown My Sorrow."

So they went over and called on a friend whose Cellar was under all parts of the House.

MORAL: Anything for an Excuse.

The Girl With a Handicap Who Had to Lock Up Her Parents.

HERE we have a Fable regarding a Nice Girl who liked to have Young Fellows drop in of an Evening. She always used them the best she knew how and she might have closed a Deal early in the game had it not been for her people. They were not overly Bright, for they carried the Delusion that they could help Daughter in her efforts to jolly along the local Lotharios.

Instead of taking to the Back Rooms and giving little Jeanette full Leeway in the Parlor, they would butt into the Tete-a-Tete and try to be Cordial with the Young Man.

Father's idea of making himself the Life of the Party was to tell of his Experiences at the Battle of San Juan Hill and what he said to Cap and what Cap said to him. And plenty more that never got into the Records of the War Department. Mother thought it would Help Some if she would sit over by the Gentleman Caller and refer to two Distinguished Relatives, so that the Young Man might know that there was a Family Tree. Mother's work was very much to the Sandpaper and Jeanette would try to call her off.

After Father had told what he could remember about the Spanish War and Mother had spread herself on the Prominence of their Connection in the East, the Young Man would move his Feet a few times and guess he would have to be going. Jeanette would follow him out to the Hallway and help him with his Coat and tuck in his Mufler and tell him to be sure and come back soon. He would promise, of course, but it was Dollars to Dumplings that many a Moon would Wax and Wane ere George went against that combination once more.

Jeanette was a dutiful Child and respected her Parents, but after they had dished many a Bright Prospect she had to rise up and have her say.

"You two would be Strong Cards in an Old People's Home," she said, "but when it comes to fixing up a Speedy Time for one of the Boys you are a couple of superannuated birds. I am only a poor, weak Maiden, with a Vocabulary of about 300 Words, and I do not belong to the Loyal Legion or know much about our Family History, but if you two will go hide yourselves and let me handle all Comers alone and single-handed, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if there would be Something Doing in a little while."

Although convinced that she needed their Assistance, they yielded to her Wishes. She moved the Sofa out in front of the Grate and extinguished all the Lights except a couple of Red-Shaded Incandescents, and the next time a Young Man called he didn't care if he never went home.

And there was no War Talk.

Then when she began to wear an Engagement Ring, Father and Mother had to Admit that she had been right.

A VERY LONG NIGHT IN CHICAGO

BUSINESS called me to Chicago, but the misgivings and apprehensions that I felt were immediately dispelled upon arriving. I saw a tough-looking character help an old lady across the street and then politely doff his cap. The incident sent a warm glow through me.

"Well," I thought, "this town can't be so awful."

I went to a hotel, walked over to the desk and picked up a pen which looked as if it would write without staggering.

"Any rifles, machine guns, pineapples or other infernal devices?" chanted the clerk monotonously.

"What do you mean?" I demanded.

"No offense, sir, but we always ask that question as a precautionary measure. You see, we don't allow those things in the hotel. Now and then people try to sneak in here with them to throw a party."

"Well, I haven't got any pineapples."

"Yes, sir. Will you leave a forwarding address?"

"Forwarding address? I'm not checking out, I'm registering."

"I understand, sir, but I mean a forwarding address for your body. You know—in case of accident."

I scoffed at him and moved away. In the lobby I saw a little cabinet almost entirely surrounded by people. I gave one look at it and felt my hair do a setting-up exercise. It was a miniature shooting gallery, 10 shots for a nickel, and had evidently been installed for the benefit of visitors who wished to tune up their eyes and trigger fingers.

That night I decided to call on Jane Slocum, an old friend of mine, so I hailed a taxi. The journey to her house was uneventful.

Jane was seated on the davenport in the living room busily engaged in cleaning a revolver. I was somewhat taken aback. In the old days when a gentleman called on a lady, he would find her reading, sewing or knitting, with a droning cat curled up at her feet; but here was Jane squinting down the barrel of a revolver, while the cat was conspicuous by its absence.

WE GREETED each other and then sat down on opposite ends of the davenport. Jane finished cleaning her revolver, gave it a final inspection, placed it on the table and then turned to me and said: "Well, what do you know?"

I said I didn't know anything and suggested a theater. She shook her blonde locks. What about a night club? She shook her head again.

"Impossible. The old man has gone to a lodge meeting and I can't leave mother alone. She's sleeping in the next room and I've got to stay home and protect her."

There came a sudden violent ring of the doorbell. Jane seized the revolver and crept over to the door. She opened it an inch or so, jammed the revolver through the aperture and said in a stern, authoritative voice: "One false move and I'll scatter you all over the South Side. Who are you and what do you want?"

"Special delivery, miss," said a quavering voice. "I've got a package here for you."

Jane held the revolver in her teeth by the trigger guard, tucked the package under her arm and signed the receipt. Then she returned the receipt to the messenger and slammed the door shut. The whole procedure struck me as rather unusual.

"I'm sure I wasn't expecting anything like this," she said with a frown. "Do you think there's a bomb in this package?"

I said I couldn't say, never having received any bombs. I ventured to add, however, that it looked like a box of candy.

Jane shook the package, sniffed it, placed her ear against it and listened intently. Then she began undoing the string and paper.

"Well, I'll take a chance," she said. "If you see any smoke, run for your life."

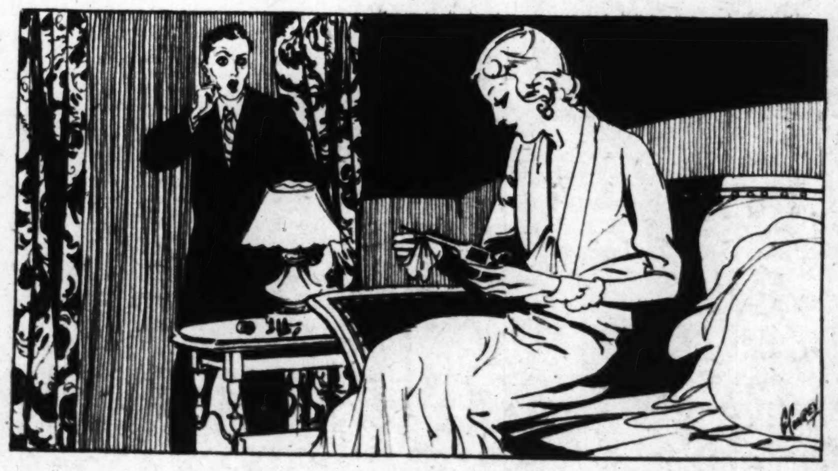
I had already edged away from her and was wildly looking around for a place of refuge. She removed the lid with a jerk and I uttered a little cry, snapped my eyes shut and clamped my hands over my ears.

"O K," said Jane. "It is candy sure enough. Have some."

I tottered up to her, reached into the box and extracted a chocolate-covered caramel.

"Your hand is shaking," she remarked. "What makes you so nervous?"

"I'm not nervous," I replied. "I'm eager. I like c-caramels. I do." And I took six more of them to prove it.



I was just about to eat one when there came a peculiar grating noise from the adjoining room. I remained rigid, with the caramel poised about four inches in front of my wide open mouth. Jane utttered a little exclamation of impatience, thrust the box of candy into my arms and again picked up her revolver.

"Excuse me a minute," she said. "I think there are burglars about."

She tiptoed away. There was a short period of silence, followed by another grating screech. I knew what it was. Somebody was trying to pry open a window. Then I heard Jane's voice.

"Hoist 'em, kid!" she said coolly. "I've got the drop on you."

There was an angry exclamation in a man's voice. A shot rang out. Immediately after the sound died down I discovered that I was a full seven feet away from the spot where I had stood before hearing it.

"Let 'em have it, honey!" screamed a voice that I recognized as Mrs. Slocum's. "You'll find some more bullets in the jewelry box in the right-hand drawer of the dressing table."

Then—Bang! Bang! Bang!—and answering bangs.

One shot whistled into the living room, clipped a picture wire in twain and left a print of Sir Galahad hanging at a jaunty angle by the remaining wire. Another bullet struck a vase and sent particles of porcelain flying in all directions. I crouched behind the davenport to pick up the particles.

There was one more shot. I got up as far as all fours, listened, and then shakily rose to my full height. I was mopping my forehead with a handkerchief when Jane came back blowing the smoke away from the muzzle of the revolver. She put the gun on the table, sat down and dusted her hands.

"What do you think of Sinclair Lewis?" she asked.

"Sinclair Lewis?" I repeated. "At a time like this?"

"Oh," she said, smiling grimly. "That was just a couple of gorillas trying to make an easy haul. But they'll never come here again. I would have had them both if I hadn't been blinded by their flashlight. At that, I think I winged one of 'em."

SHE got up, crossed to a mirror and looked at herself. Then she retreated, covering her face and groaning. I was at her side in an instant.

"What's the matter?" I hoarsed. "Are you wounded?"

"No," she replied, "but I'm a sight. My hair is disarranged and my nose is all shiny."

Then I realized that Simmons was bending over me and fiercely shaking my shoulder. I stretched and rubbed my eyes.

"It's 11:40, sir, and you've just 20 minutes to catch your train for Chicago," Simmons was saying. "I thought you had left the house long ago. That was too much partridge you ate, sir. I've always been afraid of the partridge—that and the boiled emu."

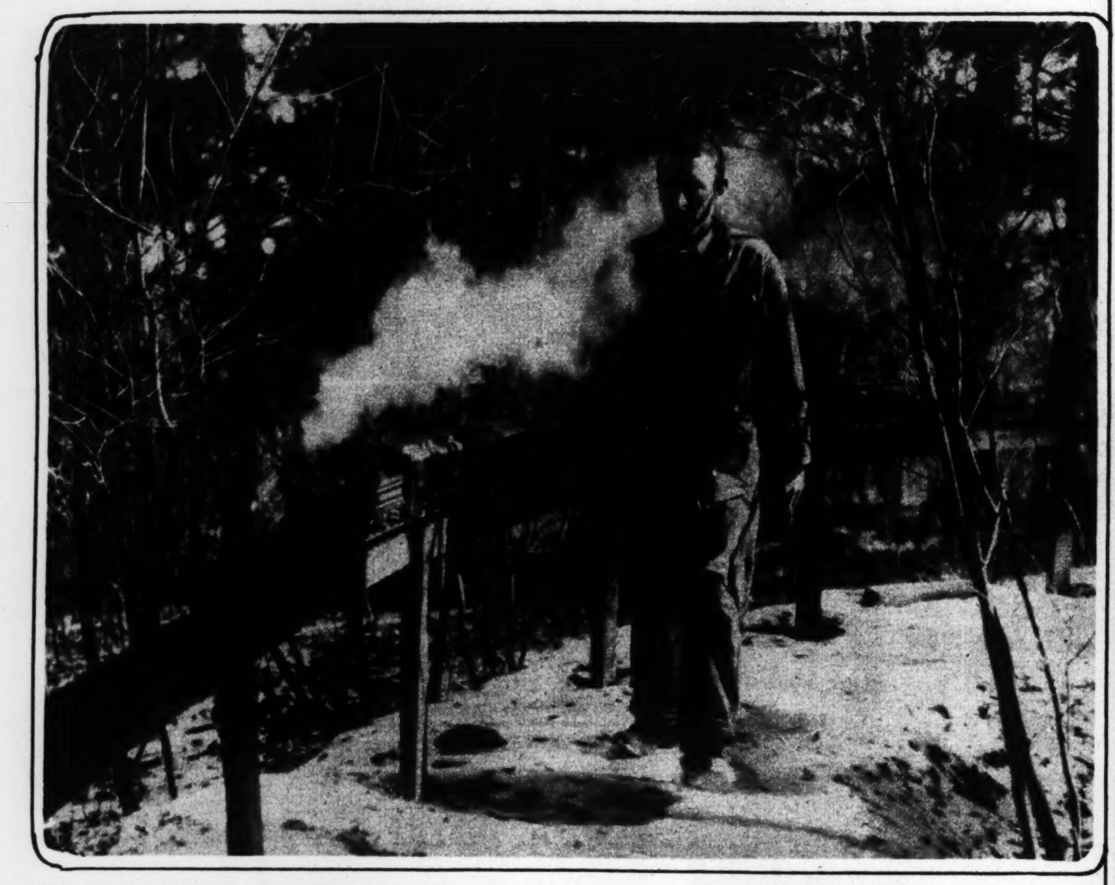
THE 1930 NOBEL PRIZE AWARDS

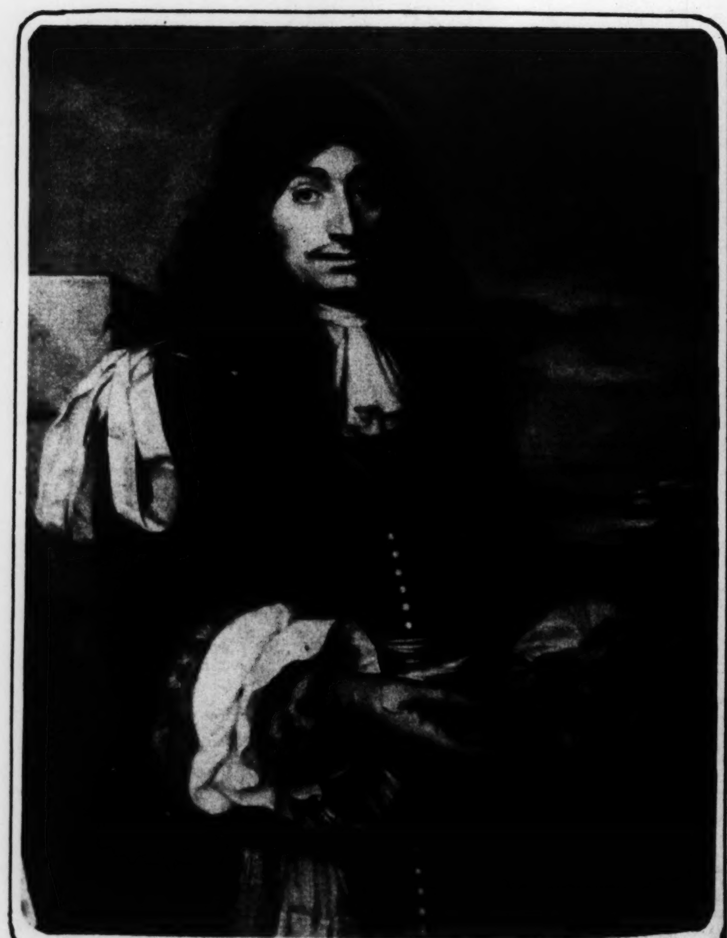
Winners from opposite ends of the earth—Sinclair Lewis, in literature, and C. V. Raman, of India, who received the prize in physics, after distribution of gifts in Stockholm, Sweden, as provided by the will of the great Swedish inventor.

Bishop Soderblom, of Sweden, and Frank B. Kellogg, former American Secretary of State, listening to addresses in Oslo, Norway, which awarded to them the Nobel prizes of 1929 and 1930 for having accomplished most for world peace.

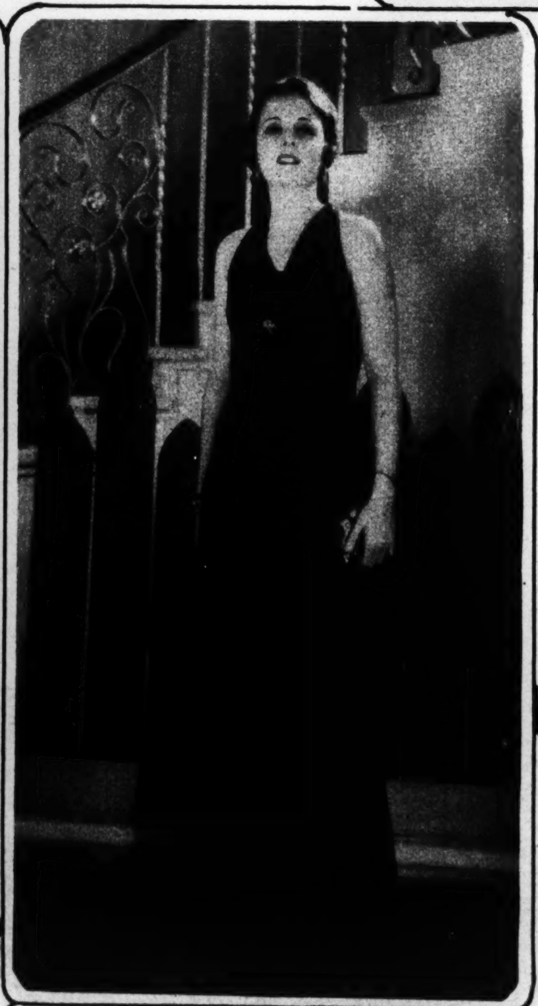
On left, King Gustav of Sweden presenting to Sinclair Lewis the Nobel prize for literature; above, Princess Ingrid of Sweden congratulating the wife of Prof. Raman of India, upon the prize awarded to her husband for achievements in physics.



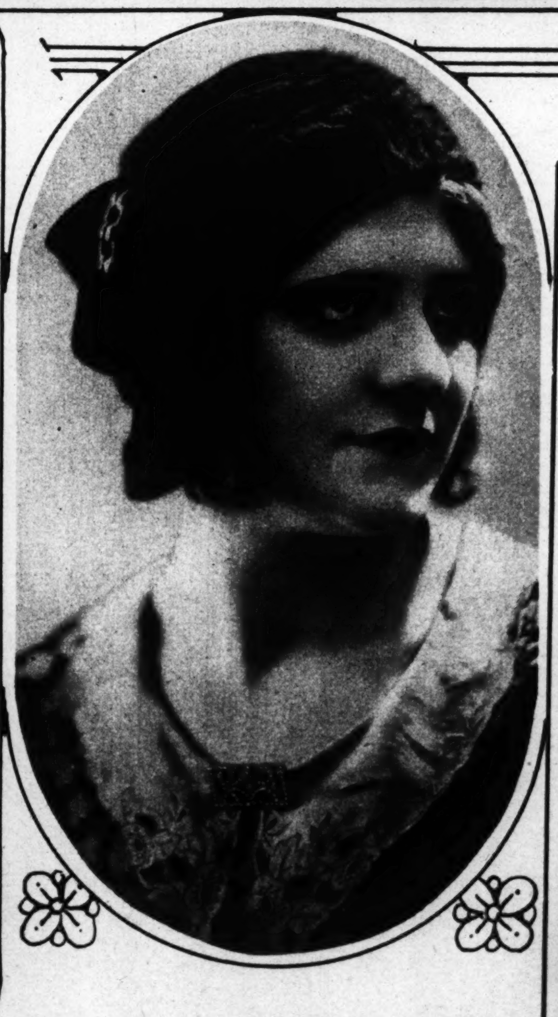
MAN'S URGE TO BUILD—William Landon of Lancaster, Mass., has upon his estate an exact miniature model of a railroad train. The engine, tender and four passenger coaches, weigh 210 pounds. The locomotive runs under steam pressure of 90 pounds, burns coal, and can be reversed by throttle inside cab.



"MAN WITH THE IRON HAND"—Only known painting of Henri de Tonty, La Salle's gallant lieutenant. E. Herndon Smith, Mobile (Ala.) artist, who exhibited it in St. Louis, says it was painted about 1685 by Nicholas Maes and unknown to western historians since 1780. It has been in a private collection.



MARY ASTOR, in evening gown of black crepe. The neck line has an interesting design.



For ordinary daytime or sports wear is this hat of brown, in beret effect, trimmed with velvet and bow fixed with a golden chain.

OH GEORGE BUNGLE EVERY TIME YOU SUCCEED IN STARTING TROUBLE WITH ME, YOU THROW HINTS ABOUT LEAVING HOME. HEAVENLY DAYS, GO! IT WOULD BE A GOOD REST TO BE RID OF YOU FOR A DAY OR SO.
A DAY OR SO? MY WORD WHERE'S MY SATCHEL THAT I USE TO CARRY LODGE STUFF IN?
WHERE IS IT? HA, YOU ACT AS THOUGH I WAS A SERVANT HERE. IF YOU WANT THAT SATCHEL, LOOK FOR IT
ALL RIGHT, I WILL. AND KINDLY DO NOT TRY TO TALK ME OUT OF GOING, EITHER. NOT NOW. NO SUH.
THE WORM HAS TURNED. THE BOAT HAS GONE DOWN THE RIVER. FIVE MINUTES AGO I WOULD HAVE LISTENED TO REASON. NOW IT'S TOO LATE. GOOD BYE!
TRA LA LA'
WELL GOOD BYE. KINDLY SEND MY MAIL TO THE GENERAL DELIVERY. IF YOU WANT TO ASK ANY QUESTIONS MAKE IT SNAPPY BECAUSE I'M IN A HURRY.
I'LL DROP YOU A LINE NOW AND THEN. GOOD BYE!
RAIN! A LIGHT DRIZZLE BUT STILL RAIN. AND I FORGOT MY HAT, TOO.
BACK SO SOON?
FOR AN UMBRELLA, THAT'S ALL. THAT BIG BLACK ONE LEAKS BUT A LITTLE RAIN WONT HURT ME. WHY WORRY IF IT DOES?
WELL, GOOD BYE. IF ANYTHING TERRIBLE HAPPENS YOU'LL FIND MY INSURANCE PAPERS IN THE TOP DRAWER OF THE FRONT BEDROOM BUREAU.
IT'S STOPPED RAINING. I FORGOT MY CLOTHES. WELL—HA, RIP VAN WINKLE! MY STARS, YOU WERE GONE A LONG TIME! TWO MINUTES!
LISTEN, KINDLY DO NOT RAZZ ANYBODY AT A VERY SERIOUS MOMENT LIKE THIS. I MERELY CAME BACK FOR MY CLOTHES.
WELL GOOD BYE AND GOOD LUCK!
OH, GEORGE BUNGLE DON'T BE SO SILLY. COME IN HERE AND SHUT THAT DOOR. ALL THE NEIGHBORS ARE WATCHING YOU.

HA, HA, YOU LOOKED SO FUNNY— EVERY TIME YOU SAID GOOD-BYE. YOU KNEW VERY WELL THAT I WOULDN'T APPEAR SO UNCONCERNED IF I THOUGHT YOU WERE REALLY LEAVING.
ABSOLUTELY! AND YOU KNEW THAT I KNEW YOU KNEW I WASN'T LEAVING. ESPECIALLY ON THE THIRTEENTH OF THE MONTH. OR IS TOMORROW THE THIRTEENTH? OR YESTERDAY? WELL ANYHOW IT DOESN'T MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE NOW.

WELL, DADDY, EVERY NAME MUST MEAN SOMETHING - I'D LIKE TO KNOW WHAT JANUARY MEANS
OH WELL - IT IS NAMED AFTER A MAN NAMED JANUARY - HE WAS THE FIRST MAN TO FIGURE OUT THE CALENDAR SO THEY NAMED THE FIRST MONTH AFTER HIM

AND "APRIL" MEANS "TO OPEN" - THAT'S WHEN THE EARTH OPENS UP AND THE BLOSSOMS START - THAT BRINGS FRUIT AN' EVERYTHING
AN' DO YOU KNOW THAT "JUNE" MEANS "YOUNG", THE MONTH OF GROWTH - PROBABLY THAT'S WHERE THE NAME OF JUNIOR CAME FROM - YOU DIDN'T EVEN KNOW WHAT MY NAME STANDS FOR I BET
AN' "JULY" WAS NAMED AFTER JULIUS CAESAR, WHO WAS BORN IN THAT MONTH - EVERY MONTH'S NAME MEANS SOMETHING - MAYBE YOUR PAPA TOLD YOU WRONG

NEGRO WOMAN SURRENDERS, DENIES PART IN KIDNAPING

Frieda Robbs Says She Did Nothing More Than Attend Conference Which Led to Return of Orthwein Boy.

ABDUCTOR LIKELY TO GIVE UP TODAY

p the Orthwein automobile at the

he kidnaping of his 13-year-old on, Adolphus Busch Orthwein, was n afterthought when it was found he only other occupants of the car, chauffeur, had only $4.50.

The kidnaper, Charles Aberathy, gave an interview to a

was quoted as saying he would su ender, asserting that robbery, an ot abduction, was his motive f topping the Orthwein car, but th e decided later to keep the Ort
